Thread: Anime for adults.

SkullTraill - June 14, 2014, 4:52 am

OK for once I'm not looking for hentai lmao lol.

What I mean is animes with an adult target audience. Less stupid shit, less childish emotion and ideals etc. Like monster etc.

I've watched most of the mainstream animes intended for adults, but wondering if anyone knew any newer ones/ones that were less mainstream that I may have missed.

Any genre is OK except for the obviously childish ones such as slice of life etc. Something like stiens gate/monster maybe?

Thanks, senpai.

- 1- Death Note
- 2- Code Geass (At first it's slow, but then it gets REALLY good)
- 3- Ergo Proxy
- 4- Another (perhaps?)

Now if you like adult anime albeit not very intellectual:

- 1- Berserk movies (manga is recommended though)
- 2- Elfen Lied (I have not watched it but I have heard enough)

I haven't watched a lot of anime, but here's what I can recommend. Hope you enjoy :)

But if they have adult ones then i think i could watch it.

Try Steins Gate. If you can get past the girl that sounds like a broken radio, then it's quite good.

Better yet Full Metal Alchemist: Brotherhood. One of the best shows for getting people into anime.
Or even Death Note maybe... there are several darker, more adult oriented anime shows out there... kinda hard to find though.

Already watched Cowboy Bebop, was pretty good, though I would say it was aimed at late teens as opposed to fully adults, though I still enjoyed it. And I've seen and heard good things about Trigun, I really want to watch it but it looks sooo dated.

What is old is gold, trust upon my words and the proverb. I have to say that Monster looks a bit more outdated than Trigun if comparing these two. (Personal subjective experience ofcourse)

Fate/Zero (assuming you've watched Fate / Stay Night) is a pretty good example of the traits you mention. It contains virtually no fanservice, and does not pull typical random comedy scenes into it. It is serious throughout it's entirety, and I feel it is very mature, but couldn't really say it's aimed specifically for adults. I'd look into some trailers and see if you might enjoy it.

Thanks to you 3 for suggesting this as well, wow, looks really good. One thing I really enjoy in anime is good art style.

Thanks you to everyone else who suggested too, I've read all the replies and I'm grateful!

EDIT: Wow I normally hate romance/slice of life animes, but due to the nice artwork and non-childishness, I think I might really enjoy this.

So someone sent me this PM, and I'm going to post it, along with what I replied, in case my OP was not clear enough to some people:

AtWar Wrote:I dont feel like posting on your thread because feels like it'd be too much work to do. Because of said feelings, i feel it necessary, if not expected, to at the very least share with you my top 5 choices. Because of your dubious request, I believe that i should let you know that there are a severely limited number of "adult anime" by your standards. "Childish idealism" isn't usually a keystone in any anime's plot and if ever included, more often than not, the "childish character" will be subjected to a revelation of sorts. An example would be in Code Geass: a show that i wont include because its been said all too many times. Personally, if im not being too presumptuous already, i think you're severely mistaken in the way you view children today, and your ideas about adulthood are shallow at best if not misguided. Most children, including myself, do not believe that the world is black and white; that there is only two: good and evil and nothing else matters. Such ideas are dangerous and will only lead the person with those values to disaster. Going by what you have described, you are on here looking for Ecchi harem animes and science fiction with a "deeper meaning" and i will act on those vague instructions. In the end, all anime are for "children/young adults" unless you're watching hentai.

In order to keep something resembling order, i have decided, in my humble opinion, to name off these series from in terms of (favorite[1]) to (good[5]). In this list, i will include a basic 2 sentence description of the show i am recommending and the opening of my choosing. Although i am well aware that different people have different tastes that set them apart from one another, i do hope that by some chance our tastes will overlap in regards to the series i will now list.

1. Jojo's bizarre adventures

The story revolves around the Joestar family and begins in 19th century england. Manly shit, i made fun of it the first time i watched it but it is some good stuff.

2. Black Butler

The story revolves around the british noble, Ciel Phantomhive and his quest for revenge for the murder of his parents. He signs a contract with a demon in order to complete this goal.

3.The Devil is a Part timer

The devil becomes a part timer at a fast food joint and soon learns the troubles faced my mankind in modern-day Japan. Boobs n stuff.

4.Blue Exorcist >

After finding out he is the son of Satan, Rin makes it a personal goal to become an Exorcist and kill satan himself. He makes many friends along the way with similar aspirations, something he has never been able to do before (make friends).

5.Sekirei

My first anime. Granted, its not much to look at but it has sentimental value. I often Remanence about the times when i used to watch anime with little to no scrutiny. There is a college kid who gets lucky and has a beautiful FF cup woman fall on his face (crotch first, naturally. lets not forget the genre) and gets 4 other woman (all names sekirei and exhibit a type of supernatural power unique to one another) including an imouto character on top of having a C cup biological little sister. They have to kill or be killed essentially. a good watch, save it for a rainy day

please pardon any grammatical errors

My reply:

SkullTraill Wrote:Thank you for your suggestions, but you are completely mistaken. I am not looking for ecchi harem. You seem to be the only person who hasn't understood/is denying the existence of animes targeted at adults as opposed to children. Look at the thread. I am completely satisfied with it. There are several great, non-childish anime.

As for your other concerns, the only opinion I have of today's children is that most of them are mentally retarded.

Secondly, childish idealisms, and over-the-top retarded childish expressions and "backdrops", are often used in anime. Sometimes I am in the mood for the crazy japanese expressions and backdrops, because hey, anime is a japanese thing and I can respect the different art styles, but sometimes I'm in the mood for something serious, and as such do not want someone's nose to explode with blood whenever he goes past a moderately attractive family member.

As for the childish idealisms, they are really annoying, and present in almost every shonen... "hurr durr I can change the world on my own" .. or "hurr durr she's my acquaintance, I barely know her but it's my DUTY to give up my life for her HURRRRRR". Very prevalent in animes.

If I can take my turn to be presumptuous now, may I presume that as a child when you read my thread you felt a little bit of anal pain as I was demeaning to your age group and the type of anime you watch, well I'm sorry it was not my intention, I just had to be clear, and guess what, the thread was a pretty big success, I got what I wanted, most of the suggestions fit my criteria perfectly.
