Beats are so over rated for the price of them, they aren't worth it.

No .. please.. don't start this topic with people that bought one. You can't win it no matter how good your points are. I've tried so many times already..

Sajuuk - July 8, 2014, 1:48 pm

It's an okay kind of buy. My friend gave me his pair of studios (they had something wrong with the left speaker, a buzzing noise) and I fixed them up. He told me I could keep them, and here they are:

How's the bass? I am a Rap/Rnb fan, so I listen to pretty high bass songs.

The bass is of so-so quality. I have a pair of Skullcandy skullcrushers (with the subwoofer bass amplifier) and those have better bass than my studios (obviously). Still, I'd recommend studios if you're really into beats.

Yokomoto - July 8, 2014, 4:07 pm

You could have ordered fake beats and get the same quality imo.

(Jul 8, 2014 04:07 PM)Yokomoto Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) You could have ordered fake beats and get the same quality imo.

Hell yes, I used to order a couple fake sets of studios ($25 per set, brand new) each month and sell them for $275 each. I've tested the quality of each one, and they were all comparable to real beats. The pair in my photo above are real ones given to my from a friend, though.

Act. - July 8, 2014, 4:37 pm

I would rather go out with the real ones then fakes.

They all just need something to bitch about cause they're stuck up cunts. Nice purchase op. All that matters is that you like them you didn't buy them for the community lol.

Because I've had my hands on headphones that cost less and have touched beats before, and it's a noticeable difference.
