I just got back from the doctors not too long ago because my left ear felt like there was a bug in it, turns out there is a ear infection on that end.

My right ear felt clogged turns out I got impacted ear wax that is hard so my doctor proscribed anti biotics and ear wax softener.

I got to go back in a couple days or so to get the wax removed.

That same thing happened to my brother. He was always complaining about ear pain.

You should next time on a day to day basis clean your ear.

He might need tubes put in. This is an every once in a while thing for me. Maybe every year and a half to 2 years.

I had a similar thing done once, it really hurt my ear.

I've seen a video of it happen. It's disgusting but I bet it feels good when it's all out. Feels like your free. :d

Inb4 they find a earwig living in your ear, contrary to popular belief that they DON'T actually live in your ear.

I had it done once in the past it hurts just a little bit more of like uncomfortable feeling instead of painful though.

Sometimes you need to put your tongue in there and suck it out with some saliva.

Have you ever given your dates a blank stare when they asked, "What do you do for fun?" Yes, it sounds like the simplest of questions, but it can be the one of the most stressful to answer.

Maybe you think back to what you did last Sunday, and you come up with this list: Snacking. Napping. Surfing Facebook. "You can't tell your date that!" you scold yourself. "You're supposed to be doing something interesting!"
