I'm thinking of turning down my CC a little bit.

Tried same layer styles on a person, here is what happened!

This filter is obviously meant for a banner, but it helps you see more of the actual crispness and sharpness of the effects in the filter on a person.

I like the changes made on the Typo, and the two lines. But I prefer original colors, they are nice.

the first one without the edit makes it look better.

But still good job

All you did really is added the two lines and overlayed a CC on top of the image. And yes OP, the CC is too strong because the water (on the right) is purple now. Can't really rate it because no originality in it really.

Look more closely :)

You have to of been doing graphics designing for a while to be able to spot some of the actual differences like the gradient mapping, textures and filters.
