I would love to test this out with Spy-net and NjRat, but my post count is crap right now.

Out of curiosity, how effective is the runtime fud?

I tried another crypter not too long ago saying the same thing and it was detected by Avast for being suspicious upon launch.

Hey,

I got this crypter about a week ago.

I am using Windows 8 and the crypter isn't working.

The application opens, but clicking buttons doesn't do anything.

When i close the application i get this windows error: 'Did this program work good?' or something like that.

(just giving some feedback ;D)

Greetings,

HeavyFrost

Do what you like but let people know you're just going to link them to a survey.

What in your terms is a 'trusted' member.

I've been registered for months, with 100+ posts and positive REP.

"Note: This plugin use a exe command line, you can find it opening the file "009.sv" with winrar and go to /_009_/resources/dll.dll you can extract it and rename to dll.exe, is detected by 2 antivirus Avast and Dr.Web you can mod it for make it FUD yourself.

Note 2: You can crypt the exe file with a exe crypter but the crypter need support command line, if not then will not work. Public cryptes don't support command line."

The same for me, no virustotal or other scan online which upload new viruses... Don't worry about that!
