Hmm, how many codes do you think this could get you in about 3 minutes?

I have a little method myself, I just want to know if this is faster or not.

Visualize - April 28, 2014, 9:11 pm

So this is just an alternative to the dot trick? I guess it can be pretty much faster since you dont have to CP emails

Well I used the google dot trick and it ran out of placements, so I would say it would be a little faster. Just make the word short like "air".

Visualize - April 28, 2014, 9:15 pm

Oh yeah this is hella fast. I just add a letter everytime, click confirm, back arrow, then rinse and repeat

You can also use 1 letter or number after the "+". This is quicker.

One letters or two are preferred for maximum efficiency!

I get this strange error when I try to do this with the M95MN code after I complete the form, anyone know whats wrong??

Transaction (Process ID 77) was deadlocked on lock resources with another process and has been chosen as the deadlock victim. Rerun the transaction. Uncommittable transaction is detected at the end of the batch. The transaction is rolled back.

Weebex - April 28, 2014, 9:26 pm

Yeah I get that too, I just delete my cache and cookies and it usually fixes that error.

I'm getting this also dude, they must have ran out off codes. people are probably running a script in the background to get loads of codes a second.

Nope. Don't even have to do that. PRESS THE REFRESH BUTTON, notice how I don't say press F5. When you click refresh it will say "Resubmit form", press "confirm" and then it should direct you to ThankYou.aspx, if not retry.

I take it the email is instant right?

Yandere - April 28, 2014, 9:37 pm

I keep trying but every time I do I keep getting this message. "Transaction (Process ID 66) was deadlocked on lock resources with another process and has been chosen as the deadlock victim. Rerun the transaction. Uncommittable transaction is detected at the end of the batch. The transaction is rolled back." ?

Lucid - April 28, 2014, 9:41 pm

Thanks for sharing. Got one code and tried a few times more but haven't gotten any more emails. This patched?

Weebex - April 28, 2014, 9:41 pm

If you guys keep getting that transaction thing error, go back to the front where it says enter code, clear your cookies, cache, form data, and fill out that form and you should be back up and running. Your going too fast so it gives you error.

Its not instant but close to instant, takes a few seconds for code to come in.

Does anybody know what this error code is?

Transaction (Process ID 95) was deadlocked on lock resources with another process and has been chosen as the deadlock victim. Rerun the transaction. Uncommittable transaction is detected at the end of the batch. The transaction is rolled back.

It happens every now and then and I have to keep on resubmitting.

I can deal with it, but I'd like to find a fix so I can get more codes, more often.

The script works I just need to generate a huge list of emails and run it through as a datasource as I was doing before to submit with.

I use imagetyperz instead of DBC in order to fill out the captcha field. The script saves the image, uses their API to solve it and submits the text to the form on Skittles.

That would mean you would have two things:

1. Credits on Imagetyperz because I won't let you use something that I pay for. I lose credits every time it solves a captcha.
2. You have your own list of 1,000s of emails for my script to run through.

Provide me with both of those and sure.

Imagetyperz is a service that solves the captcha and automates the process by solving it.

If you have an email list that is another thing because people here still haven't even figured out that much. I have given so many hints as to what to do it's unreal.

Again iMacros can do this for you.

The ones that provide you with the services that have 24 hour restrictions work for a reason.

Find a decent proxy list. Learn how to use them as a data source. Loop through them and extract the email that is generated.

I think the best bet at the moment is doing it through your own domain name, It's been said you get 150 per domain name.

Probably over stepping my boundaries here, but wouldn't it make sense for him to have 2 versions? 1 for himself & 1 he can release to the public? So maybe he needs a list for his 2nd version to test it out & release to the public?

kooper87 - May 1, 2014, 11:42 pm

Just a note for anyone having problems.

So I tested it out with hotmail accounts it doesn't work, you will never get an email.

Gmail works perfectly but you'll get that annoying phone number verification page.

Yahoo works perfectly, make as many emails as you want and you'll get the code almost instantly to your inbox, it goes to your spam folder.

Use google chrome (incognito window), after each time you do this close it and open a new incognito window.

Make sure to use yahoo.com ONLY. You'll get invalid email if you use yahoo.ca for example.

I'm sorry to interfere here, but if his is autopilot it would mean it does all the work all he would need is a email list.

I take it you have to pay for that DeathByCaptcha, because on your video it show your balance $3.88?

brandonmarks090 - May 2, 2014, 3:56 am

If you have a Smartphone, Just download the Gmail app. It never requires cellphone number verification to create a new email, and you can make as many emails as you want. And creating the email only takes 2minutes at most. Then just use incognito mode on your computer and go to the skittles web page and do the verification/signup process. Get the code, then close the window. Rinse & Repeat.

As for the Captcha, if you're too lazy to do that, then you don't deserve the codes.

<https://ssl.skittles.com/Registration.aspx>

Code: M95MN

Glad my method was finally recognized lol. It's not "that" slow, just put in random crap and keep pressing continue until you've created the email(might want to put in a password you'll remember though, so you can log in on your browser). Takes me 2minutes tops to get a code. Depending on how fast your phone & computer is I guess.

make sure at the end of the agent address you're putting "@mailimate.com" the original address doesn't have to be real, just put in anything.

Once you've completed the skittles page, go back to mailimate and click "check inbox" next to the new email you created.

ALSO, A big mistake a lot of people seem to be making is that they're copy/pasting the original address. You need to be copy/pasting the Agent address. (had to help quite a few people on skype with this)

Damn it sucks that Mailimate stopped working...

MonopolyMan - May 4, 2014, 5:37 pm

Earlier today when Mailimate was working I attempted to create numerous agent emails, around 500 or so, until eventull FF crashed and then whenever I try to log in I get this:

<https://gyazo.com/291aca1417270372c5721099077d2a88>

I've made different accounts since then and have only gotten one code to go through, and now like others I can no longer make new agent emails.

The weird thing is, why is Mailimate accepted but every other email, other than the real mainstream ones, accepted? I even tried using my own email domain with no such luck.
