Looking forward to it :)

Thanks for all the feedback everyone. Feel free to post any questions!

Rapierz - July 5, 2014, 7:18 am

Is the name jSpy or jStealth? Im quite confused on the introduction ?

King Cin - July 5, 2014, 7:35 am xVurn knows his stuff about Remote Administration Tools, I don't doubt the product if he's selling it.

DaPiranha - July 5, 2014, 1:18 pm

Vouch for my mate xVul, don't hesitate to purchase this RAT, it works great!

JJ1039 - July 5, 2014, 2:39 pm

jRAT is so buggy and it's features rarely work. It has a very slow remote desktop for example.

jSpy's is a stable RAT and all it's features work great.

jSpy is FUD, jRAT is not.

Trival - July 6, 2014, 6:40 am

Wow, a new HQ tool from you. It's very good indeed.

Vouch all the way !

Currently online available for assistance.

Moon Rock - July 7, 2014, 10:03 am why are you scanning the stub in a rar? No AV's will detect nothing if it's in a rar. I recommend that you scan the exe.

That is not true. Compressing files will not hide detections.

Stubs are in .jar nor .exe as this is a Java RAT. No disitributing scanners apparently do not scan .jar files.

eBuddy - July 7, 2014, 1:00 pm jSpy is nothing like jRAT apart from the fact that both are coded in Java.

No we do not sorry. However if you are having problems with setting up a RAT you can take a look at our jSpy setup tutorial. <https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=4322644>

Must Needed:

password stealer

sound capture

Control Keyboard

Nice To have:

Disable Mouse and keyboard

Disable monitor

Reverse Proxy

Botkill

make it not work in vm/sandbox

Not needed, but would be cool:

Plugin Section like nanocore

Because Java is executed in a the JVM as bytecode, and it is not possible to interract properly with ASM or any Windows API easily.

The only way would be dropping the DLL ... -> This is over detected and noob shit.

Although jSpy offers a 100% FUD stub it will still get detected after some time, weeks or months. As soon as it gets detected we will update to FUD immediately.

Having a private stub ensures that your stub will not get detected anytime soon, possibly never because you are the only one spreading it.

I can vouch for the jSpy plugin system. It is simple but powerful and very versatile. While I haven't finished any plugins yet, the work I have done so far has proven how good it is.

The plugin feature has been mostly added so people can develop thier own plugins.

So it depends on the developers who will be adding plugins.

Java is preinstalled on most computer brands when being manufactured.

That is Chrome letting you know that .jar files can be dangerous. Does not necessarily mean it is.

No it's totally normal, that happens with all .jar files and there's no way to bypass it. It also happens with .exe files and other extensions which could be used maliciously.

For sure. I'll probably rework the entire file explorer soon. Including renaming files, moving them, copy/cut/paste, file previews, actual icons etc.

I hope all these features will not make the stub no more FUD. :D

I also have other suggestions:make login more comfortable, clear automatically the textbox upon focus to avoid delete "username" and the dots of the password.

show the info message every 10 logins and not after every login include my Jspy .exe stub maker xD fix "download and execute"... i tested it several times but it seems to has no effects make the stub work on every pc account prevention to not open the stub with softwares different of java: the stub can wrongly be opened with winrar/7zip etc.

I also have a question. How secure the login is about privacy? Are the ip stored in a log or not stored at all?

- I'll work on the login, I'll probably make custom controls.
- The tos remains after each login.
- I'll look into exe output, however there are many resources online that will do this for you.
- Download and execute works fine, make sure it's a direct link.
- I'm not sure if this is possible within the scope of the JVM but I'll look into it.
- Again, not sure if this is even possible, jar files are archives after all.

IP's aren't logged and your passwords are hashed with md5 before being used to login.

Private stub normalls last months FUD.

jSpy is always updating frequently with new features and added stability.

Hi there! I'm looking to write a password recovery plugin in the coming days. It'll probably only be compatible with windows though. Anonmooskaab's disable webcam lights plugin is already prepackaged with jSpy.

Feel free to write a personal locker plugin, I will however not provide it with jspy because it is not malware.

I'll definitely look into deleting browser information/cookies.

I might write a locker plugin as I see a couple of ways to use it legitimately, but I might put restrictions in place to prevent using it as a survey locker/ransomware (I strongly dislike these).

What about the password recovery? I personally would find this useful as I use the program to remote admin for a company I work for.

twollybangin - August 2, 2014, 11:24 am

Zak, is there any chance you can add a feature to change which webcam to view from your client. I have many cam installed and cyberlink and just my main webcam on my client. Because right now it just views it on a selected camera, not a specific one. It would also allow us to know if we have a webcam, or it will work. So, like if it shows that there is no camera to select we know that webcam capture is the problem if it does have a webcam.

Thanks

thank you jSpy has a disable webcam light plugin, you can use that.

Don't worry nothing is stored in the clipboard.

jSpy stubs last FUD for months. The stub has been FUD since release, as soon as it gets detected it will be updated instantly.

Amazing. how about the speed of the RAT itself?

EDIT: Regarding the output stub, it is not .exe anymore but .jar right? If so, I am guessing my victim must have Java installed in order to get "infected".

Yes although java is preinstalled in most computers.

Vulnerable, you need to add a melt option, so that the jar file itself melts after being open'd instead of people not being able to delete it and get suspicious :p

My Score with this product and serviceGreat product and beautiful Graphical user interface overall I am very pleased multi platform remote access tool is a plus

Support is not easy to get by but the good part of this product is that it is easy to use and there is a simple beginner set up tutorial on hack forums

Many updates and many improvements made frequently

My score is 5/4 just because of support accessibility but this is one of the best if not the upcoming must have of multiplatform remote access tools of this year. I am waiting for more plugins ;) Thanks xVulnerable for the quality product!

jSpy is a really good Java RAT. It's really stable so you can really rely on it. But, I'd love a melt option so they cannot find the actual file downloaded. That'd be awesome.

captainil - August 18, 2014, 3:20 am

I just bought jSpy for $35 and I would like to share some thoughts.

1) When victim opens Client.jar from desktop, the stub stays in Desktop which is VERY bad and not hidden. The stub must copy itself somewhere to %appdata% and melt itself instead of running it directly from where its located. There must be an options in Builder which lets you specify a directory where stub will run from.

2) You can only input 1 server(s) which client.jar will try to connect to which is also bad because there's no backups hosts.

3) Stub startup doesn't work everytime! - which is the WORST.

4) Also, there's no 'process mutex' and sort doesn't work which is not a big deal.

5) Stability is not so good.

Other than that, stub is 100% FUD.

I really hope you will fix these 3 important issues asap. (shouldn't be so difficult)

I'd say this RAT is far away from being finished.

I wouldn't buy this unfinished rat if I knew all these problems.

I really feel I wasted $35.

I would recommend you (xVulnerable) to check out CrimsonRAT and its features (its an open-source BETA java rat)

Lexica - August 20, 2014, 3:52 pm

Jspy currently will just not open , after I enter my login credentials it won't open. And no its not myside this time. Because it's been running fine haven't changed my java version or deleted it. Don't know why today all of a sudden it wont open cembry90 - August 20, 2014, 7:34 pm

Hi xVulnerable,

I recently purchased jSpy using another username (not the one I use on HackForums) but forgot my password. There's not a way to reset it on the jSpy site (just login...) and I tried adding you on Skype but you said your laptop is broken. So I'm unable to use this right now. Please contact me either via PM, Skype, or even email. The username that I signed up with on the site was ratbox[...] and my serial is aa532252[...].

Thanks for a nice program!

VERY tempting purchase. Looking forward to the melt option and audio capture feature.

If purchased in it's current non-melting version, does jSpy have to be executed from the desktop or default download folder? Can it be run in any location? Also, can it be hidden after executing it?
Thanks man.

jSpy is and has been FUD since release. It will be updated as soon as stubs get detected. Having a private stub ensures that you will only be the one using that stub so it will probably never get detected.

Wait can you make plugins for this in java?

OMGNEEDSLEEP - August 24, 2014, 9:13 am

This looks like a much better rat than darkcomet and such. Glad its not coded in vb.net.

Anyhow, to infect a computer, the "slave" will need to have java installed on their computer, with some sort of the latest update?

Also, is this persistant and if you add it to startup, in what folder does the file executes from the slaves computer?

I havent used jar files to infect before, so im curious, can you send these over gmail or such, without zipping them?

I didnt find any information about this, but is there a built in icon changer? If not, can you change the jar icon+filename?

Just wanna be certain. =)

Good product, answer it and i most certianly gonna buy it.

techy1 - August 24, 2014, 11:14 am

The file executes from the same location it was saved it. The process can be killed from task manager and restart automatically upon computer restart. Some email providers block extensions such as .exe and .jar. You can change the extension to .exe but currently there is no icon changer. That doesn't mean it will not be added. jSpy is new.

hmm does screen capture include only taking snaps (photos) of victims screen or it can remote control the screen too like remote desktop connection. and how can the stub be fud if the client itself isnt? and can i like bind the jar (stub) file to any other type other file with utility that's included in the software?

Blu? - August 28, 2014, 6:41 am

Could anyone assure me on the stability of the desktop and webcam capture? After using jrat, both functions result in the mac osx being disconnected (due to errors within the code i presume) . An indication to what quality these features are would defiantly result in a purchase.

For an example, would you say the capture functions are comparable to darkcomet ?

Thankyou, blue.

I know that you were expecting an answer from a customer but it seems no one responded to your answer. I personally used both darkcomet and jrat and they were honestly not even usable. I can assure you jSpy's features are more stable.

Disable Webcam Lights only effects a handful of webcams, and it does so by changing a registry value that controls if the webcam's light should be on during use. I believe all of the webcams it disables the light on are for windows.

Hi Guys

I am new on here ..but i have been looking for a RAT for a while.

I am no coder :(...but "back in the day" had some real fun when Sub7 was launched

..yeah . I am old..in fact i was old then LOL.

But i dont need this for fun. I need it to sort a problem, and I only have a SMALL amount of time (window) to get it done.

I only have several minutes access to my old computer ..VERY soon.

After that I will no longer be able to go to my office...basically the department is being moved and we are all fired, they call it "redundancy" in the UK ..but its the same st. Big company saves money and outsources abroad ...blah, blah, blahthankyou for 7 years workbye bye

Anyway ..I have personal stuff on my PC, work I did, customer contacts, files etc, NOTHING that i did not do myself!

and i want to keep it...Now we are in another room, but can go in there for small time to get stuff. So i need.

- a) Something that can be installed VERY FAST
- b) Something that is undetectable for now
- c) something compatible that will run on W7 workstation

I would like to be able to delete it once i am finished ..not essential

I was reading about this Jspy and the fact it was Java and am worried i will get to the PC and find that Java wont run and i might have to install itwhich would effectively KILL the last attempt i will get advice is appreciated from you guys in the know. Of course i will pay for the right solution. please PM me fast before someone asks ..pen drives are READ only on this system i.e ...you cant copy to an external drive ..we used to use dropbox and stuff, before they whacked that too LOL

PPS

the payment link doesnt seem to work for Paypaljust in case you didnt know regards

John

Java is preinstalled in most computers while being manufactured so you don't need to worry about that.

Paypal link works fine, <http://jspy.net/buynow/>

JohnCandy - August 31, 2014, 2:59 am thanks XV ..I had read that also, but seem to remember on occassion getting asked to "install java virtual machine" for some app or other, has anyone on here found that happens?

i read also about custom stubs and also an executable vesion would it be of benefit to get a personal stub ..eve though i will only need to access the PC for the next few weeks MAX?

Would the executable version be easier to install on the host?

I take it the jar file is installed via copying it over and right mouse-click Run withjava?

PS paypal link now working :)

ok, i guess everyone is busywell it IS Sunday :)

Can you tell me after i pay, how do i get the download link, reg-code, etc is it right away.

Its not I am not trusting, honest. Just in a rush

Hello i'm very interested about this R.A.T but i have few questions...

Can i rename the server.jar ? for exemple : picture.jar ? Or change exstention ? Like .pif , exe etc..

The plugging of webcam works for all webcam ? Have you got other plugins ?

Jspy can infect all Os ? Only Java is required ?

How many time the public stub is FUD ? same question for private stub ? We have to pay $ 25 once for a private stub or several times?

Jspy is fast like Njrat or other rat on this forum ?

What is the most important option will be added for next update ?

Thanks for your future answer :)

Yes you can rename the file name. However it is impossible to rename the extension to .png, .jpeg etc.

You can use either .jar or .exe with jSpy.

The webcam disable plugin does not work on all webcams, it depends on the type of webcam. jSpy can "infect" all OS with java installed. Java is preinstalled in Windows on most computers while being manufactured.

The public stub is FUD but will eventually get detected and I will have to push an update to reFUD. I you won't want your public stub to get detected, not having to wait for me to refud and having to update your server on your current clients with the new server you should purchase a private stub which will most likely never get detected. Yes it's fast like njRAT. I have nothing in mind right now but i'm always looking for improvements.

JohnCandy - September 1, 2014, 7:29 am

And Norton Sonar will detect the file (STUB) made through jSpy as "suspicious" (this is not equal to detect it as malware) with the consequence of appearing a pop-up?

It's only because the file has a low "community rating" in Norton SONAR because it is very new, few users use it, it isn't yet fully trusted (but not fully untrusted), and isn't digitally signed. Otherwise SONAR shows nothing.

Indahood - September 3, 2014, 12:57 am

So then I suppose any crypter which can bypass proactives like sonar or a good rat like this one, all that can do in both of cases it's don't let SONAR show a red pop-up indicating that my stub is malware but on the other hand it shows another pop-up indicating that the file is not totally trusted giving to the user 2 options, the first one is remove it and the second one run it.

Am I right?

It might be just me, but I have difficulty selecting a user. When I left click to choose, it instantly deselected. I have to right click quick after left clicking to get the drop menu with the functions. This makes it impossible for me to use remotely on my phone.

waterbottle - September 11, 2014, 5:25 am

My experience so far with jSpy after a few days:

I've successfully installed the RAT on over 100 PCs and so far only 4 connected to the RAT.

Sometimes one victim connected 5 times at the same time over 5 different ports.

Connection to the victims is regularly lost. Problem wasn't on my side since the client is running on a 1 GBPS VPS.

The startup option doesn't seem to work like it should since it asks permission of the user to run on startup. Or maybe it was just the case in my own VirtualMachine I tested it in, I can't tell if that is always the case. It was a freshly installed Windows 7 with no AV or any other anti malware software.

The RAT itself works fine if the connection holds up and the victim is connected to your RAT. Keylogging, saving files from the victims PC to your own PC and showing the victims desktop work fine. I don't like the design of the file manager but that's okay since it gets it's job done fairly well. This RAT really is FUD as advertised.

Contact over Skype with xVulnerable was okay, he seems pretty friendly, although that won't help my problems.

You know what, thats exactly what im having problem with.

The startup function isnt stable, the connection is being dropped constantly, so sadly its not stable. All the other function is great but that doesnt matter when the rat disconnects and just loses from the victims computer.

Glad to hear that I'm not the only one having these problems. Really thought it was me who was doing something wrong.

xVulnerable we would really appreciate if you could update the RAT to make it stable.

Yep, such a shame though. Many rats are like these, luxnet is the same, not as worse but its not stable either.

The only product i can vouch for now, is NanoCore.

So to be clear if I bought jSpy you would help me setup a R.A.T in order to monitor my other computer? Or would you recommend me to a video of some sort.

I dont know. Someone that's never handled any R.A.T stuff could do anything if he makes a purchase? Or is there any place for new comers to learn stuffs before purchase. I really need to get a working logger or R.A.T to monitor my workers on other computers.

People are not being connected to jSpy anymore. The port is not blocked. The DNS is right. What's going on?

Honestly I think it just started working again. Also, I my firewall might have been blocking return info from slaves. But there are time when I have a number of slaves like 5 or whatever and i know they're online and when I update the connection I'll lose most of them and can't reconnect. I have theory about slaves and why they sometime disappear but I don't want to talk about it on his sales thread.

jSpy's stability is just fine. They need to allow macro to run in the Word file.

I used stealth mode while targeting mac and it keeps saying the the java jar file "client.jar" could not be launched. It works fine when i don't select it but it leaves a java icon in the application bar open.

He means if people don't know how to use a RAT to begin with. If you go into this with no experience then you are going to have some type of issue.

The RAT is great. I've had it for a month or so now and it works flawlessly for me.

Spoiler \(Click to View\) Although we offer a 100% FUD guarantee that does not mean your file will stay FUD forever. Once we detect a detection jSpy will be updated and any detections will be removed. Unique stubs will generate you a unique server with a different encryption algorithm. I really do not like comparing jSpy with other RATs in respect to their owners.

There's any VPN that you can link me that works with jSpy? Because I've purchased so many, and till now can't see slaves side servers online. Or it's jSpy problem?

Any VPN that supports portforwarding. You need to have open ports in order for jSpy to work.

simply buy a vpn with dedicated plan accepting portforwarding and you're done , for exemple nvpn.net is very good is anyone bought it directly from credit card ? because i don't have a paypal yet and creating a new one will take some days/thanks in advance for your replies and very nice project !!!

- 3) can be glued together with another file?

Hoping for update soon.

EvilNerd - October 8, 2014, 3:46 pm

This looks very good but I have some question:

When a osx user run the jar files does it run immediately or show some annoying dialog asking the user to confirm it or warns him in another way ?

It will be updated in case of detection ?

I saw the last AV scanning and AVG detect it ?

Does someone think that AVG have spies here ?

I mean someone who buy rat and crypter and analyze it to make it detectable.

Will not show anything if stealth mode feature is ticked.
Yes we update on major detections.
Also users were unable to login last night due to CloudFlare interfering. All is good now.

I don't agree with that, even if you thick stealth mode the server exe and the maps jsplugins and jslogs are still vissible on the victims computer in the users own map.

Anyone know how to contact Zakary?

xVulnerable says that he can't help me because I don't have a serial key, but a serial key was never provided to me because I purchased this under Zakary when it first came out 3 months ago.

Do the licenses not transfer or something? I have proof of purchase. I have my virtual item #. I sent Zakary a PM 10 days ago, but he hasn't responded to me.

Shoeman555 - October 23, 2014, 11:02 pm

Purchased it, works well

GUI confusing at first but simplicity of setup was cool

We offer a 100% FUD GUARANTEE! Current scan detection 0/60!

What is a private stub?

Spoiler (Click to View) Although we offer a 100% FUD guarantee that does not mean your file will stay FUD forever. Once we detect a detection jSpy will be updated and any detections will be removed. Unique stubs will generate you a unique server with a different encryption algorithm. You visit the official website and then enter your login details.

Once logged on, you navigate to the "download" tab and download the file.

Hakuna Matata - November 8, 2014, 5:31 am

My PM's gets ignored and there's a lot of things that doesn't work.

- The stability is so bad, if you exit jSpy and re-open it again, your clients will not appear until they re-open the program or restart their PC. In some cases, they're gone forever.

- The download and execute on connection is not working.

- Using basic features such as remote desktop will in some cases somehow crash the victim and you'll lose your victim.

- After having jSpy open for 24 hours on a dedicated server, installing the stub on the server, I could see in the logs that the server wasn't even connected to the RAT most of the time. It disappeared and reappeared all the time.

- The remote desktop is extremely laggy, even when used local. When used on a PC a few countries away from you.. Yeah, good luck.

I would've sent this in a PM, if it wasn't for the fact that they all get ignored.

I regret purchasing this so bad.

Also, the only thing that actually gets answered in this thread is buying requests.

ev0xfrost - November 8, 2014, 6:43 pm so far I'm fairly impressed with jSpy - its a little rough running on ubuntu, which is my only complaint. Though some of this could just be my misunderstanding of RAT, admittedly.

Regardless, I am having some trouble figuring out what level of privilage the client and server are required to be ran in. Running the server as root right now, and the client as not.

Seems to be fine except the client will crash when I try webcam capture, which is ofc not acceptable.

On other another note: since this is java based, it has the potential to also be updated to work with android, and that's something I'm very interested in. I've done a lot of work with android, and I'm fairly certain that, although it will need a rewritten client, android infection can be incorporated into jSpy.

Additionally, my understanding is that there's a lot of proxy services and other forms of anonymity features jSpy current lacks. So that is also a point of expansion.

What are your ambitions with jSpy? Keep us updated???

h4ck_hth - November 8, 2014, 7:29 pm

Hi everyone since this RAT can infect MAC operating system? How stable it is and your short review comment? What is important for me at the moment when infecting MAC OS are the Keylogger and File Manager option.

EvilNerd - November 10, 2014, 8:17 am

Jspy has some downside, but was almost fud, until some days ago, and above all undetected from the damned bitchdefender, an antivirus that drive me mad. I sent the server, undetected.. win !

A quite annoying thing is the file transfer that is quite awkward, since all files has to copied and renamed one for one.

I've created a batch command for files mass downloading.
I can post it here if someone is interested.

I send the "slave" a text box and it popped up and worked, they were telling me about it. But, all of a sudden the screen capture died and they were gone off of my list. I restarted jSpy and they do not appear on my list ever again until they restart their computer (I had Startup checked)

Any tips?

Works on Windows, Linux and Mac.

32bit 64 bit doesn't make a difference.

Both server and client will work as long as the computer is able to execute java applications.
Will not work on android.

I talked to xVul... I bought his SJDB and JSPY too but neither of them work. I got so mad that jspy didn't work I made my own java rat that was mac and windows compatible. Very little features not a lot but at least it works on mac. You can close tasks on mac and windows. Also for mac you can give them a jar (what you give to the victim to get access to computer) but they are able to close it. So then I went on my mac and started searching around so i notice i have to make it a .app on mac so the app isn't visible on the menu bar or even anywhere. So wow i made that work. I then went on my mac and started coding a only mac rat works but i don't know who would want a mac rat only app. It only runs on mac and works for mac. If this sounds like advertise it isn't. If it is ill edit post and remove what i said and make a thread.

Is there a way to have it auto delete itself after let's say 3 hours? Any way for it to auto remove its registry entries as well leaving no trace?
Yes it can look through files silently. You can uninstall it using the uninstall feature.

You can buy jSpy from www.jspy.net

Ok, the rat works very good but I've noted that when server starts for the first time the windows firewall warns and ask a permission for a new connection. This is not a big issue, since even the user clicks "deny" the rat works the same, but if this could be avoided would be great.

- The stability is so bad, if you exit jSpy and re-open it again, your clients will not appear until they re-open the program or restart their PC. In some cases, they're gone forever.
- The download and execute on connection is not working.
- Using basic features such as remote desktop will in some cases somehow crash the victim and you'll lose your victim.
- After having jSpy open for 24 hours on a dedicated server, installing the stub on the server, I could see in the logs that the server wasn't even connected to the RAT most of the time. It disappeared and reappeared all the time.

- The remote desktop is extremely laggy, even when used local. When used on a PC a few countries away from you.. Yeah, good luck.

I would've sent this in a PM, if it wasn't for the fact that they all get ignored.
I regret purchasing this so bad.

REVIEW:

Usability: 10/10 VERY Simple, I mean just look at the stub builder!

FUD (Time of scan 22/11/2014 09:53:58): 2/34 PRETTY GOOD

I expect it detected the virus because A: It was in exe form or B: It has been uploaded to a distributing service like virustotal.

MAY BE FIXED SOON!

Design: 8/10 Nothing special at all, but it looks clean and is easy to navigate.

Support: Havent contacted for any reason, assume good.

OVERALL: I reccomend this RAT, I set it up in 1 MINUTE! It is fucking great.

Hello xVulnerable,

I have a few questions and I hope you don't mind me asking within this thread. I am extremely interested in testing and using your rat for white hat type use. I currently own most of the rats available on HF and previous ones such as BS, IM & NC e.t.c (not saying names as not advertising others in the thread e.t.c) and would be really interested in this with its own unique stub as it needs to remain undetectable for when services like TeamViewer don't work and other AV is in place and I have wasted alot of money and time on crypters to bypass AV detection. All the work I do is clean and authorized by the owner/client but it often turns into complications trying to get them to add exemptions to their AV. So being FUD is as important to me doing white hat as it is to someone doing otherwise.

Anyway my questions:

Does jSpy..

Have direct registry editing tools?

Can you kill running processes?

Is it possible to show that it is running using a custom icon (taskbar/tray)?

How good is remote desktop FPS and can you disable user input?

Is the remote chat scary or clean looking client-side?

What versions of java are supported client-side?

Does it require delay time to remain FUD to real-time protection?

And lastly if I have a private stub and use it legally with fully acceptance of the client will it remain undetectable?

Thank you for your help.

I don't see anything that could make jSpy out of business anytime soon. Currently, jSpy is on auction but not because it is out of business, trust me.

The stub is updated one every few weeks. Stubs last FUD a very long time, very. Eventually detections will start coming. Once a significant amount of detections increase the stub will be updated to FUD. Some users complain because they actually think it's FUD for life. Private stubs are like a normal stub, but they last FUD for a LONGER time than public ones.

eh it said he would email you within 1-18h its been 4 days since i purchased. PM'd and Skyped him with no answer. yet he logs in here daily and pays to sticky this thread.

disputed my payment and he answered me in under 6hours.
he now terminated my account in which he never gave me and is fighting to keep my money. 10/10 best service yet.

lucky for me he wrote he closed the account and such in the dispute ticket so now that hes taken back what he never gave me, its an easy refund via paypal support.

right im not new to this, I have tested the dns tested the port forwarding .. unfud? with a loopback address on a test machine on a rat that's suppose to be UNFUD to start with and doesn't need crypting???

Firewall off? now im little insulted tbh.

The clients do not run period on any test machine i have tried. I need the owner to answer me here as I seem to have a product that is not fit for purpose.

I have been through all of these issues with Icrypt before his account got cancelled sent screen shots ect, test in VM... there is nothing to show the clients do nothing. I am very frustrated.

They are both Java rats, so somewhere down the line some of the code is going to be pretty much the same. Whatever part of the file was tagged and labeled as C.JRat, the same code was found in your file and so was identified as C.JRat.

Edit: The same way some crypters are detected as others. An example on this would be X crypter having a detection called (for example) Kazy.xxxx because the 2 will share a hell of a lot of code from the encryption/injection/execution.

I guess we do use the same obfuscator and the classes it creates has been detected in jRAT, which has been used a lot for years, (remember that jRAT has been freeware), and other programs which use the same obfuscator also gets detected. I've seen at least one program here on HF which was flagged as jRAT but showed up to be one of the classes from the obfuscator.

I want a refund please.. Your program is not fud at all. AntiVir Free version even found it... and got deleted.

or atleast give me some help.. it doesnt even connect to any yosemite mac..? i tested on my other laptop with yosemite on it..

So what I did was this:

I followed the whole tutorial. I set up the jar. the only difference I did was stealth mode and Start up checked.

So I sent the jar file via yahoo to my friend who also has yahoo. And there the trouble started. He couldnt even download it. I said ok.. I should maybe pack it into a .rar File.. so I sent it in a rar file.. again... he couldnt download it.. okay then i decided to send it via wetransfer.. it worked..he downloaded but then all the sudden when he wanted to click on it it said: you need java runtime.. okay.. downloaded, installed java.. everything fine.. but then he clicked on it again and on mac there came a security pop up. You cant install apps from not verified users. My point is. How the hell do I bypass all this stuff. I get it java is essential. but the whole process?.. Should I try to bind it to a certified app? Please help me someone .. Im getting desopeate.. or at least if theres a support email or skypeplease let me know. I cant pm yet.. :/

Oh btw. even after he clicked finally the jar file.. it popped up.. but on my pc it wasnt even connected :D

Seems to have issues with the three way hand shake in my virtual machine. The client will drop the connection constantly. TCPView shows that on the slave computer the process will listen, and it does get added to the reg as a startup process. About 5 times if the server is executed it will "establish" a connection to port 3175, but on my host machine JSpy will not show a new connection.

Seems hit or miss. Could be Firewall issues on my end but I doubt it as it will connect at times. Firewalls are either off or custom ruleset exceptions added. Strange...
