Your Halo legacy: I started playing Halo the day of release. I was exhilarated when my dad brought me my very first xbox and game, and played social slayer for the longest time, not knowing anything about competitive play. Soon after, I got level locked at a 36 in Lonewolves (2008). I then got into the boosting scene, the whole "make fresh accounts" scene, all of that (this was around 2010, after just talking with "good kids"). From then on, I've been running MLG (and would love to run with some instinct members) 50 high. My first 50 was in doubles, and I remember it because awesome! Halo has impacted my life because i've made some awesome friends. I've really had something to talk about in school, and I used to make montages in the 7th grade showing off to my friends how much of a sweaty nerd I was. It was awesome! I play Halo 3 literally everyday, like 3 hours+ (on weekends, oh boy...). I've been through myriads of accounts, too many, and I love helping people get 50s. I play with Naded sometimes, but usually I play with some other sweaty randoms like RhipeN the fag. It's funny to remember just 5 years ago I cared so much about getting a 40, but now I can run MLG with anyone :). Halo 3 is an awesome game, and I would really love to add this component to instinct.

Your Halo legacy: I started playing Halo when I was about 12 or so. I would play the campaigns on the Halo series and then in 2009 is when I first played online on Xbox Live and on Halo 3 on XBL. I played it all day everyday after school and on the weekends. It was my entertainment and my "true love". I have always loved Halo and will always enjoy it. I just recently stopped playing for about 2 months, but I'm back and will be on all the time.

Favorite map: Honestly Blood Gulch, for competitive play I probably like Midship/Heretic or The Pit.
Favorite playlist: Team Slayer and or Lone Wolves
Favorite Halo game: Halo 2
Your Halo legacy: I normally don't go all into detail on recruitment threads but Halo is a huge part of my life. It all started when I was around 8 years old so 2002. Halo Combat Evolved was out and it was my birthday I was really wanting to get a pokemon game for my birthday but my older brother tricked me into getting Halo instead. We mainly had lan parties and also played XBC when our ping wasn't too high. These were some of the best times of my life no joke. So thats how I first got into Halo. When Halo 2 came around we had it really early because we bought it from france. The game was in french but who cares we still had it. Halo 2 was awesome for me. But it also marks a very sad time in my life. It was when my best friend and role model was forced into the military. It was my brother I always looked up to him. But he left me one awesome thing, his xbox. I think we all remember what a bitch it was to rank up in that game. I specifically remember Ivory Tower bringing me to legit tears for losing. Not just losing, it was on my brothers profile. After I lost his rank I was like he is going to fucking kill me. He was not happy to say the least. Now comes Halo 3 it was good but didn't compare to Halo 2 in my opinion. Halo 3 is where I started getting really competitive. It is also where I got into host booting but thats a whole different story. After Halo 3 I got into Halo Wars. It opened my eyes to a whole new type of gaming. I loved it. I went back and forth form H3 to Halo Wars. Then Reach came out and I was so competitive when Highest Skill wasn't there I was fucking not happy. I didn't really get into it until one of my irl friends thought he was a hard ass and I had to prove him wrong. After I kicked his ass I played a few games online and I actually really liked it. I should have given it a chance from the begging. Next was the Halo Combat Evolved remake. This really got me into Halo Reach. Obviously Halo 4 comes out I buy it play the fuck out of it ect. I'm stopping this a little early we all know what Halo 4 is like... Any way now I play all Halo games i'm open to play any of them I own them all. Even if I don't get accepted feel free to add me I will play anything. Finally I have read all of the books. Pretty sure I have been following this from the begging I love Halo enough said. Thank you for considering me!

Favorite Halo game: Probably ODST simply because it was when i was more knowledgeable of the game

Your Halo legacy: Ahh jeez where to start :P i've started since first year of release halo impacted my life certainly in personal ways it helped me escape reality and built a gateway to my gaming life it was the first game i hardcored/enjoyed i use to play halo atleast 6 hrs a day from Odst to reach give or take Ofc it would be hard to repetitively play for 6 hrs a day but based off average and how much i currently play 0 simply because my xbox is broke but i'm hoping to get this fixed soon! the reason i'm interested in this sector is because just general chat of halo brings back good childhood memories

Your Halo legacy: I play Halo when a bunch of my friends are on; that way I have a team to play with. I started with Halo 2 and that game was a blast for me, when Halo 2 started to die I became a hardcore modder. After that, I got Halo 3 on the day it came out. I played Halo 3 a lot, and when this game died I became another modder for a while. Now i just play regularly when my friends are on.

Favorite map:

That would have to be a tie between Ascension and Beaver Creek.

I'm a big fan of smaller maps that usually have two bases on each side. Anything great for SWAT is great for me.

Favorite playlist:

SWAT is definitely my favorite playlist.

I'm also a fan of Living Dead when I just want to waste some time.

Team Snipers and Big Team Battle are also pretty fun.

Favorite Halo game:

My favorite Halo game is definitely Halo 2, but my most played Halo game would, by far, be Halo: Reach.

Your Halo legacy:

I started playing Halo around the time Halo 2 came out. My brother was borrowing it from a friend and I ended up playing it more than he did. I quickly learned that I was naturally very good at it. I would be on the top of the leaderboards almost every game and I would feel so accomplished with my life and proud of myself. I still remember one time when I was a child and my parents were split for a few months, I was at my mom's apartment and there were kids around the ages of fifteen to eighteen playing Halo on the porch, yes, the porch. I decided to join them and play a game and left them speechless as a nine-year-old kid beat them game after game. I never had much experience with Halo: Combat Evolved, but we did own the game and play it from time to time. I probably would have enjoyed Halo 3 more if I had enough money to buy an Xbox 360 back then, the only time I was able to play Halo 3 was when I went over to a friend's house, but he always wanted to play a different game. This caused me to be playing Halo 2 for pretty much all of Halo 3's lifetime. I got an Xbox 360 around the time Halo: Reach came out and I. Played. The. Crap. Out. Of. It... I spent two entire summers playing the game from day to night. I am now one of the best SWAT players in the world. I used to run with Online Dater (The Best SWAT player according to Halo Tracker) and plenty of other notable SWAT players. In fact, two of my friends in real life are also SWAT addicts and are amazing at it. Halo has been a HUGE part of my life. I play as much as I can still to this day and I would absolutely LOVE more people to play with! I've spent more time playing Halo than I have on the toilet.

Closing Notes:

Thanks for the awesome opportunity to join Instinct inxy ol' buddy ol' pal. I really, really, really want to find new people to play with and Instinct would be a great place to do that. I also want to see how good people are compared to me, as I'm sure there are other great SWAT players in Instinct.

(This is when I first started playing Halo: Reach SWAT and a perfection was a big deal. I admit, it was a little nooby as I was camping the whole time, but it's cool because it was on Christmas Eve. ? Also, it's the only video I have. I bought Bungie pro, but they canceled the service...)

Your Halo legacy: My memory is pretty awful but I'll do my best. Started playing Halo when Combat Evolved was released and I haven't been the same since really. Always played CE and H2 on split screen with my friends before I had XBL. Sadly I didn't play H2 online as much as I would have liked but I loved the campaign to that game. Halo 3 is where it all kicked off for me. The campaign was amazing, I can't even tell you how many times I've completed it on Legendary and got the achievements on numerous accounts, I know it like the back of my hand. However, the campaign was nothing compared to how the matchmaking impacted my life. I started out the same as I did on H2, split screen social with a friend until he finally got his own Xbox and Xbox Live. Anyway the more I played the better I got at it. Sooner or later I was on it for days. Now I'm not quite sure how this happened but I've met so many real life friends though Halo 3, it's crazy. These were Myspace days, remember haha. Like seriously I've met probably around 20 or more good friends who I know in real life due to this game. Not counting me being friends with their friends either. My new friends were also Halo addicts like myself and the more I played with them and against them the more I learned and the better I got. I miss the days where I would check my friends list and literally see all of them on Halo 3. I'm starting to write an essay here so I'll try to cut it down a bit haha. I ended up making a new account when I knew that most of my losses were from playing with bad team-mates. Got my first 50 in Team Doubles with a friend who I know in real life now thanks to Halo 3. He had a booster account I was on a fresh tag. Later on I got my Team Slayer 50, I don't remember much about that though. Few years and a lot of accounts and 50's down the line, out of all my friends none of us had a Lone Wolves 50, so I went for it and got it. I can remember getting so angry on the road to that 50. I had like 9 1st's on my 49 and it just didn't shift. Eventually I got it on The Pit though, I was buzzing to say the least. I've made so many friends and memories because of this game which is why it's my favourite game. I wish Bungie kept H3 for themselves so we could have had double-exp weekends etc still. Halo:Reach just wasn't the same for me without the BR in it, since it was my favourite weapon. It wasn't too long before me and my friends lost interest in it sadly. Halo 4, I actually ordered the H4 Xbox Bundle hoping for the best. It was an improvement on Halo:Reach in my opinion, adding the BR back in was a good decision. I preferred having to lead shots like in H3 though, but I guess H4 was a bit too fast paced for that if you know where I'm coming from? Anyway, I was a good player at H4, had a good K/D and was top of my team most of the time I played. I started to edge away from not playing it when I hit SR130 and my friends stopped playing it as much. I always ended up going back to Halo 3, it's just a fucking amazing game, the best on the 360 in my opinion, even though it was released 6+ years ago. Nowadays I play H3 a couple times a week or just when someone asks if I want to play it. I'm just hoping that the next Halo will blow me away like H3 did. Since it's on a next-gen console and 343 improved last time I've got my fingers crossed. I will see you all there anyway! I would have a lot of clips to upload but I've never had a capture card unfortunately. There should be a few in my H3 Gamertag "Fluxian" File Share though! Sorry if this was too long, cluttered or just boring haha! ?

Your Halo legacy:I started playing halo when Halo:CE came out. My mom was working at the mall at the time and my dad who lived out of state bought me an xbox for my birthday and was going to bring it down to me. My mom bought me Halo before I even had a console and I went spent time at older kids houses carying my Halo disc everywhere. (I was to scared to play alone, because the "aliens" scared me lol" There after I got H2 and played a lot against my brother and cousins and eventually got live and played with my friends in local tournaments and etc. Then Halo 3 came out when I was a Freshman in high school and I went no life for the first couple years. I currently got my own gaming setup and spend about 30 hrs a week playing. How has halo impacted your life? Well seeing as its really the only game I played growing up "Not including super nintendo and sega genesis" I get kind of depressed that my one true love has died down and I now sound like an old fart referring to the "Good ol'days."

Been playing since 2010, and I met a lot of people playing halo that have turned into close friends of mine which is why I never give up the game and only play this. I play about twice a day - if I have my buddies to play on, I'll play more. H3 is the only 360 game I play anymore and will continue to play until the servers completely shut off. After that, I'll be done with Xbox (Unless H2 anniversary is any good; or h5.)

Your Halo legacy: I started playing back when halo 3 first came out. Before this came out, I used to play halo 2, which I had a blast on. After Halo 3 came out, all of my (IRL) best friends started playing this game. I got addicted really quickly, me and my friends used to always have a blast. We used to run with big teams in matchmaking, play infection, and forge maps (back when it was fun). Then, a few years later everybody started to lay low on halo 3 while I was still addicted to the game. So I was left with hardly anybody to play custom games with for quite a while. I love this game, I couldn't just walk away from it, so I started playing matchmaking. After modding my main profile, it got banned. So I made more and more accounts, getting the rank up as high as I possibly can. I was so excited to get my first 50 (in team dubs), but I was boosted to it. So I started playing 50 in in dubs, and of course the other playlists I had 50s in. I got used to it, and got a lot better. After having over 15+ 50 accounts and hardly having use for them, I started EXP boosting and using my 50 accounts as quitters. I got my first 5 star general, which made me feel really good. (even though the exp was boosted) Then after becoming a social warrior showing off my 5 star, it got banned for modding, again. ? But I just knew that I had to stop modding, because I put so much time & effort into these accounts and this is what I am getting. So I stopped modding for a while, and just kept stacking 50 accounts and making TD/TS boosters which all worked out pretty good. Life caught up to me, so I was off xbox for almost a year straight, then I got back into it and by this time, it was 2013. I EXP boosted to my second 5 star account, because I had no patience to wait for 5000 exp to come by. Now to this day, I just like to play for fun, and play MLG 1v1s & watch streams.

Accept yo boyy circuit ;) <3

I never really played Halo 2 though, but Halo 3! I remember the first time I ever played the game, Which was in 7th grade at my buddy's Jack house. I fell in love with it right away, I remember my Mom coming to pick me up the next day and begging her to buy me the Halo 3 Xbox 360 edition. Once she bought it for me, I became a no life, I didn't go outside and play with my pals at all.

Favorite map: Guardian (H3), MLG Android (Reach) (Fuck Sanc, this is made by MLG Gametypes as well and is infinitely better), Haven (H4).
Favorite playlist: MLG for sure is first, Second is Infection/Living Dead (y'know it is fun, fuck all dat sweaty shit). Mostly a social player though, I only like MLG because of the settings and the minute competition.
Favorite Halo game: H2 Naturally but I only played it on LAN, so probably Reach (sorry you h3 fans).

Your Halo legacy: I have played Halo on LAN since back in '05, when I was getting groups of friends to play CE and h2. One time for a birthday party we rented a cineplex theater and played H3 for 2 hours solid on the big screen. In H2 I was decent, but it was only LAN, so idk. In H3 I was skilled, but haven't played in a year since I went to Reach so probably suck and will suck for the first few days. In Reach I am decent in MLG, I was OK competition for Formal, Impended, and all them. Not overly good anymore though, just an average MLG player. In H4 I was pro level for the first year of the game, and was 1v1ing the best and winning tournaments. However it is a terrible game, I never plan on picking it up again. I plan on purchasing an xbox 1 with H5 and going pro.

Also, In reach i beat the campaign (every mission) LASO and all of them except The Package on Mythic (Blind skull on).

Hope you pick me Inxy Binxy.
