Thread: SOLD - Complete transfer will be some time next week.

Judge Dredd - July 1, 2014, 8:43 am

[Video: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=PHVeyo4W18U>]

You'll be perma ignored if you...

1. Waste my time.
2. Ask me to hold the group for you.
3. Try and lowball me.

Make sure you are approved by Omni first before approaching me.

Also the buyer CANNOT use the Infamous user bar/name whatsoever. I will make sure of that before the group is sold.

8.5k USD and the group is yours. (You pay fee's, BTC, MoneyGram or Bank Transfer only)

I'll make sure the group is sold to someone who deserves it and not some inept individual.

New owner does not have to pay Omni the $250 transfer fee. ?

All HF rules/policies apply to this thread, so any sales thrashing/bashing/trolling will result in Warnings/RF.

Tibit - July 1, 2014, 8:47 am

Good luck with selling your group noob. Groups can make a lot of money here, it's worth it.

VRUMM - July 1, 2014, 8:49 am

Groups just got more expensive. Looks like people will have to team up to buy it.

Eeluminati - July 1, 2014, 8:55 am

Just curious, why won't you sell it to someone who already owns a group? Best of luck JD.

Interesting, curious to see who the new owner of Infamous is going to be if it sells and what is going to be happening to the group, I don't think it will stick as Infamous if it sells, who knows.

This should be interesting. I wonder if anyone will buy it.

Good luck, Dredd.

Honestly, if a person plays it's card rights and buy the group, he'll be able to make back it's money in no time.

All he have to do is to continue managing, handling the group like JD did and it will be worth the investment I guess.

Good luck selling the group.

The only difference is he probably bought the group at a much lower price. To make back your money at his prices, you would need two hundred forty members.

He got it for free from Omniscient as a gift for all the stuff JD did, and how he helped Omniscient out with the forum as Admin for a while. BTW, the main way to profit with groups isn't to sell spots all over, a product line under a group has a big advantage too. There is a lot of ways to make money with a group and its name.

BTW, try talking to Syrah, he may be interested.

You could get them to pay a bit extra so you don't lose money when you convert it to WU or BT. It's risky to hold that much, I hold 35.5BTC and I can lose from 100-$3000 on a single drop, it's just plain silly.

You're so so so rich Tibit, that you should purchase the group for moi.

Kidding! Not kidding.

It is true that it's not entirely difficult to make the money back after purchasing it. It depends on what the buyer does with the group, and what image they make for themselves. Simply owning a group can increase sales, but a group with a good reputation can make even more sales. Sad, but true.

Tidbit would get it for me, clearly.

I'm much closer to him and could easily wine and dine him. ?

As far earning money for groups, I'm sure there are still numerous ways as long as the person buying it puts effort into it. Buy-ins are a thing but usually leads to issues and also devalues your group as a whole if not done correctly.

There are always ways to make money here but with each new project or income comes liability in its wake. Take a big wrong step and the name and credibility of the group is ruined, just look (or rather you can't know) at Black Diamond.

Vouch for Wolves, he's attempted to wine and dine his way into getting a group multiple times.

Building up a good reputation for the group with a good member base then making products off that is far better than whoring it out with buy-ins and killing the reputation in a day. Most buy-in groups never made more than a few grand from buy-ins.

I think the idea is going to have to be that people will need to team up to buy groups, although Omni has said in the past that he discourages that.

Regardless, the group will get purchased eventually. I think that 18K is a fair price considering how profitable groups have been in the past. It's an investment.

Ulysses S Grant™ - July 7, 2014, 7:00 pm

18k is a big investment but to make that a investor shall be in bed with Omni figuratively so they know hf will be around for many years.

It isn't that they're in a rush to sell, but it's highly likely that there's just one person at the moment with the available funds, and enough interest in a group to purchase one. That person will surely go for the lowest price. The first group to sell wins.

Nah, the group will change, someone will buy it then someone will most likely end up having it for about 2months then leave hf, look at the group zero.. I can't even remember what group that took over, 90% of old school groups are now R.I.P. Then new people get them just to sell them..

If you charge for $50/month buy-ins x 100 members that is $5000/month revenue + the sale of a couple leadership positions (~$1-2k/each). Then you basically make your money back pretty quick.

Again this is assuming if you run it correctly in a best case scenario where everyone buys-in.

There is no guarantee however that buy ins would actually work as you assume that people will buy in at the set price for so many spots.

The way you're calculating your profits are completely wrong.

If you plan on making it a buy-in group it's going to get a bad reputation and not much hype.

Come out with a unique idea, keep it exclusive for a bit, release products then once you're done monetizing your products you can have a few buy-ins.

You'll be making a steady $2,000-3,000/month doing what I say but, it could be better.

Exactly how a buyer should do it. The hardest part is going to be not only creating a unique idea for the group, but creating a product that isn't total shit and has already been done before. e.g. booters, vpns, servers, etc.

You probably have to wait for a long time to find someone because no one with right mind and money will not gonna buy it at that rate and then waste his time here.

Better option is: Do a IPO, Collect 250 USD from 44 users or 500 USD from 22 Users and give them a permanent userbar and an equal partnership.

They can choose and change their leader through voting in every six months.

Edit: I guess only omni can change group owners, so that step would be pain in the ass for him.

That idea would not work to have equal partnership anyways.

Because it will only lead to complete chaos as it hard for others to work together under leadership.

Indeed they are, but most people just talk the talk and never walk the walk on this site, it's clearly apparent who has money and who doesn't. ?

A smart business oriented individual who will turn this group around for more profit is hard to find these day. ?

Invest in land in countries like Serbia.

In my country a squaremeter costs up to 200 Euro's in Serbia you have a nice view and some decent amount of land for nearly nothing.

You could always invest in solar panels if you own enough land close to the equator where alot of sun is.

Also countries like those are pretty much all farmland and are transitioning to the moderne. The place where I reside there has like 2mb internet from Telenor. But they're moving up and land is becoming more expensive also if I can't bear the weather in the Netherlands further I just go there.

There are various investment possibilities for various people.

Next time a group leader wants to sell a group he should take a look at this thread. One or two relatively serious enquiries, and 38 pages of horses, barns and god knows what else. Quite surprising that it's been on the market for so long and still hasn't been sold, I mean some of those ebooks should make that easily under a day, and for a day's work I'd say a group is definitely worth it.

You're probably the hundredth person to post something like this in the thread. Seriously, you're accomplishing absolutely nothing.

Also, here's the definition of an investment: \(Click to View\)

The idea here is that you need to spend money to make money. JD has made a pretty great sum of money off of this group.

Consider this: If one leadership position was sold for $700, and 117 group spots were sold for $75, you'd break even right there. That's easily obtainable within two or three months of operating a group if you're really dedicated. Imagine if you have the group going for several years. You'd make an ton of cash, and that's not even including group products, which is a whole different story.

People that are saying this is too much for buying a group are thinking about this as a social status or something. Buying this group is an investment. And if you're competent, which JD has already established as a prerequisite, it's an investment that's almost guaranteed to pay off.

I'm sorry that I'm getting worked up over it, but I'm annoyed by people who are still posting this. Also a slight edit for respect and clarification.

The idea here, in case you still don't get it, is that you need to spend money to make money. JD has made an absolute boatload of money off of this group.

Consider this: If one leadership position was sold for $700, and 117 group spots were sold for $75, you'd break even right there. That's easily obtainable within two or three months of operating a group if you're really dedicated. Imagine if you have the group going for several years. People that are saying this is too much for buying a group are thinking about this as a social status or something. Buying this group is an investment for Christ's sake. And if you're competent, which JD has already established as a prerequisite, it's an investment that's almost guaranteed to pay off.

I'm sorry I'm getting worked up over it, but I'm annoyed by people who are still posting this. I'll also add to that. You can make the buy in even simple as $25. You can see L'appel du vide as an HQ group and it had a buy in. Groups are a one time payment, not monthly. Unless you get your ass closed. If you wait you'll always break even.

Omniscient doesn't recognise co-owners.

Only one owner is recognised per group, and they must be approved by Omniscient. The rest are mere leaders. Hence do not form partnerships to buy groups, you'll only get fucked over. Those are the words of Omniscient. Be sure to read his thread on it. Because the owner can remove y'all in a split second, PM Omniscient with $250 and a group change request and make it into whatever he wants, and Omniscient won't bother with any shares, ownership, splits or whatever other user deals there are, they aren't endorsed by Omniscient.

That's what the group owners say to sell it at that price.lol There is a huge possibility that the price of the groups can go down. After a while, price could drop a lot.

Now there is not much of a value for these groups.lol Groups don't even last much longer nowadays.

Not necessarily just to help other group owners get the price they are looking for but to raise the value of their group as well. If a group owner claims they've received offers it could help to drive the price of their group up as well. It would be beneficial if that group owner ever decided to sell their group slot.

But it's only once. Plus buying it off for 8.5k is worth it for the investment, sell at 13k and sell groups, sectors, membership, leadership, 8.5k can turn into 20k easily. But getting accepted is the annoying part.

There's plenty of ways you could monetize once you purchased the group. You could:

- 1) Sell group spots
- 2) Sell leadership spots
- 3) Build up the group's rep and market group products

The sky's the limit if you're ambitious. This is a really smart investment and can be very profitable if you put in work.

For example from Instinct alone I've sold 4 leadership spots for $2-$2.5k each and I've sold over 400 group spots at $50-$70 per head. Calculate that and compare it to what originally the group was worth when someone bought me Instinct for $4,550. ?

I just got attracted to the yard sell me one of those please.

Callam - August 30, 2014, 4:01 pm

I was thinking about buying this but Omni said i can't be a group owner so i guess goodluck with selling this.

Judge Dredd - August 30, 2014, 9:19 pm

Still up for grabs just in case my original buyer fails to pay me on Tuesday.

You must just be a naughty boy ?.

Acync - August 31, 2014, 2:58 pm

Well, times up! Look like Judge Dredd is going to move into his "Revamp" Conrats on successfully selling the group! Hopefully everything turns out great!

Fortis - August 31, 2014, 10:09 pm

Wow, good luck with this JD. That's a good profit, you're that much closer to that $1,000,000 goal. ?

You should definitely invest that money in a new/better Dredd Movie, produced by you.
It's so lucrative you'd be crazy not to! ?

All seriousness, congratulations and have fun being a millionaire! (When you get there)?

If I was accepted by Omni to own a group back when Skill was selling do I have to contact him again?

Pretty sure that once you have been accepted for group ownership, you are now already accepted.

However you should probably PM Omni just to be sure.

Tor - September 1, 2014, 3:50 pm

Still no final deal on this group?

WOW

You should ask the big man himself to see what's up with that. I believe he has changed his mind on a few members.

XeX Menu - September 1, 2014, 4:43 pm

I thought somebody backed out on the deal again, but looks like we will see what happens tomorrow. ?

Acync - September 2, 2014, 4:50 am

Let us know what happens tomorrow, good luck ?

Robust - September 2, 2014, 4:51 am

Tomorrow is today, and yesterday was two days ago. Today is Tuesday ?

We will find out soon enough, get ready back up buyers just in case it falls through. ?

BooGod - September 2, 2014, 2:25 pm

I would buy it, but I'm denied to own a group. Sounds like a need to grow a bit more and learn more. I have good plans for when I get approved.

Good luck selling this Judge ?

I wonder how many people have said that just to act like they have money.

Judge Dredd - September 2, 2014, 2:49 pm

He's legit. Closing this now.?

Acync - September 2, 2014, 2:50 pm

Quick last post, eeeeehhhhhh ?

Congratulations on selling.

Autopost - September 2, 2014, 2:51 pm

Long live infamous, thought I'd get that in.

PaddalsAFaggot - September 2, 2014, 3:01 pm

Cannot wait see what this turns out to be like.

Tokyo - September 2, 2014, 3:02 pm

Finally this group is sold. I hope the next owner makes it lasts ?

Errors - September 2, 2014, 3:08 pm

I must say, it's nice to see this finally come up ??
