But before the hacking part can begin, you first need to learn programming! =D

My brain is not good enough for that, i read it already, but dont you have some programs or tricks easy to use?

Niely - May 8, 2014, 1:54 pm

^Nope! :)

You could try some cheap things like booters, or easy brute-forcer. But if you only would do that you would be a script kiddie, not a hacker. :)

LOIC is such an example... It's 90% useless, but used by a lot of script-kiddies.

Salve to everybody,

It's not a real hack what I'm about to show, is my guess.

If you are in school network or in a internet cafe and somebody didn't log out while using chrome and saved his passwords. So you can right click on the password inspect the element and change in the line where you landed the type="password" to type="text" and voila you can read the pw.

that's it. I don't know any tricks else.. so I'm excited learning new ones.

oh well there is another thing what comes in my mind but it's very broken pieces in these rotten area what I call brain and I cannot guarantee it was working like this. What I can say is a method similar like this is possible, maybe someone else knows this method and wants to share it.

In windows there is a option you can choose between every ascii and symbols etc. There is one symbol what makes your text go backwards and doing something else but I wont remember what it was but it was elementary for the method to be useful. Something were possible like you made your exe look like a jpg with some effort. Renaming the exe from S.exe to Sexe.jpg or something like this. but before you made the icon jpg like.

Sorry I just can't remember it properly.

Greetings

Wat is an booter :P? and what is a brute forcer???

Niely - May 8, 2014, 2:01 pm

@xxJooker: Thanks for sharing! :) Could be handy for some beginners.

@Dowit: Read the tutorial. :P

A brute-forcer is a program that tries a lot of passwords until it finds the good one.

A booter sends a lot of packages to a server (website) until it gets overloaded and finally taken down. ;p

You should ask how many people are sitting on trial because of a "cool trick".

You should learn Batch. There some cool stuff you can do with it for a starter.
