This is a decent deal. Not an amazing SSD but better than mechanical.

EvanLB7 - April 3, 2014, 12:43 pm

PNY is a pretty reputable company. I don't like their USB's. I have never heard anything bad about their SSD's, might take up on this! Thanks OP.

Ehh, unless I find something good about them in the storage-department I would rather spend $100 for a more reputable company because if a drive crashes, I will be losing much more than $100. (Simply because I can't recover an SSD)

They are a very reputable company and have really came up in the world in regards to storage. I have 2 pny flash drives and one solid state drive none of which have crapped out on me yet

That is good to hear. I will do more research on them. I have heard about them before, but mainly their professional Tesla graphic cards.

Would you recommend the PNY SSD or this Kingston one? They are fairly priced.

The PNY has a 150MB faster read rate, they have the same write rate though.

Actually im wrong
PNY is alot better

PNY
Max Sequential Read
Up to 510 MBps
Max Sequential Write
Up to 320 MBps

Kingston
191MB/s Read and 142MB/s Write -For the 240GB Model

You're looking at incompressible data.
