

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: [\[WARNING\] Dota 2 Phishing Page Offers Keys and Rare Items](#)

Quest™ - June 18, 2014, 10:10 am

[img]http://cdn.blog.malwarebytes.org/wp-content/uploads/2014/06/dotayahoophish1.jpg[/img]

This page tries to steal your yahoo login details and steam. Watch out!

b?xxy - June 18, 2014, 10:11 am

I've seen people talking about this, thanks for the heads up!

Tromboner - June 18, 2014, 12:34 pm

(Jun 18, 2014 10:10 AM)Brave Sir Robin Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#)

[img]http://cdn.blog.malwarebytes.org/wp-content/uploads/2014/06/dotayahoophish1.jpg[/img]

This page tries to steal your yahoo login details and steam. Watch out!Why in the living world would someone host a phishing site on webs.com?, That makes absolutely no sense.

T e s s e r a c t - June 18, 2014, 12:37 pm

(Jun 18, 2014 12:34 PM)Tromboner Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Why in the living world would someone host a phishing site on webs.com?, That makes absolutely no sense.

So that way the middle man is a free web service and the web service would get blamed. Somebody has to report this to webs.com soon, or we are all doomed to get our Dota accounts hacked (of course mine is hypothetical).

Hopsin - June 18, 2014, 12:39 pm

I have steam guard enabled. Also, I don't login to other websites unless it's official dota2,steam etc.

Helios. - June 18, 2014, 4:19 pm

When trying to visit the website firefox blocks me and warns me that it has been reported as a phishing website.

Also why don't you just report it to webs.com as a phishing website? Within 24 hours they will take it down (I already reported it).

Any free website such as yola.com, webs.com, SPAM.com can be reported.

They will take it down in no time.

Perfectionist - June 18, 2014, 4:21 pm

I wonder if anyone actually fell for that shit

Pillows - June 18, 2014, 4:21 pm

If someone's going to phish at least get a real domain. At least you're more believable that way. Creator of phishing site is an amateur :P

Dowls - June 18, 2014, 4:23 pm

You know in the early days of FIFA ultimate team many people fell for sites like this. I know people that could get around 1 million coins a day which was £100+ at that time.

The main website creator was weebly for them. I was absolutely shocked at some of the idiots which fell for it. Some with messi and ronaldo.

Tromboner - June 18, 2014, 5:57 pm

(Jun 18, 2014 12:37 PM)MaiTriCks Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) So that way the middle man is a free web service and the web service would get blamed. Somebody has to report this to webs.com soon, or we are all doomed to get our Dota accounts hacked (of course mine is hypothetical).

My point is the exact same point as pillows, if you can't even get a real domain to prove that you aren't fake, that is a very amateur move.

Agent Shark - June 18, 2014, 8:14 pm

Thank you Robin for the notification. I appreciate it.

Null Byte - June 18, 2014, 8:27 pm

This is a hilariously horrible phishing attempt, I can't really see anyone falling for it. The guy that made this site is the same kind of person that plays Riki.

Server97 - June 18, 2014, 11:04 pm

Thanks for the heads up, the amateur was a complete fucking noob

Pillows - June 19, 2014, 9:44 am

(Jun 18, 2014 08:27 PM)Null Byte Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) This is a hilariously horrible phishing attempt, I can't really see anyone falling for it. The guy that made this site is the same kind of person that plays Riki.

You'd be surprised at the amount of people who still fall for phishing attempts like this even though it's a subdomain.

Weebex - June 20, 2014, 5:36 am

Man phishing sites make everything so noticeable. Note the "Password" and "Yahoo email", only an idiot can fall for this.

DpzFAsq4UEK8 - June 20, 2014, 5:50 am

(Jun 20, 2014 05:36 AM)BlueTiger Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Man phishing sites make everything so noticeable. Note the "Password" and "Yahoo email", only an idiot can fall for this.

"Password"?

It's "Password", not "Password".