I am not that much noob,and you can't get updates for software related exploit's in windows update and first of all you should get the latest news about the software exploits then only you will start looking for parches,I have also heared some networks have build defenses against zero day exploits too,I amlooking for that kind of information ,so please post some useful answers

Generally Microsoft release Security updates for Windows? www.microsoft.com should help you.

If all else fails, www.google.com

Which Linux distro are you after?

I'm not a noob either, don't speak to me as if I am.

it seems u misunderstood I didn't mentioned you as a noob ,you cannot get updates for software exploits like team viewer in windows update,first you should know there is an exploit for team viewer,then only you can try to find patches andupdates for that,I am asking about where to find the news ,tips,patches regarding latest exploits, hope you understood my question and I hope you will help me...

Then look on the Software's forums.

Do a vulnerability scan and test your system, download GFI langurad, scan your system...

If you are asking for patches, that is bullshit bro, there are no 'patches' as such for security exploits, only win / linux updates, or updates for security programs.

You can't patch against unknown threats lol... even if you have a firewall and use an AVG these will auto update if u have it set to that...

your question is not very though out.
