This website lets you vote for games so they get greenlit on steam.

This helps the devs to release their game on Steam.

In exchange the devs give free copys of the games to the owner of the website, so everyone who voted will get a free copy once the game releases on steam.

At the moment there are 8 free games you can vote for.

All you have to do is press vote and click reserve.

You will receive your game through your email on the release date.

I've got allot of games from this website, but never shared it because i wasn't sure where to post it and such.

Oh and every game on that website gets greenlit, because thousands of people vote for it so don't worry about that. ?

If this is the wrong section then please move it.

They told me this would be the right section;

You are one dumb fuck aren't you? I don't even know why you come here hating on my shit.

I received today 3 games, every game they had on their website featured has been greenlit, if you do some research you will find that out.

I don't gain anything from this thread, it's just a friendly share for others who are interested in this.

Here are all the games that got features on this website or are currently in progress;

Why would I research something I don't care about?

Then why do you post on my thread with false statements and not just leave the thread.

Bane - June 6, 2014, 6:29 pm

@Doctah Why don't you just stop thread hating and GTFO? If you have no interest in the website or thread then there is no reason to be here or even be posting. At this point it just seems like you are trying to get your post count up by getting in an argument.

Because I totally care about post count, because it has such a great and deeper meaning that would get me further in life if the number were higher than it currently is.

Shut the fuck up idiot.

Those games were;
