Hentai? - April 15, 2014, 7:38 am

The old lounge was about to hit 2k posts and was glitching for some, so here is the new one. Same rules apply, keep everything anime related. The old thread is closed but will be left up for reference.

I hope we continue to have a good time. ?

I will start us off, I am part way through the first season of spice and wolf. I am enjoying it so far and hope it gets better. Looking forward to finishing this and starting second season.

tweety - April 15, 2014, 7:58 am

I just started GJ Bu today and it looks promising. The slice of life begins.

Omshivam - April 15, 2014, 8:11 am

I'm surprised the 2nd episode of the Shingeki no Kyojin OVA isn't subbed yet...I'm really looking forward to that. I thought the first episode was decent.

I'm thinking of finishing one of the anime that I've put off for a while: ?

Dragon Ball 52/153

Have to finish that soon.

Vamporno - April 15, 2014, 8:39 am

I started to watch Shuffle! again. It getting interesting. Also, Clannad is Life.

Yuki Kajiura is a fucking legend. Her songs are so beautiful.

Sort of paraphrasing from Koroko Connect:

very slight spoiler \(Click to View\)

In an episode all the friends are becoming lonely and depressed because they may hurt each other and basically someone says to them that humans always hurt each other but its up to friends to support and fix it. So even though friends are human and may hurt you (which has happened to us all I'm sure), friends will also fix and apologise.

Just a touching message for a pretty good anime. 8-9/10 for me.

So my question is how much people really enjoyed Black Butler? I tried to watch the first episode and by the time the episode finished I was sleeping. I don't find it "enjoyable" imo. Is it just the first episode that was bad and the rest of the episode good?

King~ - April 17, 2014, 5:49 am

So I got an Oculus Rift a few weeks ago and completely forgot to mention it. Sadly, most Japanese demos were disappointing but some (Suwako-chan Cubic, Hiyoshi Jump, etc) stood out. Illusion's demo seems promising, but there isn't much to do with it at all yet.

Most of the Japanese demos seem to be a Vocaloid singing on a stage (which gets old), but this was my favorite out of them. The voice is coming from her mouth and the music is ambient, which is a lot better than having the tracks merged (An the song was pretty catchy..).

I admit that the first episode kind of sucks, but the rest of the anime is really enjoyable. I'm at episode fifteen of the first season and it's great.

I know this is off-topic, but I'd rather get an Aurora Headband rather than an Oculus Rift. (look it up, imo it's really VR and not bought by a billion dollars company)

How is the Rift not really VR..

Also, I knew someone would mention that.. I think oculus is going to be fine and this deal has a ton of potentially. Oculus got VR back into the public eye and there are multiple other companies getting into the field. If oculus tanks (which I highly doubt it will), then others will be available to take it's place.

At the very least, DK2 and CV1 will be excellent.

I read the latest manga for Naruto and shit was amazing af.

Spoiler \(Click to View\) The part when naruto just throw the justus at Madara and he flys all the way to the tree. The shit that was crazy is how the hell Madara swallow the whole tree. Looks like he had some experience swallowing with hashirama. Also, the part when we got to see Naruto in his six path form and Sasuke in his six path form was just awesome. The only thing I don't like is how the six path form looks the 9 tails form with the cape/cloak looked way better imo. And we got to see Sasuke with his rinnegan combine with a sharingan.

Also, I saw the latest episode of Naruto it was a good episode but they could of added stuff.

Spoiler \(Click to View\) I like how we got to see a first person view of Itachi killing his whole clan. It was amazing but it only showed shadows of him doing it. I also like how there was a feel moment in the beginning of the episode. The thing that gets me mad is that Obito was stalking Kakashi and seeing him think of him every time and Rin but he still hated him. Also, I want to see some flash back on Rin and Kakashi. I want to see why Rin liked him and why Obito liked her. It can be a ova or a special. But other than that we got to see Danzo get threatend by Itachi ^-^.

Guilty Crown should have had more than 22 episodes, it had so many undeveloped storyline points such as the blossoming romance between Tsugumi and Daryl. Even the ending left much to be desired since it didn't touch upon what happened to all the other characters after the crisis with the Apocalypse Virus.

Same. Started it three days ago and am on episode 60. Could have been further if I wasn't watching other shows at the same time like Attack on Titan and Kuroko no Basket.

Lol no it's not bad. The story was good, obviously the art was as well and the ending was well deserved. I loved the VN. I just personally despised Makoto in the show for various reasons to a point where that was my main focus in the show. Looking past that I can't really say it was horrible.

Just watched the first episode of Another and I have a feeling this anime will be good.

I rarely watch horror anime but earlier, someone compared Mei to Rikka so I wanted to see what it was about.

I love that feeling that when you watch; you know that there's something wrong with the setting but you don't know enough to find out what it is. The music in the first episode and the character animations were really fitting to what was going on. It's great/creepy when they had that scared look in their eyes when they realize something.

Looking forward to watching the rest!

In the UK in a small town. Supposedly a few companies are getting rid of old stock cheap so they can sell them at that rate. Average of 6.99 per book so it turns a manga into 3.50 on average which is mint around these parts.

Unfortunately they don't have huge amount and its missing volumes, can start at 6, then miss any books up until 11, but I can fill the gaps as they get new orders in + I can order anything I want. :p

Spoiler \(Click to View\)

There wasn't any logic to why the calamity was happening or what actually was causing it.

Some of the deaths were ridiculous as well(as Gladly said previously), especially the very first one with the umbrella.

In the end, I didn't feel that they accomplished much aside from stopping the calamity after all those students died. Misaki could have told them from the start and those deaths could have been avoided (but it wouldn't have been as interesting of course). The next year's class has no way of identifying the dead person so they're left with a challenge.

Still great tho: 9/10

Sure no one brings umbrellas around that have knives at the top of them, but they can still hurt if you have one that has a spike on top.

Never seen Gosick so can't compare.

I think it fails most because people expect it to be a super mystery when it's not. It's a slice of life/mystery. It's more about character development and the small stories rather than the mysteries. It also has some of the best animation I've seen. Trying to remember back to last year but there is some solid romance too. It's a high 9/10 for me and would be a good watch.

Yeah, they really left the anime unresolved at the end since you don't really know for sure what happened to most of the secondary characters after the whole crisis was over and done with. The only thing that was good about the anime was the music.

It could be a different route of the visual novel, or it could be the same. I would guess a different route, but who knows.

The reason a lot of people are excited for the remake is it's made by Ufotable (the studio who made F/Z)

Watch F/SN if you want because it's meant to be seen before F/Z, but just know F/Z get's a lot better (The first ep of F/Z is pretty boring and long, but it's just setting up everything for the story)

Soon later he gets obliterated and gets reincarnated. Then it shows a scene where a girl is humming one of the songs from that "place" those guys were in. She resembles Kanade. Then a boy passing by hears that song then suddenly chaces after her but before he touches her the episode ends. The boy resembled Yuzuru.

Going to watch the 4th episode of Akuma no Riddle later today; I've been enjoying it so far. It's similar to Umineko where there are different story arcs. The first season has 4 (maybe 5, I forget) arcs, varying from 4 - 5 episodes to make up the 24 episodes. These are known as the 'question arcs' and correspond with games 1 - 4 in the VN series. The last arc in Season 1 starts the 'answer arcs', continuing through to Season 2, which correspond with games 5 - 8.

Each of the arcs starts off similarly and then as different things happen, the worlds start diverging more from each other. It might seem overly repetitive but it's great once you get to Season 2.

I've started watching too many anime...

Inu x Boku SS

Higurashi (My main interest right now)

The Melancholy of Haruhi Suzumiya (Got confused by the third episode.)

Witch Craft Works (Wasn't really impressed with the first episode, but I will continue watching.)

While I've had these on hold:

Dragon Ball

Yu-Gi-Oh

Yu-Gi-Oh GX

I just don't know what to do anymore.

I want to start watching Serial Experiments Lain but I think I'll finish what I've started first and then move on.

Are you watching Haruhi in release order or chronological? One of those is confusing and has no climax to the series depending on the order you watch it.

Also, drop everything you are watching and go watch Lain if you can handle it.

I honestly don't know what order I should watch Haruhi in. I watched the first three in chronological order but during the 4th episode I stopped watching because I realized that the anime had multiple orders that you could watch it in. ?

I guess I should continue chronologically because that's what I've started already.

It's such a great show, so long as you like romance/slice of life.

Also, I noticed that in a lot of anime, underage people will refuse alcohol, and don't ever seem to have house parties etc. Is this what it's like in Japan or is it just anime trying not to promote underage drinking?

Most anime is almost nothing like Japan.

Im pretty sure its not that they do not want to promote stuff like that but that they want to stay unique, thats what makes anime special, its not like other tv shows.

Don't quote me on this but I think drinking is considered taboo in Japan because it's considered rude to be seen drinking from a bottle (even water) while walking on the streets. Drinking alcohol would most likely only occur at celebrations.

Japan is a highly industrialised, and therefore Westernised (?) country with copious apartments. Most of your joe-average Japanese citizens wouldn't have the space to hold house parties, and if they did they'd probably be sponging off of their parents and wouldn't want to trash the place.

Japan is a highly industrialised, and therefore Westernised (?) country with copious apartments. Most of your joe-average Japanese citizens wouldn't have the space to hold house parties, and if they did they'd probably be sponging off of their parents and wouldn't want to trash the place.

Calling people by their first name is also a huge deal. ?
Drinking alcohol is not taboo in Japan but alcoholism is.

And if you for example buy soda from a vending machine, you are to drink it there then throw it in the trash can located nearby the vending machine.

It's probably like this just to keep the country clean.

It's here in the west that we think of it as normal, the west used to be the same before regarding this subject.

I watched the first season. When the second season came out, I rewatched the first and then watched the second. When the third season came out, I rewatched both the first and second, then watched the third.

Last month, I rewatched it again. In total I have rewatched the series 6 times. That's how amazing it is.

I really like the art style and SHAFT's "influence" (cool camera angles/cuts, for one).

I've only seen #1-#2 so far. It seems like a slow start where they're "laying the groundwork" for the story, but who know.

Kingdom is definitely in my top 5, no doubt. Not only are the scanlators pushing out 2 chapters per week, it never has filler, and if it did I didn't notice. Everything matters in that manga, and the best thing about it is the fact is won't end for a very long time.

It has had some fillers from time to time, but never like any other major manga. And yeah this will be minimum 500+ chapters (thats if they want to end it fast which they wont). The diffrence with this and other long manga is that they dont need to have fillers to drag it out ? Since the plot is awesome.

Yeah I can't lie about the animation at first I thought it was going to be some next level animation as it 2014 but it looked cartoonish. But it doesn't matter since it still awesome and I absolutely love the anime. I also, like how it comedy and fighting at the same time and I like the ecchi part. I also, like was when it was the beginning of the anime and it said Hentai in the bottom left when their was a perv moment.

I never heard of Trigger so I basically heard what people said. Most people said that Kill La Kill had great graphics. But tbh it doesn't matter about the graphic because the story line makes up for it.

TRIGGER (proper stylisation) was established in 2011 by two people who left Gainax. Gainax animated series like Panty and Stocking and Garterbelt, Evangelion 1.0 - 4.0 and FLCL to name a few.

Also, Guren Lagann and NGE, they animate some nice stuff. I'm not really liking KKK all that much so far (episode 8), but I hope Trigger puts more stuff out there.

You can mod it to use it for ddosing.

Ive modded one at home usually makes my net output around 5gbps and i got a 100mbps net.

The reason why you use a toaster is because it is spoofable, therefore outputting 50x the power.

You should mod one yourself, just google it in youtube, im sure you will find a simple guide.

Dude your toaster is weak mine can heat up a website within 8 hours that's completely faster then yours. Also when I charge me lazurr it does it in 45 business hours awesome right? Also!!! I modified it so when I turn it on it plays Guilty Crowns opening.

Mine would drop a website within a millisecond.

I can even amplify it more than what it already is.

I currently have the heat at 1, there are 7 levels.

Each level after 1 makes the power 10x stronger so its 5×10^6 .

So if i got it on level 7 i would output ~4500tbps, though last time i tried having it on level 7 and our city got power outage and had to pay a huge bill for it.

But now i have enough money to buy the electricity needed for level 7, so if you wanna fite me bro just pm me and i will purchase the warehouse with the electricity and then we fite.

I don't think its cancer or I never thought AA Weekly would bring back old members... I was just bored lol. I do want to really push AA though but instead of trying for old times I'm going to focus in bringing in new members with personality. All old members are known because they each have their own personality that is memorable, they aren't bland or boring. None of this generic bullshit, or any of this "I'm worried to post", just welcome everyone and those who're good will stay. So get good.

On that news, I'm going to be putting my energy into animeFAN and revitalizing it - Confused what I should probably do right now. Whether to lockdown and start again, or just kick off from before, but either way, I want it like old times. Times where you couldn't enter a thread without seeing a aF signature, or those deciated members who added [animeFAN] to their name. Reason for aF was to unite AA and now AA needs its hero back.

If you've seen other magical girl anime before, then yes. It's a great deconstruction of the magical girl genre, and the Blu-Ray version has amazing visuals with a unique style to it. Soundtrack is freaking brilliant (what else do you expect from Yuki Kaijiura?). I'd say it's totally worth the watch, but if you don't like it, don't just drop it at episode one, keep watching, because it picks up pretty fast. What do you have to lose, it's 12 episodes?

Watch a few episodes and then decide whether to give it a chance or not. I liked it because it was really unique in it's animation and art style but also because it's implicitly dark. There's good foreshadowing elements too.

It took me a few episodes to stick with it. It got boring at times imo.

You can support them in other ways.
For example buying merchandise or physical DVD's of what you like.

And you also support them even if you torrent the anime, because it will make the anime more known and you will be a potential buyer of their merchandise etc.

Not everyone has the money for a car, so does that justify stealing cars?

Oh, so there's alternative means of paying them. I can't afford a car with all the premium extras, so I'll steal that and buy the basic package, or maybe just buy some tires from them. That makes it moral, right?

I'm not saying don't torrent (I do it too), but it's an immoral thing and we all should recognize that. Don't try to justify it, and don't tell other people who want to pay not to. That's fucked up.

Happeh - May 17, 2014, 1:21 pm

Basically what King said - I dont mind torrenting if you're willing to pay for it. Buy merchandise, buy CR, buy the DVD's and torrent, but only buying that one plushie doesn't make it right to steal that thing people have put 8+ months of sweat and tears into.

Also, surely if you have money for merchandise (which is often a premium), then surely you have $8's a month for CR. Just don't buy a meal out one week, there, you have money for CR.

That's a retarded argument. When you copy something you take away money from the owners and production companies. If only 1 person watches Code Geass and a million download it - they only earn the money from one so they cancel the show and there wouldn't of been a second season.

Course there's better ways to support the industry, buying merchandise is ideal what we're arguing about is that telling people to download instead of using CR is poor ethics. Not only do they earn money, but it proves to the production companies that there is a market in the west.

Firstly i used that video to explain to him that you can not compare torrenting as stealing a car and you are wrong. When you copy something you do not take away money from the owners or production companies. Since Code Geass is a good anime, im sure 70% of the million that downloaded would like it, ~30% of those that liked it would buy things related to Code Geass and 5% of those 30% are hard-core fans that would buy loads of Code Geass shit.

So no, the show wouldn't get cancelled and what you use as an example is impossible. Unless they wanted that only 1 person will be able to watch it legitimately.

Downloading instead of using CR is not poor ethics, if not all those who download the torrents then the anime industry would lose REALLY much on it.

If not all those who torrent and stream crunchyroll wouldn't even be founded. Only reason it was founded was because they knew that anime would sell in the west.

Guess how they knew it? Ofcourse because of all those who torrents and stream anime.

Everyone who just watches anime, no matter how they watch it (torrent, stream, crunchyshit etc) they all contribute to the growth and spread of anime.

Of course they lose money. How can you be so naive in thinking otherwise. If you copy an episode, a company loses the money they would of earned if you had bought it. And of course my example is impossible, it's an extremity of the situation, a situation that does exist. Take Deadman Wonderland for example, was extremely popular online but sold poorly in Japan. If people were willing to spend a little on buying we could of had a second season.

I don't see where you're getting your facts from, it was pure evolution that we had streaming sites. People rented videos and DVD's constantly, imagine that ease online, boom, Netflix. Stop talking out of your ass for more than two seconds.

Also I never said anything but growth, all things help growth but that doesn't mean you should just torrent. There's a difference in growth though in tormenting and giving money to produces. One obviously helps more.

Or they could be making 100% profit for their work. If you want to watch the show, you purchase it (ignoring TV broadcasts).

The 30% that buys merchandise is fairly negligible. It's indirect revenue (if they get any at all) through licensing, etc. It's 3rd parties that create these items.

Take the Touhou games created by Zun for example. There is a HUGE fan following of the series. The creator just makes the games (music, art assets, etc), but there HUGE amounts of doujin works works such as manga, music, stories, art, etc based on the series that are sold. Zun allows for this as long as some basic guidelines are followed (http://en.touhouwiki.net/wiki/Touhou_Wiki:Copyrights#Copyright_status.2FTerms_of_Use_of_the_Touhou_Project).

So let's say I want to purchase a Yellow Zebra album because it has the song Hoshiiro Yozora on it (<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ozovD1X8zCw>). It's a derivative of the song "Love-Colored Master Spark".

I can't buy this album and then torrent the Touhou games claiming that I have supported the dev. None of the money has actually gone to Zun.

Let's imagine that his license says that 50% of the profits on all derivative works must go to Zun. Think of this as a second source of profit entirely. Purchasing one or the other does not mean you have the right to take the other for free.

Are you kidding me? Using an Netflix as an example to why Crunchyroll was founded?

Obv Netflix would be a success since American movies/series sells almost all over US and Europe even before the streaming/torrenting. While anime was mostly only sold in Japan and was barley known outside of Japan if you compare it to American movies/series. But still anime was known in the 90's (outside Japan) but it was mostly thought that its aimed for kids but thanks to torrenting/streaming that came later anime expanded in the west.

Do you really think they would create and invest in something that has a high low chance of success? No they would not ofc, but thanks to torrents/streams anime got known in the west.

And as i said, by not buying crunchyroll you can save money to buy other things related to the anime which will help the producers.

And yes, even buying merchandise helps the producers because if none buys the merchandise it wont be sold anymore but if many people do buy the merchandise they will pay more to the producers to be able to sell more merchandise. Unless that they do not have to pay them to be able to produce and sell the merchandise. Im not sure how that works tbh, i might be wrong about this (merchandise) part.

And i do listen to others reasons, but i dont find them to be right, everyone has different POV. From your POV its obvious that you have $8 to spend monthly and it wont really hurt your economy while for many others it will.

And i still remember that you just ignored me and never recommended me anything. I dont see why you were mad when we were just arguing, arguing is not fighting.

(May 18, 2014 09:33 AM)Black Hole Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Torrenting is bad, mmmmkay?

So get a fucking job and buy your anime so we can have multiple seasons of good anime you fucking twats.

Nah its not.

And when i do get a job and i will probably buy lots of stuff that is anime related, but never Crunchyroll because i will watch it on TV instead.

Just caught up with the Zetman manga, its really good.

Its like a super hero comic but made for mature audience.

(May 18, 2014 09:30 AM)King~ Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) So you're saying that by illegally downloading the anime, you're helping them? You think if you went to the studio and told everyone you gave all your friends a download and they enjoyed the show that they should be thanking you?

Yes i do help the producers and the whole anime industry and no, i dont help it enough to deserve being thanked for it.

And read this for example

<http://torrentfreak.com/piracy-doesnt-hurt-game-of-thrones-director-says-130227/>

No matter how you watch something you will ALWAYS help the producers but the only thing that makes it different is how much you hurt them. If for example you steal a anime dvd from a shop, they might buy less from the producer next time or none at all since they profited less than what they thought. But if you torrent all you do is lowering the chance of a "possible" buyer actually buying a(the) anime.

So by torrenting you just lower the chance of something already less than 100% but then you spread the anime and HIGHER/lower (depending if you liked it or not ofc) the chance of supporting the producers.

Overall a good anime in my opinion. It's definitely worth a try if you enjoyed watching Animes such as: Sword Art Online and No Game no Life.

God damn it, I got far too many Animes that I've dropped like this. I'll get to giving this Anime another shot sooner or later! I'll tell you what I think of it then.

If I remember back then it was probably because the MC being a girl and this weird mansion with that creepy family and then I just lost interest for some reason. I don't have that much against Girls as Main characters either I just didn't like the mystic mansion as it was far too creepy for me at that moment. (This is 1-2 years ago btw)

Exactly once I saw the part where she was going towards the mansion I decided to drop it lol. The MC doesn't matter it's just the character design and story plot that made me hate it. I also want to give Blood+ a chance but idk.

I currently watching Black Bullet, No Game No Life, and Golden Time. I'm kinda disappointed at Black Bullet and No Game No Life because i would of thought that they would already finish the episodes and start making season two but they are still in the 1-10's. But I can't wait until SAO2 comes out.

No Game No Life started airing April 9th, and one episode per week (for a total of 8 so far). Having a season two this early on for any show would be a miracle of some sort ?

I think it's like this because the Manga hasn't gotten that far in the story yet.

Well it's sad that they're only going to be 12-13 episodes though. We might get a second season for both of these wonderful Animes later on. So you shouldn't worry, seeing as they're both pretty popular series I think there's a pretty big chance of them both receiving a second season in a year or two.

Yeah but I think that they should either have fillers in the episodes or they should of start making the manga before they made the anime itself. It would have been better for the viewers.

The story itself (Light Novel) might have gone somewhere. But the Anime is taken from the Manga and the Manga hasn't progressed that far yet in No Game no Life. Well, they have gotten somewhere but clearly not enough for 25 episodes.

Well long story short: There are currently 6 volumes within the Light Novel, 1 volume of the Manga and 12 Episodes of the Anime inside of Japan. That's not long enough to receive 25 episodes.

Light Novel > Manga > Anime

The Light Novel is the original story which isn't completely alike to the Manga as they have some difference between them, it's also a book.

The Manga is a Comic book and is the one currently being adapted into to the Anime, and we currently only have 1 volume of the Manga inside of Japan. So 12 episodes is all they can give us for now, x'D

You could probably purchase the Japanese Light Novel over the internet I guess? But it'd just be for show unless you can actually read Japanese.

EDIT: I just realised No Game no Life was adapted from the Light Novel, not the Manga. The Manga is far too long behind to have progressed this far and I just read around some places and it turns out you can adapt animes from Light Novels.. I didn't know that, my bad. x'D

There are urban legends going around on the internet implying that if you stay a virgin for 40 years. You will become a wizard..

Well, I don't think buying a few figurines would make you a virgin forever though. At least I hope so since I got some figurines myself..

Why a shield when you have dual swords? If you have that skill you can block anything with the swords also counter attack easily. :)

Because if the dual wield would have a block skill it should have a limit, and a shield can cover your whole body if its a big shield.

As much as SAO sucked it did have game mechanics. Weapon use was limited to class. You were stuck with whatever you specced into when going in. Which means no swap and pop of OP shields with OP swords on a skirmisher or DPS person.

It's "Date A Live" heres the synopsis about it:

Quote:Itsuka Shido is a high school boy. On the last day of the spring holidays, an explosion destroys the town and a girl in armor appears in front of him. Shido's sister-in-law, Kotori, tells him that the girl is called "Special Disasterous Designated Creature: Spirit", which causes a timespace quake. Kotori disclosed that she is the commander of the anti-spirit organization Ratatosk and orders him to go out on a date with the spirit girl. Kotori says, "I don't ask you to beat the spirit. Just let her fall in love with you and save the world."

So I thought the AA should make a week where we watch anime all day. But we can change the list below to something else.

Monday: Watch the first anime you ever watch.

Tuesday: Watch the anime that got you into anime.

Wednesday: Watch your favorite anime.

Thursday: Watch your least favorite anime.

Friday: Watch an anime that made you cry.

Saturday: Watch an anime that is ecchi or school life.

Sunday: Watch a hyped anime/modern anime.

Unlike IDOLM@STER, the storyline is actually sort of realistic. They actually show them failing at times and getting into arguments and working hard to achieve their goals. I also think Wake Up, Girls! executed this well.

The main reason I'm using IDOLM@STER as an example is because (in the anime, anyway) they seem to get whatever they want without much practice, and ultimately oversimplifies the whole Idol scene, while Love Live and Wake Up, Girls! show that it's not as easy to get big as it looks.

He has a good reason too.

Akira literally was one of the leaders in making anime popular outside of Japan.

But this one took the cake, I was drinking some water whilst I was watching this and then I saw the video and I got water all over my desktop.

Really that was hilarious. They also had some really L33T video editing skills on there, especially the flames appearing on the screen. (Or whatever that was for that matter.)

wtf..

Let's say that (hypothetically) a person 100% compatible with you exists on this planet. There's 7 billion people on earth spread across 196 countries. The likelihood of you coming across that person is insanely slim.

Add another person to the earth (in this case, it being your "waifu"), and the odds that they will ever influence your life in any noticeable way is also insanely unlikely.

There's a ton of problems with your question, this being only one.

I wonder if Trigun and Cowboy Bebop are similar in some way, I am 3 episodes away from finishing Trigun and it has to be one of good animes I have seen, really good plot.

Now, the main admin of myanimelist recommended for everyone who has seen Trigun should watch Cowboy Bebop, because these 2 animes bear some kind of an analogy.

So I am curious about what you guys have to say, do these two animes have an analogy ?

wtf..

Let's say that (hypothetically) a person 100% compatible with you exists on this planet. There's 7 billion people on earth spread across 196 countries. The likelihood of you coming across that person is insanely slim.

Add another person to the earth (in this case, it being your "waifu"), and the odds that they will ever influence your life in any noticeable way is also insanely unlikely.

There's a ton of problems with your question, this being only one.

Let's try to exclude that factor. My question was relying on what you would do if you found your "waifu" to be real, not whether you'd be able to find your "waifu" or not. Let's say that your waifu was the next-door neighbor to ease up the problems, what would be your reaction? Would you actually do anything?

So, a few things I've done over the past few weeks:

Finished the first season of Higurashi (still confused though). I'm looking to start the second season soon. While it was interesting, I got bored of watching different scenarios that don't reveal anything. (But that could appeal to some people) But it's like you're forced to watch the second season.

Finished watching Sora no Otoshimono and I thought it was brilliant. They didn't reveal too much about the angeloids in the first season but there's a second season so I'm hoping that'll reveal some more about Ikaros and Nymph's past.

Finished watching Danshi Koukousei no Nichijou. This anime was one of the funniest anime I've seen so far with it's simple but effective storyline. I also liked how it focused on different characters and their stories as well as the main three that you see in the beginning. My favourite parts were the ones where Hidenori is on the river bank reading and he's trying to think of deep things to say.

I'm really excited to see High School DxD come back for a third season. I really enjoyed the first two seasons. I also started reading the light novels but then stopped for a long time; now it's difficult to find the place where I left off. :/

I started watching Yahari Ore no Seishun Love Comedy wa Machigatteiru. Watched three episodes and it's kind of similar to how other anime start:

- >MC isn't happy with anything
- >MC joins a club
- >Makes friends
- >Improves life

but it's still interesting to watch. I'm looking forward to watching more episodes of it.

Going back to DxD, does anyone know when it will be out? I tried to look but there isn't a date anywhere that I've seen.

Higurashi gets better in season 2. I wasn't overly excited to start it but by the end I was hooked.

There is a second season for Sora no Otoshimono and I think they do talk a bit about Nymph's past, but I saw it so long ago I forget the details. There's also a movie that replaced the third season I think.

I still haven't started DxD NEW because the ending of the first season was just so bland for me that I didn't feel like it should have even continued.

OreGalru is basically a better version of OreShura since the characters aren't just swooning over the MC for the whole season, but it's got the other aspects of OreShura that I liked.

Also since season 3 was just announced, I doubt they'll have a date for it anytime soon. They announced a KanColle anime last year when I was really into it, but kept delaying it and withholding the airing date until really recently when they announced it's airing next season (for now, at least). I'm not too keen on KanColle anymore but I'll watch it because Nao Touyama <3.

I admit, it was enjoyable, at least while it lasted. I do also feel some people go a bit overboard with using Kirito and Asuna's name as usernames for the Playstation and Xbox. It's not as hype as they make it.

I'll be sure to check out the second season, when it comes out. As they say, don't knock it until you try it. It all started with .Hack, where people went into a virtual world and what not. I'll probably always like that better than SAO, although people are into "darker" plotted anime with serious moments, of course with comedy here and there.

I really liked it. Holo was a great character, pretty unique setting that not many anime explore, and the bond between Holo and Lawrence feels very genuine. Only issue was the slight change from handing the series over to another production studio, but this did not really make one season more enjoyable than another. So, what do I think? I think I want another season (this will most likely never happen).

I finished Bokura wa Minna KawaiSou, Ryuugajou Nanana no Maikouzin, DAL II, Robotics;Notes and Madoka: Rebellion recently. I'll get around to doing reviews on some of them after my last exam tomorrow, but for now I'll have to say:

Bokura wa Minna KawaiSou: getting there/10

Ryugajou Nanana no Maizoukin: getting there/10

DAL II: predictable/10

Robotics;Notes: all of my yes/10

Madoka: Rebellion: Homura did nothing wrong/10

Yes, yes it is. You may not like it the first episode or so, but keep watching. It is very dark for a magical girl show, and the animation in the Blu-Ray is gorgeous, not to mention the soundtrack is made by a fabulous composer. Definitely one of SHAFT's best works in my opinion.

Oh man oh man don't get me started on the real voice covers in Mekakucity Actors. The one in ep 3 was fine, but I really hated Ep9. Ayano's theory of Happiness is my favorite IA song and they just got people who can't put their heart into it. IA's version sounds depressing as fuck.

As for Lost Time Memory, IA's version is epic, really, when she adapts this dark tone and when she screams when

Spoiler (Click to View) Shintarou 'kills' himself

, something the real voice covers couldn't do. Look up the nico nico chorus for any of these songs you'll find that IA songs are better.

Oh man, I'm sure they're going to make an OVA and put Outer Science with some shit cover. They made the best decision with Moon-viewing recital, you know when

Spoiler (Click to View) You can hear Momo singing and everyone going at where they are

The anime stays awesome but it would have been great if they used more IA songs. Sorry if my opinion is a bit extreme, but I'm a diehard IA fan concerning Kagerou Project days. Although the dudes who made the cover of Lost Time Memory did very well, I applaud them.

As for the OP and the ED, I like them, they're alright. Especially the OP

Yeah you should start watching Blade and Soul again since there a lot of feels and a plot twist. Also, I'm pretty sure there going to be another season of Black Bullet and No Game No Life since it popular right now.

There's a game coming out for SAO? Blade and Soul has been out for 4 years now in KR, but it will be making it's release in the western hemisphere this year in 2014.

For action, check out Kyoukai No Kanata, it's finished and I liked the fighting animation. Noragami is also a good one, they are both short 12ish episode anime.

Date Alive is both funny and action, but it's more of in the harem category. Nonetheless, I think this is your best choice. There's two seasons, both which are worth watching if you like funny AND action.

I've been waiting for the oculus rift + SAO killer combo. The game will sell out insanely fast, I'm betting on it.

I also would preorder the game 6 months in advance because I really want to play a version of that.

Well I'm pretty sure the Oculus Rift cost $350 and the game should be around $60-$80. Which together will be around $430. Also, I think it going to be in a bundle since not that much people have Oculus Rift. I'm pretty sure the concept is based on the anime but it going to be an MMO I think.

I kinda hope for it to be an MMO but it wouldn't be that bad as an RPG either in my opinion.

I wonder if you'll be able to customize your own character or simply just pick one of the Characters in SAO? Well it depends on whether it's a RPG or MMO I guess.

It was pretty decent. It's not a masterpiece, but I definitely enjoyed watching it; however, like most shows I see, I don't think I'd watch it a second time. I'd recommend it to you if you are into history, since much of the plot revolves around historical events that occurred in Japan during the Sengoku period (with a twist to them).

Clannad is life, watching season 1 & 2 was emotional and heart warming and shuffle was one of the first few anime's that got me hooked. Shuffle is such a great anime :) watched it twice (Jun 27, 2014 04:53 PM)crazyycast13 Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Meh. It had a promising start but It hasn't really gone anywhere with the main character's stories. Instead, it delved way too deep into side character's stories and I have been considering dropping it.

It depends on what manga and personally I've never read Girl The Wild's manga but some anime's have more then 100 chapters and it's great to catch on and stay on track then be off track and not up to date. I read manga on my free time though and i only read manga when i want to see what else happens in the anime, i rather read manga rather then watch some episodes cause sometimes they cut some parts of some chapters.

Trust me Shuffle is crazy but for some reason i thought it would be bad but then in the middle and the end is where all the drama starts and ends obviously but its a really chilled and some what high paced anime at some points but i think you would enjoy it :)

Might watch Shugo Chara since it look like a good anime with 100+ episodes. Also, I finish watching Kanojo ga Flag wo Oraretara and at first it was slow but then slowly I started to learn the concept and started to like the anime a lot. A lot of crazy things happen and a plot twist in the 12 episode. Waiting for episode 13 to come out to see what happen.

would always flirt around with other girls in front of her.

The thing about about her was she reminded me of the mc chick from Toradora which is a good thing, yeah she got pretty annoying and people were cheering for the princess or the maid :P

May/may not contain spoilers:

Spoiler (Click to View)

This is one of those rare cases where it did for me. Louise's tsundere attitude got so annoying. You'd think that after the whole ordeal with what happened during the second season (fight with 70,000), Louise would treat Saito differently. Yet it still goes along the path of "How far would you go for me?" with Louise still not being able to understand Saito's feelings for her. It's as if their romance story went absolutely nowhere, and they're stuck in the same damn "base" as they were in season 1. At first, I thought of Louise being a tsundere; however, after the first few episodes of season 3, I came to conclude that she's just a tsun. Most tsunderes obviously warm up to the MC (Taiga). I didn't see this at all with this series. I thought I could sit through season 3, but I just couldn't stomach it anymore. If Saito's pervertedness and Louise's mistrust of him is a running gag in this series, it's one that gets old, and fast, I might add.

Legit spoiler below, you have been warned.

Spoiler \(Click to View\)Hatsuna didn't fully melt when she healed Murakami.

As you could see before, Hatsuna was regenerating at the end of ep 12.

Similarly, she healed Kasumi in ep 13 by almost melting again

Also, the anime adaption is one of the worst adaptions ever.

Spoiler \(Click to View\)Kotori doesn't eject herself in the manga, the reunion scene of Kuroneko + Ryouta was done so much better.

Hell, even the fight between Neko and Mako was done so much better in the manga

On a side note, I'm running out of manga to read, what should I read? (MAL : <http://myanimelist.net/mangalist/programmargorp>)

The soundtrack for Madoka is honestly brilliant, it's on my list of top anime soundtracks for sure. Listen to this one, it's pretty interesting that Yuki Kaijiura uses a made up language (combination of Italian, Latin, and Japanese words) in some of her songs.

Yes, Yuki does that from time to time. Not sure if it has any hidden meaning, or if she just does it for a little bit of originality/flavor.

Out of all the Madoka soundtracks I've heard, Venari Strigas still has to be my favorite. It really changes my mood. Amazing.

Most of the series is different from each other accept a few of the games - for example FF13 has a few in its series following the same characters. You can play some of the older ones on PC.

FFXIV is different though. It's a MMO but one of the best around.

Never played FF3 personally, but most of them are good. I wouldn't start so far bag though if I were you. Many of them don't age too well. Try FF7 - or even the new FF X/X-2 HD remake. X was a very good game, X-2 not so much.

If you haven't seen Deadman Wonderland, I'd recommend you watch that. It's similar to Mirai Nikki in terms of the MC getting plunged into a reality that he doesn't want. It's shorter than Mirai Nikki; Deadman Wonderland is 12 episodes.

Here's the MAL link so you can read the synopsis:

http://myanimelist.net/anime/6880/Deadman_Wonderland

If you're looking for other anime similar to Mirai Nikki, you might want to check out some user recommendations on MAL:

http://myanimelist.net/anime/10620/Mirai_Nikki_\(TV\)/userrecs/userrecs)

Also out of the user recs, just my personal opinion, you should go with Deadman Wonderland or Elfen Lied if you haven't seen it already.

Good luck finding something!

In 1080p the movie gets the name 5 wallpapers per second.

Just searching 5 cm/s on HF shows a lot of posts about it. The movie is a must see.

Watch it now.

It won't make you cry, but has a lot of feels and is depressing. Best seen if you have had a long distance relationship before.

[injecting some cynicism here]

Glasslip was cool, but extremely disconnected and (as pointed out by Barrier) appears pretty low budget with all the still frames. I know it's animated by P.A. Works, but it just doesn't look anywhere near as flash as other anime they've produced like Tari Tari and Hanasaku Iroha.

Tokyo Ghouls not really up my alley, most likely because I'm not really into the supernatural zombie/ghoul genre.

Totally get what you're saying but I think they really do it in a nice way. It's nicely and artfully done and what leads me to think this isn't low budget is just the general animation quality. Its better than most - such as the train scene during the beginning.

Otherwise the character design is so-so. Nothing fantastic. Music seems top so far and the scenery is great. I'm looking forward to it and the drama it will probably unfold.

What did you guys think of this series?

I finished the series, and loved it it was a suprised one for me outside of Soredomo Wa Utch and Mangaka Assistant. I'm really hoping for more season for all 3. I doubt Soredomo will have 2nd season though, it ended pretty well.

It's about a guy and his sister who are kind of geniuses and they hate the real world because according to them "it's a crappy, boring game" so they're teleported to another world where everything is won and lost by games. Kind of like Mondaiji-tachi ga Isekai kara Kuru Sou Desu yo.

Currently seen this season:

Free! - Classic Free! again. Looks fun and interesting.

Ace of the Diamond - Followed on from last season. Still as amusing as ever, though they take their time with these games.

Sword Art Online II - YES. ITS BACK.

Haikyu! - Fun little volleyball anime. Enjoying it.

Baby Steps - Weird character designs, but fun underdog tennis story. Also hints at romance. GG.

GLASSLIP - Super cute designs and obvious foreshadowing to a big love triangle. Cant wait.

Locodol - IDOLS? IDOLS!

DRAMAtical Murder - Some weird cyber, death game. Looks interesting, though not my thing. Will watch a few more episodes.

Monthly Girls' Nozaki-kun - Actually had me laughing a few times. Cute character designs with an interesting love story.

What I want to miss but haven't got around to yet:
Tokyo Ghoul

I am. First episode went by so quickly that some things didn't make sense...

- >Final, "most important exam they'll ever do"
- >They're the only people that pass
- >Everyone graduates at the same time
- >Implied no re-sits required

- >Gets told not to do anything reckless
- >Entire team does something reckless
- >Says he's going to report the incident to the academy
- >Next day they graduate as Public Security members

Err...okay but that's not how life works.

Also first impressions of Summer anime:

Glasslip: Not sure where this is going to go, but episode 1 felt pretty lighthearted yet confusing. Hopefully they clarify things in the next episode.

SAO II: Just watching because everyone was shitting their shit about GGO, but I hope the producers learned from their mistakes on ALO.

Locodol: Yes.

Tokyo Ghoul: Not my cup of tea. I'll watch for a few episodes and consider after it progresses a bit.

Rail Wars: See above.

PtW:
Akame ga Kill!

Season 1 yes. Season 2 no. The main reason being that you expect some sort of story in Season 2 because there was quite a bit in Season 1, but then it's just endless fanservice with subplots mixed in (possibly at the last minute).

I doubt it Tbh. I heard they had a massive budget for the season (and you can tell!) but they didn't make enough back.

Also, there's two more volumes out right now in Japan and they've just started scanning the first, and it's only just got into new material. So if they do, it won't be for awhile.

Go watch the Kara no Kyoukai movies. Literally the best anime films I have seen to date. Gorgeous visuals, huge budget, brilliant music, and the action scenes are amazing. The 5th movie, Paradox Spiral, is in my opinion the best of them all.

The ending is like a huge "FUCK YOU" to everyone who watched it. I'd avoid it if you (like me) believe that the ending is paramount to a series.

Massive ending spoiler (no details, but the type of ending is exposed)

Spoiler \(Click to View\)

The ending literally makes it so that EVERYTHING and I mean EVERYTHING that you've watched up to it was for absolutely NOTHING. It's like going back to square one. The producers trolled the audience, which is why the score is pretty low.

Otherwise, I thought the romance aspect wasn't that bad, it was a harem (except the guy actually chooses a girl).

Massive plot spoiler:

Spoiler \(Click to View\)

I seriously can't believe Kuroneko forgot her memory at the last possible goddamn second. The entire (literally) point of the story was for our protagonist to rekindle the smoldering embers that were the (obviously) mutual feelings that both him and his childhood friend shared, and to find this childhood friend he lost and catch up with her. Unfortunately for him (and for us), the producers said "NOPE! SCREW YOU!" and made it as though he was never even a part of her life. I thought it wasn't all that bad, until the last like 2 minutes of the show. It literally made me start yelling at my computer screen. Basically. She loses her memories when she uses her powers. Most of the time she loses trivial memories, but sometimes she loses important ones too (in this case, she forgot about him. Twice I might add.).

Ooooh okay. Hmm, yeah i probably wouldn't like it.

Spoiler (Click to View)

She was his childhood friend that was "killed" in an accident between the MC and her. She fell off a dam I think but then she survived and was made into a witch with her sister. She lost all of her memories due to her power she didn't even know she had a sister which was terrible. Also the most horrible part was that she lost ALL her memories at the last episode which was complete BS.

Good memory I guess. ? The recaps at the start of episodes also help to jog my memory.

Since most of the ones I'm watching are currently airing I can also pace them out so I don't get overwhelmed with episodes.

I want an example of no eyes on background characters or I'm calling my lawyer, damn it.

Omshivam - July 14, 2014, 4:21 pm

So I watched the first episode of Zankyou no Terror today and it seemed like an anime that'll keep me wanting to watch more after every episode.

I found that feeling difficult to attain with some of the anime that I'm currently watching like xxxHOLiC and Watamote. I realize Watamote is a 12 episode anime which focuses more on the comedy aspect rather than the plot but I find the main character really annoying and it makes it hard to want to watch the next episode. xxxHOLiC, from what I've heard is a pretty good anime, but it starts off slow and that makes me put off watching the next episode.

Anyways, I was really intrigued by the two contrasting male characters in Zankyou no Terror, one being cold and the other being constantly cheerful, and curious as to how the school girl will develop and advance throughout the story. The animation, coloring, and art is really nice looking as well.

I like that the episode started off fast, then slowed down to introduce the characters, and then resumed it's speed towards the end. I think it makes it more interesting when an episode ends while something big is happening or is about to happen.

Looking forward to watching this series as the episodes come out!

I was then told that I'm also a kid. Why? Because I watch anime ???

The 10th grader told me that:

-I am obsessed with anime, because I make anime signatures

-Only 12 years old japanese kids watch anime

-That at least he doesn't watch anime so he's less of a kid than I presumably am. (I'm 23.)

So I told him that a lot of adults watch disney movies, that doesn't make them obsessed, and that a lot of people whether adults or teenagers watch anime, he just proceeded on to say "yeah there there you're right you're a very mature adult" which made me kind of mad because he's insulting everyone who watches anime.

If I like anime and use anime renders in my signatures, does it mean I'm obsessed?

I'd like to see how a 12 years old would take Elfen Lied, Blood-C, Hellsing Ultimate, Berserk, and that's only the beginning.

Sorry for my rant.

This happened to me a few days ago my family came to my house for a BBQ.. So then they wanted to check out my rooms and when they did they were shocked to see hundreds of manga, posters, nenodroids, body pillows etc.. They questioned me asking me if I was a kid since I love anime/manga which got me pissed off. They told me only kids watched anime. I convinced them to watch some anime with me and they loved it. Now my sister and my cousins watch anime. :)

Sorry for my rant.

Don't pay any attention to these people. His response already indicates his recognition that his argument was invalid but doesn't want to admit it. He most likely wanted you to elicit madness from his comment, so the best way to continue would be to not follow his leash.

I'm going to be brutally honest with myself. Posting in this section is the reason why I don't give out my HF username to the people I know who hack shit with me irl. A lot of the times I post here I wonder if I really should have started posting in this section. You guys are friendly and all, but the overhang is just fucking unbearable, you know?

One of the reasons why I first hated anime was because of their massive eyes. Just look at clannad, those eyes are beyond unrealistic. They are the stereotypical dinner plate anime eyes. Yet I hate that when people see a few things, it's to be assumed that the rest of the shows have characters with saucer eyes, unrealistic hair colors, very strange traits (indirect kisses for one, I could rant about that for a while), and are drawn like cartoons. Fuck you if you think what I watch is cartoons. I don't start bitching every time someone starts talking about "breaking bad" because half of the shit they do is completely wrong. I don't complain that the way they portray some gangs on tv is completely different from real life. I don't get pissed off when I watch "accomplished criminals" break into a house by knocking out the owner when in real life they would avoid the possible assault charge and instead use a bitch load of masking tape on a window, throw a rock at it, and then break in successfully.

But boy oh boy those explosion every second or horribly done comedy movies? Man those things are the best; they are the pinnacle of story writing. If you add in Linkin Park to the finishing scene on 120 minutes of explosions in 90 minutes, it's like you rewrote the bible that story is so good. But Phantom: Requiem for the Phantom? That has drawn characters. Even though every single assassination was done right (as in it would of happened similarly in real life) there are cartoons in there, therefore it's a bad show. Even though people get pulled out of orphanages to end up doing crazy ass shit for the mafia just like that show, the shows drawn so it can't be good.

And you know what? I've heard a lot of people talk about how good the Matrix is, or that other movie that came out in 2011 is, but do they know that most of the SciFi dystopian shows trace back their roots to Ghost in the Shell? Nope. But those same people do think that GitS stole the matrix sequence or whatever, even though it's the other way around. What about Steins;gate and the fact that its the only show I have ever seen where they actually explained the theoretical concepts behind time travel instead of glossing over it with a couple of buzzwords, which as a result gives off the impression that the writers of the show are either A) are too lazy to explain it B) are not intelligent enough to understand it or C) think that the average watcher is an idiot and incapable of learning something new.

What about Darker than Black, season 1? Why can't more people watch that before they start 'judging anime by its cover'. Why can't they watch shows such as Zetsuen no Tempest or read stories such as Eden: It's an Endless World to realize that there are things that exist beyond the scope of just shitty romcom high school shows which there is sadly a multitude of. Or what about 5 cm/s. Most kids don't even understand why the characters did what they did. They can't understand that feeling of loss, they've never known what it's like to write a long message to someone, and then save it as a draft, and delete it 'one day'. And why is that? It's because those same kids who go "anime sucks, it's all cartoons" haven't actually experienced enough to watch the real shows. 5 cm/s is better an anime than a real movie.

I think I'm starting to get off track here, but what I'm trying to say is just give anime a fucking chance, all right? It's not easy to hide the fact that I like watching some anime and reading some manga. I hide that fact better than I hide other things. And to the people who go "I love my waifu shes the best 3dpd 2dalltheway" you're just as bad, if not worse. You are the reason why the rest of us are automatically assumed to be fat neckbeards.

Don't even get me started on panty shots. That stuff automatically shuts out people who have never seen anime before, just because it's super creepy.

EDIT: I forgot to mention that the genre lolicon in general doesn't help at all either. The only reason why I can stand that stuff is because I've gone on the deepweb way too many times and stuff like that doesn't affect me anymore.

Fuck.

This rant went on for too long.

I'm just gonna drink some vodka and call it a night.

Never liked Clannad's style, so I don't have much to say.

The breaking bad of the masses is my Code Geass, the GoT of others is my FMA:B, I like to compare how people love watching series to how I love watching anime because TBH it's the same thing.

Close minded people will make all kind of stereotypes about people who watch anime, you can't do much about it, even though Steins;Gate is brilliant.

Darker Than Black, season 1? Shit, man, this is one of my favorite! Most kids think that anime is only for kids or social defects.

I'll do whatever I want because anime is already regarded as something pathetic. My skype avatar, my signature, my HF avatar, my tags on my dA are all from anime, I won't hide it.

2Ds are better than 3d girls, but that doesn't mean 3dpd at all, I still like humans lol

loli is life

It gets to the point where you have to mix and switch genres, you really can't just stick with Romance, it either gets repetitive or you have to wait for new season just to hope there is another good series. I know the feeling trust me, I'd kill for White Album 2 second season with correct ending + best girl.

Good lord, I've reported at least 15 of that guys posts. Maybe he should learn to use a forum because copying and pasting other responses is nothing more than attempt to raise postcount.

On a side note, so long as you're happy then do what you feel like :3 no need to feel bad about not watching anything.

Holy shit we are about to hit 5 lounges.

I'd like to say that the manga Velvet Kiss is good, ignore the title because it is a sienen and it was on my "should read list" until today.

9.5/10 it was a completely different plot (plots of both kinds), high school was never mentioned, and the characters weren't cardboard cutouts.

Ah I already read that.. The story was kind of great. I also did not expect that kind of ending..
