Thread: [\[WIP\] MyBB Theme](#)

Dolan. - April 28, 2014, 1:29 am

So I recently started getting back in to using CSS and I thought MyBB themes would be a good place to start again.

Currenty I've only really worked on a few things like the index page and the breadcrumbs, and I plan to make all the buttons based on CSS rather than clunky images.

I'm posting this here to get some feedback on my first theme so if you've got any I'd really like to hear what you have to say.

First half of index (header and a few forums): Spoiler \(Click to View\)

Second half (forums and footer): Spoiler \(Click to View\)

Breadcrumbs (Site name -> Category Name -> Subforum name -> Thread name): Spoiler \(Click to View\)

Update 1:

Changed the default PM notification to something that was visible:

Update 2:

Changed the default MyBB image for "New Posts" and "New Reply" with CSS buttons.

So, what do you think?

Wow really good job bro how much of that is CSS3? Nice color scheme and looks very professional :)

Very nice! Although, I don't like the background (wip, I know..) it's really nice!
Looking forward to seeing the final product.

Sincerely yours,
Malmoc

* Pillows would still suggest to change the default mybb forum icons.

Most of it is CSS3, I'm trying to use it as much as possible.

I'm trying to use as little images as possible and just get some CSS glyphs, but I haven't got to that yet.

Thanks for your feedback :)

Yeah, that's on the to-do list, but it's far from release yet.

Added a PM notification that is actually visible.

It looks like a theme from 2010, not feeling it at all.

It has potential but the colors don't match at all. The green for the links and the background both look bad with blue.

Looks alright.

Background doesn't correspond with your theme colors at all.
