Thread: Remote Control Your PC Via Gmail: GRC Gmail Remote Control

opera1996 - May 19, 2010, 4:41 am

GRC (which stands for Gmail Remote Control) is a tiny application that enables Gmail users to remotely control their PC by sending an email to their Gmail account.

Through GRC, Gmail users can easily perform simple actions such as executing applications, opening web pages and shutting down the operating system. The only requirement is that the PC is on and connected to the Internet.

GRC is available only for Windows XP computers and does not require any installation; once you have downloaded it, you must only extract the file from the zipped folder and execute the GRC.exe program.

When the program is open, you will have to insert username and password of your Gmail account and click on "Sign in". Every 60 seconds, GRC will automatically check your email box to see whether new instructions have arrived through Gmail.

This little application is still unknown to many Gmail users; I myself was not aware of its existence and I must thank Robin Good for giving me the link to the site of GRC. Robin discovered this little application during the Rome BarCamp that took place few weeks ago, and this is certainly a demonstration of how enriching these social events can be in terms of knowledge sharing and personal growth.

I have taken some time to test GRC it on my computer and here I give you some instructions on how to use it.

To execute an application:

[img]http://www.kolabora.com/news/images/grc_open_application.gif[/img]

Let's assume you want to open your Windows Calculator: what you need to do is send an empty email to your Gmail account (the one that is logged into GRC) with the follow subject:

[open]c:\windows\system32\calc.exe[/open]

The path within the tags [open] and [/open], specifies which application will be executed.

To open a web page:

[img]http://www.kolabora.com/news/images/grc_open_webpage.gif[/img]

In order to open a web page, send an empty email with the follow subject:

[open]<http://www.robingood.com>[/open]

Once your computer will receive the message, your default browser will automatically open the page www.robingood.com

Shut down the PC:

[img]http://www.kolabora.com/news/images/grc_shutdown_command.gif[/img]

To turn off your PC, send an empty email with the follow subject:

shutdown

GRC will shutdown the machine. (p.s.: GRC works only with Windows XP operating system)

Changing the settings

Users of GRC can change the tags for the shutdown command and for the path of your system. In the picture below you can see the default settings:

Important notice:

[img]http://www.kolabora.com/news/images/grc_alert_window.gif[/img]

When executing GRC.exe for the first time, your operating system will display the following alert message "Component 'MSINET.OCX' or one of its dependencies not correctly registered: a file is missing or invalid". MSINET.OCX is the control used by RC for Gmail authentication and you can safely install it on your PC by following the procedure described below:

Download msinet.ocx

Copy msinet.ocx in "c:\windows\system32"

Click on Start -> Run

Insert: "regsvr32 msinet.ocx"

Click on OK

THE END , so can u post just a word as thanking

Post virus scan log dude?

Might be Backdoored, Since it is a remote control tool.

Sounds sus dude

I'd post a virus scan except NVT isn't working for me at the moment.

Scanned with my AVG and it didn't pick up anything.

Just opened it in Bin Text and it looks clean to me. :)

ooh nice niceeeeeeeeeeeeeeeee

Kr4z1 - May 19, 2010, 6:27 am

@OP Please post a virus scan of your download.

Momiji - May 19, 2010, 6:29 am

I'm scanning it, give me a sec

opera1996 - May 19, 2010, 1:15 pm

Hey friend it is clean . Do i like like a 1 who hack their friends .? No of course
Anyway this is the virus scan

Also because this software just seems pointless, and it even looks like a virus.

opera1996 - May 19, 2010, 2:34 pm

it is not a virus i try it on my pc and it's really work

by the way can anyone tell me how can i change my name in this forums

Jayro - May 19, 2010, 2:38 pm

To change your username you need to have HF LEET which costs 20 dollars, you dont have a high post count and your rep is shitty, so you should just make a new account.

opera1996 - May 20, 2010, 12:18 am

mmmmmmmmmm thnks. Enjoy the program
