Code Dear balh fucken blah,

At PayPal we always deal with our customers in as professional and fair a manner as possible. While we understand you may be frustrated with the current issues on your account we cannot condone a situation where our employees are subjected to abusive language from customers.

We kindly request that you rephrase your email and contact us again with a more suitable message. If you continue to address us using abusive language, please be aware that you may receive no further response from us.

It is my pleasure to assist you. Thank you for choosing PayPal.

Scars On Broadway - June 21, 2014, 7:35 am

I'm sick of paypal they limited my account too and didn't give me a reason why Apparently they cant tell me for security reasons.

Rooter - June 21, 2014, 7:36 am

Did you ever e-whore on that PayPal account?

Linkin™ - June 21, 2014, 7:37 am

This is too fucking funny man. I am laughing my ass of.

Ely™ - June 21, 2014, 7:38 am

PayPal is limiting me soo many times for absolutely no reason, and it seems like they either just like to troll, or they are actually just trying to see if it doesn't bother me, and if it doesn't, they probably just take my funds. I hate it.

L?gic - June 21, 2014, 7:40 am lmao OP you hench!! ??

I agree though, PP are total tossers limiting everything. Why hasnt someone made a better Paypal yet? I swear ever since I've got into Paypal, I feel something fishy going on.

It's like they dont give 2 shits about customers, and do almost anything to get you to leave Paypal so they can probably rob your account of all it's E-Whoring cash ?

Ryan Cleary - June 21, 2014, 7:40 am

This is why PayPal is shit. I have around 6 limited accounts. They limit me because I make too much cash on them.

potatopete54 - June 21, 2014, 7:42 am

PayPal love to steal dat ka-ching :3

Anyhow, maybe you should calm your tits (no pun) or else PayPuns (intended typo) will use it against you (maybe threatening), but you're having the iron hand here so good luck. Why not go and take legal actions against PayPal right now? You've been waiting long enough just to get fucked right in the pussy..

iPhone - June 21, 2014, 7:46 am

Imfao op! You are one raged man of Paypal. I am also because I had my bank,cc verified then they limit my shit, then ask me what I buy online, then ask me what I sell, then tell I must send in proof of address and all that bullshit.

I am about to do the same like you did and email those fuckers 10x.

Obi-Wan Cannabis - June 21, 2014, 7:49 am

Finally someone stood up to them, they're fucking pricks. Good luck man.

ada? - June 21, 2014, 7:52 am

Same shit happend to me. First the account was limited for ~2 months. I uploaded all necessary documents such as proof of address and passport and then boom my account was just gone. I couldn't even login. So I began my paypal-journey. I sent them an e-mail per week and never received a reply. It wasn't until I included a pile of bad language and that I'd never ever in my life call their shitty call center because I don't want to waste $50 for a phone call (expensive to call abroad). Then I finally after 1-2 months received a reply from paypal.

Quote:In order to protect all PayPal customers and the quality of our service, we take violations of our User Agreement very seriously. After further review of your faxed documents, we have determined that you were not yet 18 years old when you created this account and would like to begin parting ways in a manner that is least disruptive to your business.

Nah. They're just stuck up pricks. "Oh, you're making a lot of money? LOL. Not anymore. I'll just hold on to this money for now.. (insert evil face)"

There is almost no rhyme or reason behind them limiting accounts. They just want money, that's all they want. If there was as good of alternative to Paypal, I would leave Paypal right away, but sadly there's not.

Paypal can go fuck themselves in the ass with the giant dildo they probably bought with all the money they pretty much stole.

Eagerkid - June 21, 2014, 8:36 am

I got limited for calling the manager of the dispute section and crack whore and a fucking dumbass. But then i called 180 days after and they allowed me to withdraw my money, but my account is still limited so i just stopped using paypal. If you wit 180 you can get your money back, if they dont give it back contact your police and have them go in a investigation. I had a investigation for a dispute they overturned and I got the police to call them and overturn it back. Hope this helps @ Vitani, call them in a few weeks and ask if it's possible to reduce the limit before you can withdraw to 45 days from 180. Attach a bank account and then withdraw.

What can't I do while my account is limited?

- send money
- receive or request money
- close your account
- add money to your account
- add or remove a card
- add or remove a bank account
- send refunds

You are going at this the wrong way. You simply call paypal, speak to a manager, if that one does not work, rinse and repeat.

I've unlimited my account 5 times already, when it was "Permanently Limited". It is rather simple, as long as you are who you are on the paypal account and you are over 18.

Edit- And the reasons I was limited:

Violation of the T.O.S with virtual goods.

Violation of the T.O.S with suspicious payments.

SEcurity issues.

Suspicious payments.

Possible illegal activity.

Also if you need any help, im more than willing to call them with you in skype to attempt to unlimit it.

Shenanigans™ - June 22, 2014, 2:33 am

Paypal can indeed as an entity be a complete asshole and regardless of "policy" they are just wrong much of the time in terms of limitations. Such as legitimate charities and fundraising being limited.

Ive never seen anyone use such colorful language in an attempt at getting their funds released but if this works youll be a legend in my book. Good luck ?

Also, isnt there a set limit of 180days for them to hold your money, even for a perm limit?

If so, its better than losing it entirely but 6months is a rather harsh time period.

In all honesty, holding peoples money indefinitely without proper reasoning is borderline, if not theft considering paypal is just a private organization with no rights outside of their own T.O.S

Im sure when enough people experience the injustice of the paypal system a better more globally recognized alternative will be used.

Ive personally never been limited after 8 years on Paypal, however I have seen friends with legitimate charities and businesses be frozen without warning indefinitely

Paypal has limited my accounts many times, its such a bad company.

Evernote - June 22, 2014, 6:20 am

PayPal has more money than you. They have policies that are to be read and followed.

Ever see warning labels on products? That is so the manufacturer is protected. You are the person who didn't read the warning label.

I've NEVER had any issues with PayPal. Maybe if you are using it for a legitimate reason then you wouldn't become limited. Maybe you are using it for a legitimate reason (now), but maybe you also used it "illegally" before.

Hop off of PayPal. You would never actually win a legal case with them, let alone sue them in the first place.

Paul Allen - June 22, 2014, 6:23 am

Tough luck man. My PayPal has been limited 2 times, and both times they were unlimited by speaking to the 'right' agent over the phone... It also might have helped that I'm a 'top PayPal customer' according to them.

I used to run a minecraft server where the top rank was around £100. A couple of people bought it and everytime they did, my paypal became limited and they kept any more money that was sent to me in donations after that which was around £50 or so. Although £50 isn't that much it's still fucking annoying how they just decide to keep the money I earned by developing my server, putting countless hours into it!

Have you cancelled tht credit card yet? You should honestly just sever all ties connecting paypal to your funds as any random crazy thing can come up and they will bill you for it.

Even with the 45-60day restriction policy on most paypal transactions, they actually reserve the right to refund a payment MONTHS longer if not indefinitely from the date of purchase. So a buyer can have an item of yours for who knows how long and paypal can still open up some type of case against you

No offense Vitani but you're being immature about the situation, You could've easily fixed this issue if you were to have spoken with an higher up supervisor or etc. If that didn't work request the email of the CEO in many cases they wont respond for MONTHS but they eventually do, He would've helped perhaps even put in a good word etc.

According to what i'm reading you seemed to have been in violation of theirs terms of service so they decided not to deal with you, Getting mad and calling them all sorts of profanity won't do anything to help your case and in the long-run it makes you seem rude and guilty.

Different rules for different countries. Here in Australia, you can accept and send payments without being verified (which is easy, it just deposits two small amounts into your bank and you tell them what amounts they were to confirm it's you're bank account).

The only limit on non-verified accounts is that you can't withdrawal as much per month.

IntelliJ - June 27, 2014, 10:55 pm

Probably an unpopular opinion here: They shouldn't have to respond to you after you speak to them that way. It's a professional business and if you walked into a store and said "Give me all your fucking <whatever> or I'll do <something> you cunt." You'd get thrown out pretty damn quickly.

Your best course of action is to call them and apologize for how you acted, no matter how it appears in your eyes, and work with the agent. Answer questions truthfully. I had one of mine limited a while back and I called them and he asked me if it was my first account, I told him no, and he said "Thanks, I appreciate your honesty." He asked a few more questions, I answered truthfully, and my account was ready to go.

Edit: Darkwin replied to this in a much better manner than I did. His response is on the previous page.

When setting up the account, what account type did you choose? Premier are better because I know for sure you can send/receive without being verified - you just can't withdrawal more than $500(AUD) per month.

The few times I've called PP Aus it's been a breeze. I had my account limited because it was a new account and it was being used to receive payments from eBay. I uploaded all my stuff and haven't had an issue with them since. Even though I went a whole year without using it to straight away using it heaps from a different IP (moved house) and still had no problems. Lucky I guess.

It's an automated system. :P The only manual thing is a PayPal employee does is check the box next to their email and designate that it's to receive automated replies only. OP could spam them and receive the automated replies, until/unless an employee responds himself.

How do I know this? Neighbor works for PayPal and was talking about a similar situation a few weeks ago.
