I already had a thread on this with approximately 70 replies to it. Redundant post?

However, I still like it very much!

Oh wow. I totally didn't see that thread truthfully. I do apologize.

I know, you are a very high quality user I see eating up some minnows here and there. ? It is totally fine, anything to get that word out there! Many people dislike the GUI just like Windows 8 v. Windows 7.

Not quite sure why honestly. I think it's probably the greatest move they could have made. Especially at this time and age. Makes more users interested in my perspective.

Appreciate your kind words also ?

It looks like a rogue antivirus now.

It just looks like all the old rogues.

And the way the notifications just pops up, just makes it feel like one of those rogue antiviruses, imo. just like how rogues constantly pop up with those try-to-be-fancy notifications and tell you how your computer is at risk.

Anyone who has been infected or dealt with them, can probably relate.

But other than the looks, theres really nothing wrong with it. Malwarebytes if the best anti-malware ever to exist.

I like the new UI, but I'm not sure how much has been changed internally. Still, very interesting.

Do you know if they've released anything on the internal area yet? That's the area I'm more interested in ?

I can tell you from my current experience from the software:

Scanning and updates do not crash with (Not Responding) while moving the GUI.

Scanning has included Rootkits scanning

Scanning within archives and utilizing the option of Shuriken

Installs and scans in Safe Mode.

Chameleon technology resists malware attack.

Excellent results in malware removal lab tests.

You can view the general settings and that is all that has changed, you can do more research too.

I am digging this new update. It seems to be pretty amazing, even though it already was. I'm sure it's going to be pretty buggy, though.

I can't stand the new GUI. It's bloated and looks like these scamwares. Why ? Because you see everywhere a lot of options, but it's clearly written that you have to buy the Pro version in order to access them. EVERYWHERE in the GUI is mentions you to upgrade to Pro. Also, I preferred the old scans options.

tl;dr version : It became a scamware.
