Thread: [How to record your real-time Iphone screen \[NO JAILBREAK REQUIRED\]](#)

EthanX - May 12, 2014, 11:16 pm

Welcome to Ethan's Tongbu Iphone tutorial!

This tutorial shows you how to record real-time screen for NON JAILBROKEN DEVICES

This "trick" require Tongbu. Yes, I know it's sort of a pain because it's not in English but that's why i'm here. There might be better ways to do this, if you know one, let me know.

Tongbu also has other helpful features such as : Icon manager, sms viewer, contacts, and u disk to view files on your I-device.

Tongbu can also show you helpful information such as your warranty date, Serial numbers, model numbers, and IMEI.

Recording you're I-Devices screen.

I've discovered a way to "record" your Iphone screen and this does NOT require a jailbroken device.

This is for those of you who want to record your screen but can't jailbreak your device.

Note: You might need Itunes installed to do this.

What you will need:

Tongbu Assistant

Start by downloading Tongbu Assistant. (<http://www.tongbu.com/zhushou/>)

Press the Green button to download for windows, To get a mac download, There is a mac tab at the top.

After you have installed tongbu, You will be asked to plug your I-Device in.

Note: If your device is already plugged in yet Tongbu is still asking you to plug it in, try reconnecting your I-device, that's what I had to do.

You should now see something similar to this, displaying your I-device's name, Model and other information.

Refer to the picture above to find the screen recording software.

You should now see a live picture of your device.

I know it's slow but it's helpful if you are trying to make a tutorial using your iphone.

No problem!

Only problem with gameplay is the fact that it is really slow. There could be a way to tweak that up but I can't find it.

But it's better than nothing for non-jailbroken users.

If you're on iOS 7, I recommend using iRec instead. (currently still in development)

If you're on iOS 6, get 'RecordMyScreen' or 'RecordScreen' you can get them all at the website below. No computer needed.
