

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Qmee - Earn Money Using Your Browser

gvrys - June 12, 2014, 10:20 pm

What is Qmee?

Qmee is a Chrome extension that adds advertisements on the side of Google, Yahoo, Bing, Amazon, and eBay searches. These ads range from $0.05-$1.00 (just click the ad and browse the link given). Qmee is compatible with AdBlockers, so using both will be fine. Note that this is available for only the US and UK.

You must have a verified PayPal account (US or UK allowed). Payment can be either PayPal or a donation to a charity. There is NO minimum cashout, and payments are instant to PayPal. If you have referrals (they give you links for refs in like a week), their first cash out earns you $1.

Sign up now: <http://qm.ee/1081BB9F>

Tip: They place ads that fit your search history. Also try to stay on the ads they give you, and browse the site. Apparently that is better if you want more ads

Proof:

<https://www.qmee.com/>

DannyBoii - June 13, 2014, 12:10 pm

There is not allowed to be referral links in this area but I like this type of niche.

Madison Ivy - June 13, 2014, 2:04 pm

Isn't that quite slow to make any money? You'd have to manually click every ad you see to few cents..

Linkin™ - June 13, 2014, 2:05 pm

(Jun 13, 2014 02:04 PM)zgooglez Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Isn't that quite slow to make any money? You'd have to manually click every ad you see to few cents..

Actually that is very effective.

Take Probux for example, clicking one ad is like a cent.

From this you browse normally and you see a few adds, click them they are like $0.13 each and you can get a dollar so quickly.

gvrys - June 13, 2014, 2:18 pm

(Jun 13, 2014 02:04 PM)zgooglez Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Isn't that quite slow to make any money? You'd have to manually click every ad you see to few cents..

Well, you can manually go on Amazon or Ebay and search random items. Then you can click on the ad and get around 6 cents each ad. Getting a dollar takes only 5-10 minutes and instant cashout is a plus!