Thread: Suspicious log out.

Ombra - May 3, 2014, 9:05 am

It's the second time this happens.

I browse hf by mobile, view other websites, when i go back to the hf page i have to enter my details again (it's not a fakelogin, page remains open between my mobile's tab).

Should i change my details?

This happens to me, all the freaking time and it's really annoying. I'm not sure, maybe it's because you log in from two different locations cause that's what I do. I use hack forums on my phone a lot.

I browse on my phone and PC a lot and I've never had to log back in. Make sure you tick Remember Me when logging in. You see the option when you hit the Log In button at the top (when logged out).

Check your recent login addresses. You'll only be signed out if the PW changes.

Because you're on mobile, are you using private browsing or incognito?

Those types of browsing will log you out every time you close and reopen.

I'm using the default mobile's browser without private browsing

If your cookies are being cleared or not saved for some reason, it can cause this.

Cookies are what keeps you logged in.

Never. Omniscient has stated that he is no longer considering it.

I am on mobile as well, and on private browsing mode. It neither logs me out when I change IP addresses (Wifi->Data), nor when phone is on standby.

The only time I have to sign in again is when browser crashes or when I swipe it up from multitask. If you are not on private browsing mode, I don't think it should ever log you out.

Private browsing may vary from device to device though. Maybe some browsers reset cookies once every hour or so when you are not browsing?
