Who the fuck are you to think that? I see this going 2 ways now, refund him or get banned for being a scammer. Or in the perfect world, both. Also it wouldnt look to good for your ebook that teaches people how to make 'thousands of $$$' but you cant send someone their own money back.

Don't waste time arguing with someone who isn't going to budge.

File an online report here, and give them information about him.

Try to give them his IP, usernames, Paypal email, etc.

They'll handle it.

Peril, man the fuck up and pay back what you owe.

It shouldn't take this long. If you blocked him and he sent you the money, you should just send it straight back.

Guaranteed you've spent it.

That's my point and my friend still thinks he's going to pay him back which I highly doubt plus he threatened him and made up tons of excuses why he can't pay him such as " I sent the money to my bank " " you're friend messed it up for you " shit like that.

He's just trying to find any possible excuse not to pay back the money that he's already spent.

Your not allowed to pm staff about disputes.....it states in the rules they don't get involved.

Flaxpicker - July 7, 2014, 5:17 pm

It was a pretty dumb move to close the dispute in the first place

If he wanted to send you the money back then all he had to do was press the refund button

How can one be so naive on HF

Nerdss - July 8, 2014, 4:14 am

Such a sad sense of "business character" on the "EBOOK MASTERMIND" himself, lol! Why would someone want to hold $165 and have OP keep nagging him like this? Dude, just give the OP back his money! How you want people to believe you make all this money selling EBOOKS but you can't refund OP back his money? Very poor business logic overall.....

By the way, if people continue to purchase "MONEY MAKING" eBooks from him, I am pretty sure his child sense of business behavior will not change overnight...

OP should have never closed his PP dispute! That didn't make sense at all (limited account or not)! I don't get it..
