

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: do paid rats keep logs of your connection and slaves?

Orianna - June 18, 2014, 9:48 am i'd be sad if IM, nanocore, luxnet and other paid rats to go down the same road as blackshades. Im not saying that they have or will update a backdoor in it, but their logs getting seized by FBI and all their users getting raided.

?pth?n - June 18, 2014, 11:07 am

Well you can atleast say that they store their customer information.

So a paid RAT is really dangerous in my honest opinion. I know that people will laugh at me because they probably think I'm paranoid now, but better be safe than sorry!

I don't think that they log the connection between you and the slaves, but if I'm right you have to use a licensing program in order to access the RAT - right?

Let's say the FBI silently takes over the RAT, then they could track everyone who connects to it.

Dyllon_2020 - June 19, 2014, 12:08 am

Let's just say this, I sure damn hope not! I'm sure if the FBI were to contact the real programmer/coder of these programs, they could easily make them do as they wish):

Winners - June 19, 2014, 12:14 am

Some RATs have keyloggers built in which can be activated upon the build and will supply the end user with "logs."

Although, most people buy installs and have the host run a stealer on them for a lesser price and get logs this way.

aljari7 - June 19, 2023, 5:02 pm

when the FBI wants somebodys informations they dont need for any rats, comon gays [warn]