Thread: Skype accepts calls without me knowing and people can hear me!

EthanX - July 1, 2014, 7:52 pm

I got a call from a friend, i declined, he sends me a message saying can you not hear me? I'm just like "what?". Apparently my skype accepted the call yet I'm not in a call. My skype shows me NOT being in a call. That's really scary. Why did it do that?

You should uninstall your old Skype version and Download again the new version on the Official Website.

Maybe you are infected by a virus.

Good luck man

i have the updated version and got it from skype. I'm not infected. I found out my android phone picks ups my calls when i decline on pc. That's what skype support said.

Maybe your friend is just "trolling" (joking around) with you. Any verification hes being legitimate?

Holy, that's actually very scary LOL

Imagine you are in the middle of something and everyone can hear what you are doing

What you like to explain what you would be in the middle of which would be so important <3?

I assume op demanded verification or asked his friend to be serious..

Also the skype support told him that his android phone would accept calls so it seems legit..

My iphone does the same thing sometimes. Skype for Phone is very buggy/laggy. Also with PC skype.

Not saying you did but maybe in the past you had keys set to answer calls and decline calls. Skype has that option, I don't use it personally but I have friends that accidentally accept calls all the time
Maybe you should look into it man :)

Maybe you have rat on your computer

oldrafiki - July 4, 2014, 8:01 pm

uninstall skype, retart and install. make sure you clear temp folder.

There's an option on skype that auto accepts calls. Check to see if that is checked or not on your phone/pc.

I had this same exact thing. I was in a call with my friend then I left to talk with family and when I hung up they call again and my iphone picked up and they started listening to me it was fucking stupid and I yelled out skype support for a long time.
