That was posted too. It's the same data that's on lukeclinch.com.

I'm not going to admire him for any "skills" he has if he just uses them to be a malicious criminal.

There is very little to admire about that.

~OMC~ and Tenaxium are both in it together.

If you don't care about this thread then don't read or post on it \(Click to View\)

Let's start of with this screenshot

[sp]

<https://hackforums.net/member.php?action=profile&uid=1983655>

I had doubts that it was him, but I didn't start from him.

I posted a thread requesting members to post their address and balance if they lost omnicoin from omc-wallet.com. I heard omniwallet was also hacked, but it seems they are trying to hide it.

For now, this thread mainly revolves around omc-wallet, and the kid that stole everyone omnicoin.

So from the addresses that were submitted on the thread I posted, I tried to track down where all the Omnicoin went. It was difficult because Alex's wallet system is very strange. People were sending money from everyone else's wallet and not only their own. Example if you just received 100 omc to omcaddress382728, your 100 omc would then be used by another user.

So instead of having your own unique wallet and sending with your own omnicoin, people were sending omnicoin from someone else's wallet on omc-wallet.com.

Then I finally found where it all went.

May 28-29 is when omc-wallet was hacked. The different timezones made it hard to trace the exact date.

All the stolen omnicoins went to this address.

obMsLkeN5pZ7ec3B9nU9N1soiYsf9YmKi1 with about 190,000 omnicoins sent and received

<http://omnicoinexplorer.com/address/obMsLkeN5pZ7ec3B9nU9N1soiYsf9YmKi1>

Let's refer to this screenshot of his wallet

Spoiler (Click to View)

Notice his transactions. Everything was normal until late 05-28 when he started receiving his first 6000 omnicoins then came larger amounts like 20,000 omnicoins to 40,000 omnicoins.

Total received/sent :190,000 omnicoins

Let's look up the address on google to see who owns obMsLkeN5pZ7ec3B9nU9N1soiYsf9YmKi1

The owner is ~OMC~/~Ruptured-

I found something else. May 29th, highest volume on allcrypt of all time. Volume= 70,000 omnicoins.

That's not necessarily a good idea. As the user owns a large amount of OMC, he can easily crash the price of the coin on AllCrypt. Closing the account may result in a grudge that may affect the price of the coin. My suggestion is to let him admit his mistakes, and send the money back to the community or to the developer team to redistribute the coin again.

djdirt - June 1, 2014, 9:23 am

AllCrypt is anonymous. As long as he doesn't sell ridiculous amount at once, he can clear the 190k OMC rather quickly. The coin has to be redistributed to the community.

Diabloo - June 1, 2014, 9:28 am

Even though that would be the most ethical thing to do, and I think a normal person would do that, he just hacked those coins to himself. I don't think if I'd hack something to myself, that I would come back with the coins.

Think on it like this: If some person wanting to rob a bank, robs a bank. How likely is he to come back with the money? I think the same concept counts here, sadly.

I would love the see the poor people, that lost their OMC's get them back, but I belive it's not very realistic.

He has shown that he wasn't willing to do this by first announcing there was a vulnerability, sadly no one bat an eye. I believe that if he was reasonable enough to post that warning, he will return the OMC back to the community. That's just my optimistic thinking though.

Idk the current value of OMC, but it's not worth a lot so it's not as big as most people would think. But they should send me 1337 real quick for the Omnicoin award. ?

I still don't know why people chose vulnerable online wallets instead of the QT. There have been numerous threads about vulnerable pools, wallets, other omnicoin site, etc. Yet you guys still use them. There's nothing bad about having it on the QT and not on some vulnerable online wallet.
~OMC~ even made a thread stating the wallet was vulnerable.

I just don't get it I guess.

There is no confusion. You were an accomplice in the heist. Sure your partner in crime fucked you over but that still does not get rid of the fact that you were an accomplice. You're both equally guilty. We'll see how certain you really are. I, and most of the people on HF, would most certainly would not be surprised if you are closed so I suggest you yourself don't be surprised too if that happens.

Anyone who leaves a single coin in a online wallet is stupid (Even myself, lost a whole OMC).

Essential everyone is blaming these two guys, but in reality its everyone fault in a way.

It's my fault for trusting to leave 1 OMC in it, it's tex & -OMC-'s fault for stealing it, even after they reported it.

As well its the sties owner fault for not fixing the exploit OMC told them about. :-)

I like how everyone is getting angry and mostly blaming tex and omc, makes me giggle. ?

I pull anyone's address, number, facebook, etc, just from their name. It's public information. And that's the least of your concern, you should worry about reimbursing the 190,000 OMC that was stolen because you were to greedy to report the exploit.

Kosmos - June 1, 2014, 3:06 pm

That's a real shame that a lot of people put trust into these two wallets, but how exactly does somebody steal a cryptocurrency? The point of using a crypto currency is to negate what happens when using PayPal and other forms of payment processors. Being that coins (= any crypto currency) are one of the most secure forms of payment on the internet today, any chance of being scammed and losing X amount of coins is more than likely your own fault (i.e., an unofficial wallet said to be 'secure' and 'indifferent'). The moment you put your coins into a wallet that is online, you also just put yourself at risk of losing all that you had, in the case that the website/wallet owner goes rampant and decides to run off with it.

I'm really sorry that this happened to you and whoever else lost their OMC. I'll always use a Qt wallet. Online wallets are not safe and aren't too wise to use.

Goodness, you people are savages--feral children with big toys.

This is getting way out of hand. I don't know how I'd be able to live with an ego so large. I have yet to see someone who was a victim of the theft (well, vulnerability and abuse of that vulnerability) admit that they were absolutely careless for putting their trust into these two online wallets. I am not implying that Tenaxium and OMC are innocent or what they did was the slightest bit okay, but I'm simply stating that if you're being careless, you're bound to lose everything.

While I'm furious that somebody exploited the websites I'm also upset at the wallet owners who left their vulnerabilities unpatched. Unfortunately being that the wound is still fresh a lot of people are out for blood and these two are the most obvious targets. Truth is, it would have happened eventually if it was not done by these users and the wallet owners share a very large part of the responsibility.

You stole from tons of members out of greed and think by saying "sorry," it will spare you from punishments and resolve everything? Not only that, but you waited until you got exposed to apologize. Anyways, this should be another good reason why people should use the offline wallet. ?

I've stayed out of this long enough but now everyone is just taking shit way too far. ._. You're sorry, we get that, you don't need to repeat it a hundred times nor making a bunch of threads about it. You fucked up. You made a mistake. Own up to it. Own that mistake and move on. You being sorry however, does not mean everyone will be happy slappy with you now. They're pissed (rightfully so) and they want to be compensated. There is no denying the fact that BOTH you and ~OMC~ should be on your knees paying everyone back what you stole.

There is a few people at fault here, not just you nor OMC. That being said, you've made quite a bit of money, I'm sure you will continue to do so. Pay these people back what you owe, in full. It doesn't matter you don't have the OMC, it doesn't matter you feel bad about it, and it doesn't matter how much you think should only get XX done to you. Feeling sorry for yourself and others, about the situation, ... feeling bad after you stole something, and the fact you don't have the OMC anymore -- doesn't matter. Because none of those feelings or emotions pay people back.

That said, - people here are taking shit way too far. ...

@OP:

Stop posting, and stop letting others post shit you know is clearly against the rules. Doxbins, pastebins, ANYTHING pertaining to the members at fault and you clearly know is against the rules (posting personal information public or not) is still against the rules and will be dealt with. We know you're pissed, we know you're upset. That does not mean however, you get to break the rules willy nilly and think you'll be all fine and dandy about it. Your reputation and account status should be the least of your worries. You're obviously worried about it because everytime I see you post you're mentioning what you're expecting from Omni and that you accept his punishment. Try to find a way to pay people back! You're constantly on Skype talking about your money making strategies and how you're making a lot of money from ebooks but you can't pay back what you've stolen? It's easy to make a thread and apologize through a computer (it is more than ~OMC~ has done) but you need to let actions speak at this point.

Dox'ing isn't illegal until you start getting really sensitive info such as SSN's or get a dox through illegal means. That said, considering this is HF ... and the it's members. There is a 99% chance they're going to do something illegal with the dox.

They may attempt, but I know the member on here that SWATed on me got arrested. Getting sensitive information is not illegal. I plan on working for an attorneys office, where my Mom works, and you can pull up an SSN on someone without issues. Using the private information like that for negative things like fraud, is illegal though.

Caveat Emptor. A phrase to live by. (Use your brain/buyer beware/etc.)

And there are many high quality members who want nothing but to make something amazing. Etc. Still, the first phrase holds true.

Omniscient - June 1, 2014, 7:09 pm

This was inevitable. Members should always show caution using online wallets. Unfortunately this is why I'd rather get reputable sites like Cryptsy to hold wallets instead of HF member owned ones. It's extremely sad but first off it's hard to trust anyone here and secondly we have too many unseasoned admins without a clue on how to secure setups.

190k hurts but it could have been worse imho. Hopefully no single member lost more than a few k of OMC and even more hopeful that in dollars it wasn't too much.

Needless to say both members involved now have closed accounts. It's a shame that an MD didn't respect the community enough to report this. He will now have to face the consequences of that decision.

And I don't think this ruins OMC. If they're smart they won't dump them anyways until it has a higher value. It's not like they paid a lot to get them. So they can afford to just sit on them until they gain value.

Quote:I still don't know why people chose vulnerable online wallets instead of the QT.
Online wallets might be good for short term and limited use but overall a QT client is likely the safest. At least until we're listed on more reputable exchanges like Mintpal or Cryptsy.

Who wants to knock on his door to get their OMC back? Maybe it's time for a talk with mommy and daddy about his behavior.

They stole OMC which is crypto currency. I'm surprised Tenaxium got involved in this but he obviously did. The least he could do is buy as much OMC cheaply as he can to compensate at least 1/2 the loses which imho he is responsible for. This just wasn't the right thing to do by any means. I'm not surprised at the young teenage scammer that goes around various forums scamming what few dollars he can but I had thought Tenaxium was better than that.

Personally this stuff doesn't surprise me but it does depress me and sickens me some. It's times like this I'm not particularly proud to own this community.

I personally lost >6k coins. I chose to forgive Tenax on the following parameters:

- I spoke with both of these users many times on skype, Luke on all 3 of his skypes.
- HE is a good scammer. He scammed me for 40$ pp a long time ago, but recently purchased an award (litecoinage, we had an issue if you remember that) and I won the 40$ chargeback, so I forgave.
- Luke is a very good SE. That is the only way to put it. He knows very very well how to sound legit. He confidently told me a while ago that he had an uber on here from a different household, and he would not be banned. Just food for thought.
- Luke sucks people in to scams. He tried to get me in. He also bragged about what I missed out on.
- He sucked Tenax in. I do not blame Tenaxium, the opportunity to potentially (this was not reached obviously) for very little work is very very hard to pass up. I warned him about Luke, but it is a lot of money.
- He told me he had every intent of telling the vulnerability to the right people, but Luke threatened him.

To summarize: Tenaxium made a terrible mistake, but is a good person. In my opinion he should not be closed, a 1 month ban and a repfuck is plenty. Maybe even make it 3 months. But he deserves to stay. As for Luke, we should watch for him in the next while. He deserves what he got.

He didnt steal thousands of dollars...~OMC~'s btc address has gained about 400 bucks in the past two days. The whole lot of 190k OMC is only worth about 1.5K USD, so I don't know what your talking about. He was sucked into this, and it backfired when he was trying to make a quick buck.

Owners at fault for running a site with poor security hacked using a public exploit.

Xflat and his team are more at fault for getting notified of the bug by the kid himself, but failed to "fix it". They were given the chance to fix it and just went off and really ignored it resulting in more omnicoins being stolen which is the most ironic part of this story.

Yes, this is a forum that revolves around hacking (and ebook sales). But everyone is pissed because he used his "hacking" against the community.

It's one thing to use the 'skills' that you learn from this forum somewhere else. It's something completely different to use it against a community that you're a part of.

So by that logic if you join a hunters or gun enthusiast forum you should be allowed to post about hunting and killing people. Sorry but maybe your definition of hacking is simply being a criminal but that's not my definition and this is my forum.

Quote:HackForums is labeled as a whitehat forum

Why do people continue to post that nonsense? I've made it clear. HF wears no hat. We're just a forum and we have our own rules. Take it for what it is.

Quote:i know, but there is still a fair share of people who join this forum wanting to learn about sql injection and setting up botnets etc etc. and i doubt they are wanting to learn this so they can be nice xD

If that's what people want to learn from HF that's up to them. If you joined the FBI or NSA my guess is you'd also learn about these things. The knowing of something is not the problem. It's the actions and intent of an individual that has true consequences both morally and legally.

Please stay on-topic now. Go have a discussion about your ethics (or lack of them) on another thread.

~OMC~ is a huge multi, I knew him off of another forum.
I used to be friends with him and we got pretty close.
He ended up scamming me and SEing me.
Hopefully he gets what he has coming.

Obviously, you need to use offline wallets. Nobody's site on HF is secure enough from exploits. Nor should you trust them. It's like trusting them as your bank. The people who lost the coinage probably will never get it back, but at least hopefully ppl learn from this ordeal.

Anybody got any photo ID of him? Or better yet - lets see if his school is retarded as we think.. lets see if his school email is firstname.lastname@schoolwebsite.co.uk luke.clinch@rednock.gloucs.sch.uk

^ Thats not his school email, his school email runs Outlook and Exchange however. The school has a nice admin email.. with some quick SE'ing I could probably get Luke's email from the school.

Or if anybody can get me his age, I can figure out the year he joined - it's likely going to be luke.clinchXX@rednock.gloucs.sch.uk with XX being the year he joined.

If you try to send emails, please remember that most schools have email filters - don't swear, email professionally, don't mention anything aggressive or any slang.

Next on the list - his head teacher.. OMC better return those coins.. (I've not kept up, has he responded at all)

InspectorGadget - June 2, 2014, 4:57 am

Oh.. His account is closed - that's good enough for me. Lets fuck this cunt up.

I'll get to work on getting him expelled :D

I story about him abusing "my child" near the school should do the trick - complain that his mother won't do anything about it and hoping the school will talk to him should do the trick.

Then we can start flooding his email address and fill the filter until the IT Tech's look at why he's getting so many emails.

(Office 365 gives 50GB of email storage, if anybody wants to send 50GB worth of data to his email to fill it, that would be good. Just beware of max attachment size restrictions.. so email bomb the email address with emails with 10MB attachments should do the trick. (It's a school where students normally email themselves with project work, 10MB will be allowed..)

I'll send an email to the school in a few minutes with some fake ass story to get his email. Hopefully I.T reply before the day is over.

You know guys ...

Now you're just taking it too far. Posting his dox, fine, it's just public information but you're actually starting to go into illegal territory here. ...

Seriously ...

- 1) It's illegal to imitate any authoritative figure, at all (like say ... the FBI).
- 2) Now you're bombing his emails, his family's emails, their phones, bothering his school. -- Good job, now you're harassing him, stalking him, and what could be construed as possibly "with the intent to harm". (among other things).

What you guys are doing is just plain fcking stupid. What are you? Children?

If you want your money THAT bad, then just either bring in the local authorities and open a class action, or try getting a lean on his possession - but since he's a minor it'll just fall to the parents anyway.

Overall what you're doing now is just plain stupid, illegal, and borderline retarded (maybe not borderline, i'm just sugarcoating).

You're seriously going to harass his family who have absolutely nothing to do with it, you're going to stalk him, harass him, mentally scar him, break into servers/websites, social engineer a school/others, pretend to be the FBI or someone else who is important ...

All because you lost a total of what? $100 at most? Most of you claim to have had about 8k OMC a pop. With OMC at 1 penny, ...

8K OMC is roughly $80-$100 in USD ...

So you're seriously willing to sit there and commit all of these illegal activities, for a measly $80? That's sad.

I think you guys need to calm down, take a step back and re-evaluate what you're doing here. Yes, he stole money. Yes, it's shitty.

But is it really worth it to go after him and possibly have the authorities come after you, for being stupid about this?

First of all. I lost around 100$, you are right. And I did bomb his email. But the whole story isn't here. You don't appreciate that he is STILL bragging to me about hitting HF offline, among other things. I contacted his parents, he is in a lot of trouble, but the money isn't the point. If you mug a house and only steal 100$, you still go to jail for the same amount of time you go to jail for if you had got 10 000$.

Yes but if someone steals 100$ from my house im not going to do illegal things to get my 100$.
What some people are doing here to get back at him is far more severe then losing a few hundred bucks. If you really want your money back sue him. His information seems to be very public so it wouldn't be hard to find him. But then again you lost a few hundred dollars is it really worth it?

I've been reading the entire thing front to back. SO he hit HF offline? And? That's Omni's problem, not yours. You lose connectivity of HF for all of a few minutes or hours at most. You'll live.

He's bragging about stealing money? Great, then you have more you can use against him in an ACTUAL legal way. Harassing him and his family != justice. Defacing his websites, and getting his information to bomb != justice. That's stupid and childish.

I'm a moral fuck, so I thought I should throw that out there. I'm one of those white knight assholes are doing is _wrong_.

You called his parents? Great. Let them deal with it. He's bragging? Great, use it in court or take it to the police.

He stole money? Ok, contact the police like a victim of burglary would.

In the real world, when someone robs a house, the victim doesn't get to be excluded from the law while taking justice into his own hands. He gets to call the police and let them sort it out.

The thing is, I didn't do illegal things. I spoke with his parents for a lengthy amount of time, and they are working on convincing him to refund is. They do NOT support or condone this. -Viral.I am not saying he hit the site off. He is working on CLOSING hf, as in, deleting EVERYTHING he can. I don't honestly expect him to, but I don't think you and everyone else quite grasp what this kid has done in the past.

And on the other topic: The thing is, this is the interwebs. We can't exactly call his local police force and complain he robbed us. I mean, there are so many cards he could play. Omni POTENTIALLY has enough info to get him arrested, but even assuming Omni wants to, it isn't a guarantee.

My point still stands. That is OMNI'S problem, not yours. If HF has been breached in the past, and it can and will happen again in the future. Do we need to worry though? No. Because Omni is smart enough to make backups and put in little snags to make it harder. HF runs off multiple setups, and I'm sure he has a more than capable IDS, firewall, mod_security rule set, and so on.

I don't grasp what he's done, then please, enlighten me. What has he done that is so bad you need to break laws in order to get street justice?

No you're right, it's not like we can submit evidence of him stealing to his local authorities, or to the IC3, or anything like that.

It's not like we can just take the video recordings, skype logs, posts, and any other medium used to spout his crap and hand it over to IT techs and let them do their job. Instead everyone HF has the great and brilliant idea to just say "fuck the law, street justice bitches".

Because this is the internet. Fuck the law. ._.

-Viral.Look, your right Viral. I entirely get where you coming from. I also get that over 100 people are probably watching us debate. However, I still want to clarify something.

I know Omni is capable. He is very very good at what he does. However, he is an adult, with kids, and has shit to do. I personally do not. I am almost always at school, work, or on HF. When someone does something like this, I don't just sit back and let someone else do the work. The parents have him seeing a therapist and are attempting to get him to refund the money.

I also have not broken any laws, other than email bomb if that is illegal. I called his parents, and spoke with them, and continued from there.

Also, I can't say everything he has done as some does minorly incriminate me, but I will say that:
-He has 1 more uber account on this site at LEAST. He did not show me it, but I have done skype calls with him and know he isn't lying. This Ub3r is accessed from a different house in a different PLACE, as in, not even with 50km of his current residence, so he stays safe.

-He has scammed well over minimum wage for the average adult in the past year. He has done a TON of things.

-He DDoSed my friend/ex girlfriend for NO reason other than to get to me to not type this. I have since set up protection for her, but regardless, it is not cool.

-He attempted to extort me, assuming falsely that I give a flying SHIT about my personal info.

These and many others. This is personal for Luke and I, it isn't just about thousands of omnicoins.

Industry - June 2, 2014, 11:55 am

If I remember correctly, the creator or host of the OMC wallet was basically challenging for the site to be exploited. Not saying it's written in stone, but hey it's kind of a "You get what you ask for" type of situation. Similar to Omniscient suggesting user's keep their OMC on Allcrypt if they don't have the OMC-qt. That's a ? and if you listened to any of this, your currency is already in danger. If you're not willing to download the Omnicoin-qt for use of this coin, well then you were never a part of its community in the first place.

To be blunt is sometimes the only way to beat the point through thickened stubbornness.

I am not going to be able to provide proof. He isn't stupid. He has not typed any sensitive information. And if I report his other accounts to Omni, he has something he can do to me which I really can not allow to happen.

His parents are dealing with it. There is nothing I am going to do that will leave an impact.

Also, someone robbed my house around a year ago. The cops never caught them. If I found out who, I would not do anything other than call the cops. I do not agree with Gravzy at all.

PS: Your signature is controlling this thread between you and I.

Omniscient - June 2, 2014, 12:14 pm

I don't see why members are having a moral debate in this thread. A few simple facts.

1. Kid has scammed lots and lots of members.
2. He continually targets the HF community.
3. He's stolen at least $2k worth of member value but likely much more and unless stopped will continue to do so.
4. Has bragged about his endeavors repeatedly.

So I don't feel sorry for him and I think he needs to be made an example of. The community should not tolerate his behavior. Short of being put into hell for all eternity I think he deserves what he gets and I don't feel sorry for him at all. For all we know he'll grow up to be a lifetime criminal unless he's stopped now.

But this thread is off-topic now and I'm closing it.

Thanks.
