REMEMBER TO USE SPOILERS FOR ANYTHING AHEAD OF THE MANGA

Crunchyroll link: <http://www.crunchyroll.com/akame-ga-kill/>

Albert - July 7, 2014, 12:55 am

I Haven't watched it, but I heard it's pretty good, what's your opinion?

Viral Dragon - July 7, 2014, 12:58 am

I just watched the first episode today. At first, I didn't think it was bad, but it wasn't like "good" either. It was kind of like "Eh meh". Then it got further in, and then I was like "Holy shit, this is more gory than Attack on Titan. That dude is a total badass". Lol.

I will say, I like the characters. I don't know how I feel about the plot yet. The action is damn good. And...overall, I think I need a couple more episodes to decide.

-Viral.

Manny - July 7, 2014, 3:33 am

The anime isn't looking that great but the manga is better.

I know what you mean. In the beginning I thought it was childish, but that changed after the full episode was over. It'll be interesting for sure.

Yanno the problems I have with people comparing LN and Mangas to anime adaptation for the last 5 years, yes 8 out of the 10 Anime adaptations aren't going to be as good as its source. The most recent fuck up is Gokukoku no Brynhildr.

Anyways just judging by the first episode and the low censorship so far, I'm really liking it.

BlakkHeart - July 7, 2014, 4:52 am

The main character is a badass in the making

Black Hole - July 7, 2014, 7:43 am

It's given me a weird vibe so far. The animation style doesn't feel like it matches the general tone and goriness of the series so far. Its like Fairy Tale tried to go hardcore but the only change they made was blood and gore....

Some cliches here and there but not as bad as I first expected. On my watch list for sure.

elemein - July 7, 2014, 9:00 am

On my watchlist for sure.

Easy 7.5/10. Some character designs were craptastic. Animation is good. Music is good.

Gives me an identical feel to Black Cat. Which I loved.

0x1027 - July 7, 2014, 10:24 am

AT the very beginning i was like oh no what have i got myself into..... But at the end i was like so is it next week yet?

Noiz - July 7, 2014, 10:31 am

Thought it was amazing with such twists in it! Although the main character is rather gullible. Spoiler \(Click to View\) that family was too damn nice to not have something evil hidden ;)

Bezo - July 7, 2014, 11:07 am

I went ahead and read the manga and caught up because I've seen so many comments saying that the anime was not up to par to the manga. I sort of agree but not entirely. The anime did a pretty good job is staying almost the same as the manga.

I can't wait for episode two!

Incest - July 7, 2014, 11:57 am

Very glad they gave it an R-17 rating which opens the anime to be gory like the manga. Not anything like the gore-fest of the manga, but that's an obvious downside to an adaptation.

Lacked the first episode production quality I've come to expect from great shows, but whatever I'll keep it on the watch list for now.

Mikasa - July 7, 2014, 12:38 pm

I've been looking forward to this anime for so long. And at the start, i totally thought the animation was so far apart from what i expected. The animation is like Fairy tail/Sword art online, and i couldn't actually see how it would be decent when it comes to gore.

I'm kind of happy that the main character isn't such a pussy, and had no hesitation what so ever to kill that girl. Looking good so far ;)

Ryuujinx - July 7, 2014, 2:31 pm

Well. I did not expect that.

ep1:

Spoiler (Click to View)

I mean sure, after they hinted at the corruption and the assassin guys I expected them to come fuck up the family, but I just assumed Aria was an innocent in this. And then that twist, was like "lol fuck your preconceptions". I enjoyed this episode a lot.

I agree the anime so far is doing a decent job.

But the point being anime adaptations are going to have stuff cut out, doesn't matter if its 12-13 episodes or 24-26. Also censorship does a big role in all of it and of course budget.

Anyways good anime so far.

0x1027 - July 13, 2014, 2:19 pm

Episode 2 was really good. I liked the way it was done and what happened :3

Emoclaw - July 13, 2014, 3:58 pm

Dre™ - July 14, 2014, 12:00 am

This episode was a great one for me as I got to see the fighting animation style of the anime, which I like allot!! Cant wait to see more from night raid next week

Tasemu - July 14, 2014, 2:28 am

I dont even think I will pick this up. The manga hasnt gone anywhere yet and its taking forever to get released. If I decide to watch the anime I will post my views on it ^^

n0ir - July 14, 2014, 3:40 am

Just watched the second episode and I'm really getting into it. Really glad there's 24 episodes, should be a great anime.

Spoiler (Click to View) I really like the almost 'dead' look Tatsumi does when he's about to kill someone.

Also can I just say how amazing this season is, we've got anime like Tokyo Ghoul, SAO 2, Akame Ga Kill! and Tokyo ESP. This is so much better than last season at least.

?Tet? - July 14, 2014, 6:06 am

I've only seen the first episode but I really liked it.

It kind of gave me the feel of Magi or FMAB.

I just hope it can keep up with SAO II's hype.

Tedeschi - July 14, 2014, 8:06 am

This is probably going to be the best anime this season although there are some other good ones.

Spoiler \(Click to View\)

After reading all the manga in 1 day, I feel sad to know that he's gonna date Mine which is the character I like the least in the whole story, wish she had died.

Why is the name of the series "Akame Ga Kill" if Akame is just a secondary character and MC doesn't even fall in love for her

Also am I the only 1 who wishes Mine to die and let Tat fall in love with Esdese?

If you guys are loving the anime, you should definitely check out the manga. It is currently up to 53 chapters. The anime is ending at 12 episodes so if you're really craving some more, you should head over the kissmanga (they have the entire chapter on one page). Also if you watch Tokyo Ghoul, its manga is at 140 chapters and is A LOT better than the anime.

Tokyo Ghoul manga > Anime

Akame Ga Kill Anime >= Manga.

The anime does a good enough job or a great job depending on what episode you want to talk about.

But it is true that some anime, not akame, are worse than the manga.

Very very rarely is the case of manga vs anime leaning to one side, it's purely a mix between two things.

First, whichever you see first nearly always trumps what comes second. What you see gives you an expectation, with this expectation you are let down because of changes; things you're not familiar with automatically equal bad and/or done wrong while in actuality it was done perfectly fine.

Second, the scum of the earth: Elitists. This is seen everywhere in anime, most commonly in sub v dub, but it applies here as well. When a weaboo sees his senpai blabber on about how mangas always "do it right" they mindlessly follow is many words of wisdom.

Anime, like everything in the world is 90% sheep trying to make Damn sure they're in the herd.

Ken Kaneki - September 1, 2014, 8:53 am

I never said that the Akame ga Kill manga was better than the anime. They are almost identical. I didn't know that the anime is going up to 24 episodes, that's nice to know.

I do think that the Tokyo Ghoul manga is better because of the pacing. As to what one user said about what ever you see first trumping the other, that is true in a lot of cases. But when you compare them side by side and the anime skips a lot of content in the manga that helped to develop the story and characters, you can argue that the manga is better because of it having more content. I'm not saying that your a moron or you are wrong for saying the anime is better, I'm just saying that there is evidence there to argue that it is better. This is just for Tokyo Ghoul of course, so don't assume I'm saying this for all manga.

Manga isn't necessarily always better than the anime, but with series that only have 12 episodes, instead of waiting for it to come back with another season, you can simply read the manga which has progressed a lot more. Instead of waiting 12 weeks for Akame ga Kill to finish, you can read the manga that is currently up to 53 and get the same experience.

If you want to see a manga that is vastly superior to its anime adaption, look at Rosario + Vampire's manga.

You're right I'm the one acting like a dick for sticking up for someones opinions that you were attacking. That is by far the cutest thing I've read on these forums.

Great you don't like watching it, but why does that give you the right to go out of your way to insult someone?

Didn't notice this edit, I'm not insulting him, or maybe I am. Either way, Naruto is scum and if you think it's anything beside that you need to watch more anime or put a bullet to your head.

Akame ga Kill is by far better than Naruto. I can see it being like Attack on Titan(not really), maybe if he's talking about them working like a team.

Yeah, Akame ga Kill is pretty generic when it comes to shounen, but way better than Naruto and the manga is also great as well. Naruto has massive filler episodes and has been milked for way to long now. The show is keeps getting dragged on and has become Westernized. It's pathetic, if I'm an elitist for thinking Naruto is trash then so be it. I'm not going to praise every anime, especially ones that are considered shit by pretty much the entire anime community.

I know you want a ton of attention for "standing up" against me and look like the tough guy who stands up for people on the internet from others opinions, but let's try to not go too far offtopic. You can PM me if you want to drag this argument out, but I doubt you will since people can't see it.

I'm predicting they're going to make a huge dramatic scene where esdeath fights the general for control of tatsumi, that sounds like more her style.

I have a feeling Tatsumi is gonna get way better with his I.A. in some way similar to Issei in DxD. Before Bro died (rip, nevr forget) he said something about the armor being upgraded on Tatsumi's body. Hopefully anyway, that armor has some serious badass potential.

Yeah, but this is a discussion thread for the akame anime. I don't know if a spoiler posted here is a spoiler for the anime in case someone haven't caught up 100% yet, or if it's a spoiler for the manga. When people keep posting in spoilers like that I don't want to open them in fear of it being from the manga. I'm pretty sure others too feel that way, so putting a "Manga spoiler" or "Anime spoiler" in the spoiler title would be ideal and we could all live happily.

Episode 6:

Spoiler (Click to View)I did not see Sheele's death coming :(

Yeeeeeah, I don't wanna grow too attached to any characters in this show.

Shouldn't open unless you're past like episode 6 (Click to View)Looks like they all might just die any time, I also expect whoever is going to fight Esdeath to die except for MC, or something like that when it happens. Like, MC and two others fight Esdeath, they die for it but MC makes it out alive with killing her etc etc. This is all speculation tho, for all I know Esdeath might join Night Raid or whatever

What pisses me off is that some jackass somewhere told me something that would be an absolute major spoiler but I don't know if it's true. And quite frankly, I don't want to know. It's not like I'm gonna google it to find out, because I'd rather live with just a bigger possibility of it happening than actually knowing that it's true. I'd be sad if it's true.

(Maybe) Akame manga spoiler, don't fucking open unless you read the manga or don't care (Click to View)Akame dies

I kind of find the spoiler hard to believe, mostly because I'm just putting this in a spoiler because it's rather obvious what the spoiler is if I just say this (Click to View) the title of the anime is Akame
But considering how volume 2 of the manga (Akame ga Kill! Zero) takes place before volume 1 (it's about Akame's past as an assassin in the Empire), that spoiler as an ending would be a very possible ending, unless the author has planned to jump in time again to go ahead of volume 1 - however we don't know that yet.

Fuck I seriously hope it isn't true.

Also if you check it and you're eager to tell it, put it in a very noticeable spoiler tag please lol, I do not want to open it ^^

Continuing on this, still manga spoiler (Click to View) If Akame really was to die, I'd rather have it come as a shock while watching the anime and be like NOOOOOO. If it happens now I'm just gonna be sitting here like "oh, so it did happen... well shit, not a surprise" right. fuck this nig actually my second ship. ._. The one I shipped the most was Spoiler (Click to View) Sheele and Tatsumi. They would have been fucking perfect together man. ._.

In spoilers because Sheele fucking dies. Load of shit man.

-Viral.

Spoiler (Click to View) TBH, I didn't really see Sheele and Tatsumi becoming a couple. Sheele felt more like an older sister or a mother to Tatsumi IMO.

Also, my favourite would have to be Tatsumi x Akame and if that's not possible then I'd want Tatsumi x Esdeath :)

Also Akame ga Kill! Zero is still ongoing in itself and only started up last year, I have yet to read it but I can almost guarantee that it does not say anything about the supposed spoiler.

Hope this clears things up. Cheers!

As for shipping, Tatsumi x Esdeath :D

Why I don't see Tatsumi X Akame is she just doesn't seem like the character to want to be held down by a relationship IMO otherwise sure I'd be down for to go for that Tatsumi X Akame.

But for now go Tatsumi X Mine!

._. This is true, I could definitely see that. But I think it should have been given a chance. Lol. I could see why someone would think Akame wouldn't want to be held down by a romantic feeling. But.. On the one hand, she has more than once shown her feelings for Tatsumi. for example: Spoiler \(Click to View\)

Last episode, she didn't want to blow his cover, but she stuck incredibly close to him at all times and at the perfect moment, she practically flew to his side in an instant. And not just to save him I don't think. Lol. Other times include making sure he isn't wounded, or making sure his pride isn't inflating his ego too much.

As per Tatsumi X Esdeath ... Hmm. TBH, this could work. I just don't like what she stands for, but I like the thought that Tatsumi could change her. Lol. Also, I haven't actually watched any of them yet, but what the hell are the Theater ONA's ? Is it like a re-cap or a chibi thing? I don't really want to click on them if it's basically a filler thing. But if it ties into the mainline I'll probably go back to watch them. o_o

Definitely. Another good question I think we should be asking ourselves, is why the Anime is called "Akame Ga Kill" when the main MC (main main character. Lol) is Tatsumi. (Or at least he appears to be.) If the title is centered around Akame, ...Then why so little back story or anything?

More so, what is Tatsumi's overall endgoal going to become? Lead of the revolution? Leader of Nightraid? Leader of the capital?

Will he just eventually leave Night Raid and go back to his poor village? Is his village even still there?? So many unanswered questions. Lol.

Leader of the capital? That's a bit of a stretch. If you noticed, Akame isn't all much noticed in the last few episodes. Maybe this is where the plot thickens or twists, as she will become more involved and the story shifts to her. Also, about your comment about mine. Every shounen has there tsundere, well this seems to have two. Akame and Mine.

Also, this is anime. The backstory will come probably near the end and be all dramatic and emotional. Tatsumi probably crying or shocked and then Akame maybe shedding a few tears, but most of Akame's life story was mentioned already.

Diji - September 23, 2014, 8:24 pm

The sense of "trauma" Akame Ga Kill tries to sell is destroyed by the poor or exaggerated execution.

I mean, at first it was pretty clever how that girl was the way she was in the first episode, but the emotional ties with the main hero's friends are non-existent so there's little impact to that regard.

And when scissor girl Spoiler \(Click to View\) dies... there's also little that was done before-hand to build up emotional ties with the character. Same with the gay guy.

And that whole joke about the enhanced soldier who doesn't feel pain, immediately losing and asking why he lost and his loss being because he doesn't feel pain... the way they tried to "throw that life lesson in" was just really poorly done.

When I saw the first episode I was expecting to see a lot of really clever hide/reveal dark things throughout the story... but nope. Only the first episode had any bit of clever and the rest was like watching a 12 year old trying to pitch something to people in Shark Tank.

At least Tokyo Ghoul - which censored its gore - had a more extreme/well pulled off sense of both physical and mental trauma.

Akame Ga Kill is more like, showing off showy blood scenes for the sake of showing really unrealistic looking drips of blood and people making extreme faces like in Highschool of Despair with no real psychological impact.

Spoiler (Click to View)It's also kind of stupid how the main character just gets the gay guy's weapon as a hand-me-down.

He even becomes a clone of him. I was expecting to see him find his own unique Imperial Arms and increase the depth of the story by having a more interesting weapon. I can only hope from this point on that he becomes a dual-armed person or something since they aren't going the route where he "has the one arm that can counter that ice imperial arms".

The fact that he just becomes a clone of that guy is lame in itself.

In regards to your last spoiler,

I have a feeling (and hope, I have not read the manga) that he will by any means keep evolving that, enhance it or get more Imperial Arms or something like that. Considering the amount of IA that exist, it'd be pretty dull to just give him that like they did, and nothing more. So I have a feeling there's something more to it.

Also this dark stuff you mentioned might occur more in the vol2 of the manga which is about akame's past etc.

Don't. Most of the time I'm kidding, the ending was shit and overall it's pretty mediocre. But it's better than SAO at least. The Ins were enjoyable, the manga was meh. In the anime the ending was rushed and inaccurate. Which is one the reasons Oreimo is coming back, I think in the Winter of 2015.

One of my favorite reviews of SAO:

Spoiler (Click to View)

Quote:Well then. SAO is indisputably one of the most polarizing anime in recent memory. It has devout fans who think it's one of the greatest, haters who think it's trash, and a minority that just says "hey guys can't we all just have different opinions?" I hate the first and last groups with a fiery passion. I feel like breaking down why I think it's awful, so I'm writing a review. Let's get into it, shall we?

Story:

The premise was a somewhat generic one, and "trapped in a video game" has been done numerous times before, but SAO seemed promising. And then the plot did everything wrong. It utilizes time skips to avoid character development and many important events happen off screen and are never mentioned again or properly explained. Once Kirito was in a seemingly impossible to escape situation, but it just skipped to after he survived without ever explaining how he managed it. Because, I guess, that's not as important as filler episodes about Kirito resurrecting some irrelevant chick's bird thingy.

It lacks any amount of tension due to the main character having invincible plot armor and LE EPIC DUBBLE SWORDZ. I'm confused by the point of the double swords. Why was that his special thing? No one else was capable of putting another sword in their other hand? I mean, Jesus, if you're going to give the main character an overpowered weapon at least be creative. The funny thing is that although dual wielding was supposed to be Kirito's unique ability and this idea was drilled into our minds time and time again, other characters are shown dual wielding on several occasions. They seriously put no effort into this series.

The worst aspect of the story was how rushed it was. The first half of the series was full of episodic filler episodes which did not develop the plot and mostly featured episodes about random women falling in love with the blank slate of a main and episodes centered on the uninspired romance between the two main characters. Because of this the episodes that were important to the plot were dealt with very quickly and almost glossed over in the grand scheme of things.

Despite the supposed danger of the game, it seems like you would have to be a complete moron to get killed. Towns are safe, there are teleportation crystals, and boss fights were short and boring and easy. Besides, bosses don't respawn anyway. Then all of a sudden the arc came to an anticlimactic finish, illogically and out of nowhere. There was supposed to be 100 boss battles, but we're only shown a couple that are settled easily. But does SAO stop there? Nonono. It's not nearly bad enough yet.

The entire point of the series was an MMO where you couldn't escape and would die if you lost. While Kirito is, for all practical purposes, invincible anyway, an incident occurs that makes the MMO even less dangerous, effectively killing any kind of promise the original premise had. The second half features even more girls falling for our boring protagonist, a spindly 16 year old gamer inexplicably overpowering a grown man, netorare, kind of-incest, almost-tentacle rape, a world without logic, the degradation of women, and our wonderful protagonist defying all the rules of the game with THE ETERNAL POWER OF LOOOOOVE.
(dude, I don't think that's how the programming works)

Chock full with plot holes, contradictions, deus ex machina, and diaboli ex machina, and devoid of foreshadowing, originality, or subtlety, this is one of the, if not the, worst plots I have ever encountered in any medium. And I've read "120 Days of Sodom."

Art:

Good scenery, but the character design was lacking. The characters were very generic looking and their armor and weapons weren't anything special. There were several atrocities as well.

All of the fairies looked stupid, in my humble opinion. Especially the scary butterfly man. There were a couple instances of obvious mistakes like characters that should be in the background of a fight that disappear then reappear after, but that's nitpicking compared to the real problems with this series.

One weird thing was that Kirito was apparently supposed to look different in the game than he was in real life, based on important un-spoilable plot elements, but he looks exactly the same.

Sound:

Same as the art. It's alright, but that means nothing if the series has no substance. Good sound is just icing on the cake and icing won't make this cake taste any less like shit.

Characters:

Oh, boy. This is the worst part.

Kirito: Kirito is a character who was designed as a blank slate so that losers could insert themselves into his place. He has no personality to speak of. He is the male Kristen Stewart of anime. His only unique trait or real aspect to his character is him being strong. Really. He's so strong people surrender to him without even fighting. He's pretty much perfect for a shut-in loser who's addicted to video games. I mean, only a couple times in the series is he actually challenged because he is an all powerful 1337 b34t3r. Seriously, most of his enemies only hate him because they're jealous.

What is the point of an action series where the protagonist cuts through all of his enemies with the greatest of ease? There was more than one occasion where he died, but did not die because plot armor. Kirito is too cool for the silly rules of (virtual) reality that apply to everyone besides him.

Asuna: She's perfect as well. She's strong, beautiful, and most importantly, good at cooking. She falls in love with Kirito inexplicably and out of nowhere and they just have no chemistry. When you pair a Mary sue up with a blank slate/self-insertion you get a love story on the level of twilight.

I feel like the writers were trying to make her a strong female character at first, but seeing as how well she fits the female gender role, how often she must be the damsel in distress, and all the shameless fanservice, I'd say the portrayal of her character was archetypal to the highest degree and somewhat misogynistic. Ok, very misogynistic. She's mostly here for Kirito to look cool. What kind of self-insert doesn't have a Mary sue girlfriend?

Suguha: She's Kirito's sister-cousin thingy. She's clearly very stupid because she did not recognize Kirito even though he looks no different in the game than he does in real life. All I can say about her besides that is this: she was thrown in for extra fanservice, obligatory incest, (Why is this a thing in Japan? Is the birth rate issue that bad?) a half-assed and predictable love triangle, and for another girl to love Kirito because, hey, you can never have too many. She has no personality and she's annoying. She's pretty much here to emphasize Kirito's coolness.

Villains: I don't remember these guys's names tbh. There was a MMO designer guy who was responsible for a bunch of people's deaths, but for some reason we're supposed to think is good. There's also the butterfly guy. He was my favorite because he was so hilarious, but he was also my least favorite because he was the least threatening villain ever. There were also two purple tentacle guys. I don't really know who they are and I think they were just there to grope Asuna, but they were weird.

As a whole the villains either have unrealistic motives or no motives at all. With the original programmer guy they try to make a morally grey villain, but fail entirely. He is also there to make Kirito look cool, but for reasons that I cannot describe in a spoiler-free review. With butterfly man they make him too pathetic and unrealistically evil. He was made like this to contrast with Kirito and so, like everybody else in the series, he's just there to make Kirito look cool. And I don't know wtf to say about the purple tentacle guys. They were probably the best villains though. The desire to tentacle rape is certainly the most believable motive I encountered in this anime, especially seeing as most characters never even offered one. Although that is like saying that they are the undisputed champions of the Special Olympics, congrats to them anyways.

Honestly there were a lot more antagonists, but these ones are the only ones that matter enough to me to write about. The others weren't memorable enough to criticize. They were all bad, let's just say that.

Everybody else: Because nobody else matters. Hell, I just put in Suguha to be nice and it's not like the villains actually matter because Kirito is pretty much invincible. Shit, Asuna only matters because she pleases Kirito. If Asuna didn't make such boss sandwiches, she wouldn't even be relevant to the story.

There are a couple recurring characters with no personality and no development, but they show up rarely and only to make Kirito look cool and/or fall in love with him.

There are several incidents where Kirito inexplicably befriends or makes acquaintance of characters devoid of personality who do nothing, but get killed. And then we're supposed to care about the death of these random characters. You can't just introduce random characters, kill them, and say "ohhhh dey died isnt dat saaaad." You need development.

Even worse is the thousands of unidentified characters that die early on in SAO. We're supposed to feel emotion about this, but any writer knows that reducing characters to mere numbers dehumanizes them thus removing all emotion from the equation. They probably skipped these scenes because they were incapable of making sympathetic and realistic character. This laziness and lack of ability foreshadowed the fate of the rest of the show's characters.

Did they even try? Of course they didn't. They don't have to and people will love it anyway. ALL ABOARD THE HYPE TRAIN.

Enjoyment:

I'm going to be honest: The most enjoyment I got out of this anime was laughing at the "serious" scenes. When Kirito introduced Asuna, in real life, as "lightning flash Asuna" and talked about her guild and power level, I seriously cried from laughter. Actually every time Kirito cried so did I. Just not in the way I think I was supposed to. I spat out my iced tea when the butterfly guy was licking agirlwhowillnnotbenamedforthesakeofnospoilers's face. That was too much. Seriously, it stained my shirt. Did anybody actually enjoy that scene? Did anybody actually take that seriously? The answer: no. Or, at least, I really hope that's the answer. My God, I hope that's the answer.

As for the action aspect, I'm not sure how anybody would enjoy the action scenes, and I certainly did not. They were all too easy. There were a couple times when it tried to make it look like he was in trouble, but lo and behold, some miracle happened every time. Knowing how the fight will end is an unfortunate situation in plenty of anime, but those anime at least have more creative fight scenes and abilities or they are character oriented anyway. Even runescape has better and more interesting fights than this MMO.

Besides the quality, there were quantity issues as well. This isn't really an action anime. The majority of the episodes were focused on Kirito saving Asuna from something, women falling in love with Kirito, or about Kirito and Asuna's boring relationship. I don't think there's a single episode that's "action-packed." Seeing as we were supposed to get 100 boss fights, this is a problem and it would be a letdown, but after a hundred of those dreary fights I believe I would likely die of boredom.

The romance was just bad. There's much better romance out there and the characters had no chemistry. I'd prefer a romance with characters that are actually intriguing. Also, most anime focus on the build-up of the relationship a lot, but here it happens right away and there's no time to enjoy anything. This wouldn't be that bad if their relationship was interesting, but they don't have any serious arguments and are essentially the perfect couple. The only enjoyable developments in their relationship were the ones where Asuna was in danger. And by "enjoyable developments" I mean "developments that made Kirito cry like a little girl." Those moments were still awful, but comparatively speaking, they were enjoyable.

This is not an anime that I would recommend to anyone. I would not even recommend it to my worst enemy. That is cruelty of which I am not capable. It was atrocious, infuriating, corny, cliché, contrived, horrid, purple tentacled, pseudo-incestuous, borderline-misogynistic, plebeian, an affront to mankind, unintelligent, crafted by the devil, a war on art, used to torture terrorists, bourgeois, anti-intellectual, inbred, languid, shallow, self-insertion, corny, the antithesis of Dostoevsky, the apotheosis of awful fiction, blank, infantile, pathetic, vacuous, vapid, salacious, inane, imbecilic, an abortion, Stygian, sub-par, bland, poorly thought out, corny, loathsome, vomit-inducing, virulent, bile, poorly executed, infernal, eviscerating, flippant, an insult to its audience, cadaverific, philistine, lame, sad in all the wrong ways, funny in all the wrong ways, painful, paint-drying, boner-killing, wretched, impotent, generic, unemotional, repetitive, redundant, boring, and corny. I really really wish I hadn't watched it. If you're one of the people who told me it was a "must watch" then fuck you. Not even funny.

But this is a thread about Akame ga Kill, not Oreimo or SAO. Only reason I brought it up is because I found it ironic.

Akame ga Kill is starting to get more dry though, I mean the whole Esdeath being in love with Tatsumi. How long are they going to drag this. New Danger Beasts, meh.. typical mysterious character scene where he's lurking in the shadows. ughhh it's killing me. Akame ga Kill started off with so much action and it seems to fading. I mean it is a 24ep series so I get there's filler, but I hope we're done with the filler eps moving on out.

eightworks: Can't really take this serious when you praise and watch SAO.

The thing is, SAO literally has less annoying exaggeration than Akame to me. Now, Arc 2 of SAO was pretty bad but I have a lot more interest in SAO simply because the story is about VR and gaming which boosts my enjoyment of it for no reason.

Barely about gaming and does it more harm than good. MAL actually has great reviews on why it does a terrible job. But again, this thread isn't about SAO and Akame ga Kill doesn't attempt to cater to non-anime fans as well throw in unnecessary fan service. Such as SAO with its random incest scene. Akame ga Kill does a great job at keeping the gore and blood levels at an enjoyable level, recent ep did have a bit more blood spilling I will admit that. For the most part it does a good job at blending typical shounen with darker scenes.

The difference between our opinions is that I kinda just disregard poorly done fanservice / it doesn't bother me. Like, I'm sure a lot of people hate that kind of thing but when I see it, it just doesn't cross my mind to even care.

Also when I say gaming, I mean, just the fact that it's about a game or has references to games/gaming means I like it. I also like otaku culture stuff too. I also like medieval/assassin stuff like Akame and Hitsugai no Chaika. But eh, I said the same thing about No Game No Life and someone also replied that it's not really about video games which he thought I meant when I said gaming.

Now when you say "Akame ga kill does a great job at keeping the gore and blood levels at an enjoyable level", I laugh because I hardly get that at all. Tokyo Ghoul does blood and gore really well. Even Hellsing does it better. Heck, Dansai Bunri no Crime Edge does blood/pain better.

Akame has few a good moments and various good fight scenes, but whenever it tries to splatter blood/death everywhere it just feels really poorly done to me. Either it feels over-exaggerated or too abrupt.

The part that annoys me more than that is how Akame tries to do emotional scenes. It's even worse than Kirito's rage in SAO or that guy who tried to rape Asuna. Why? Because it's also either over-exaggerated or just weak... well I already explained that in the last post. It's like this anime is trying to show 8 year olds for the first time what pain and torture is like. I feel like this anime is more directed towards people who are more sheltered in their thinking or something the way Akame does it. Like they're trying to be this really bloody anime which is something you don't see often but they're skimping on adding appropriate emotional/pain impact and just splash blood everywhere like it was water. But then everyone always dies before they even feel pain.

I liked those scenes where the green haired guy would strangle someone with string though. The dog imperial arm was kinda cool at times too but the rest of that thing was just ruined by more weak emotional ties and shiny blood drops and not enough actual expression of pain. I dunno, I was hoping for something more yuyu-hakusho like when pinky was getting crushed. (In Yuyu Hakusho a guy gets his elbow bent the wrong way by a giant).

Also, just cause I posted something good about the latest EP in SAOII that just aired doesn't mean there aren't other things I disliked in it ;v If I were on HF at the time I saw the 2nd arc of SAO I would have probably been all on about they're just tossing aside Asuna and how meh in general that arc was in comparison.

It's also a lot easier for me to look past the bad parts of 'happier' anime like SAO. I'm very particular about gorey anime because I'm generally indifferent to gore but try to avoid it. Like, I've seen Elfen Lied but I only decided to because I've been hearing a lot about it. And it was okayish. Same thing happened with Akame ga Kill. I haven't seen higurashi or that thing about the sadistic yandere angel and will probably continue avoiding those until I have a random interest in gorey anime again.

Generally I look more for the emotion/action scenes. And I guess because akame throws around all these cheaply done emotions in its emotional scenes and in the middle of action scenes I just can't take it seriously. At least SAO doesn't have episode after episode of attempts to attach you to a character and then killing them off as if it's supposed to have an emotional impact on the viewer. Like, Clannad spent a whole season or 2 developing your ties to the characters.

It's not that often that I complain this much about an anime, I've watched and enjoyed a lot of anime that most people would consider really bad / shitty and I've watched and enjoyed a lot of anime that most people think is great. It's just that when it's an anime like Elfen Lied I'm more critical of it because it has gore.

Another fun fact about me; The thing I care the most about in anime is: Is the anime's artstyle drawn well. I really just cannot get into poorly drawn anime / really old looking art styles. You could take a really poorly done story line and make it with a really good artstyle and I'd love it (maybe you could say SAO's that way). You could take a really well done story line but give it shitty animation and I'd hate it. Infact, I haven't started watching Code Geass yet because for years I've just hated how the art looks. Now it's less of an eyesore to me and I think I can watch and enjoy it.

And that attributes to making me more critical of animes with gore because gore can very easily be a shit stain all over what would probably be a good anime. And other times it's well done.

I would much rather that Akame drops this idea that blood = entertainment and actually make it look like it's painful to get stabbed (they probably have at times, I may be forgetting, but I'm talking stuff like Tokyo Ghoul), make a lot of the characters more emotionally stoic (this would help A LOT imo), and stop trying to put as much emphasis on side-characters who get killed in no time. This bugs me more than SAO's incest arc.

There's a lot of good stuff in Akame but I can't remember it all when I'm focused on all the cheap parts. Just saw ep13 and this one was actually p nice, though the sob story between the pyro / fisherman annoyed me but how they ended that was p funny. Main char's bravado is getting annoying too though. Lubba's story wasn't bad at least.

AgK is a 7 at best in my book, and that's me being generous, the anime is meh, manga is a lot better zyvox - September 29, 2014, 4:00 am

Last few episodes have been mediocre, but this week's was one of the best episodes imo. A lot of action, not really any filler material, and the last 2 minutes of this episode was just pure awesomeness and gave me a kind of chills.

It's both really hilarious and kind of sad that the pyro is the only one who isn't an emotional pussy.

I have a feeling something's gonna happen between them, but I'm curious to see whether

- a) Tatsumi kills Esdeath on the battlefield in like the final ep or smth
 - b) Akame does it and dies for it or something, or the one above and Tatsumi dies for it
 - c) They all do it together and someone dies
 - d) Esdeath joins Night Raid
 - e) did I mention someone dies
 - f) everyone dies
 - g) they fall in love and move away together and live a happy life
- ok this went way off line right now

Anyway I'm just saying there's something there but I have a feeling there's gonna be some kind of plot-twist/massive turn in one of the last eps and that's how they end it.

It's all speculation on my part though.

Have only watched the teaser and trailer so far. At first I had some hopes for this Anime well I did not read the Manga but a friend of mine said it was good and with lots of gore so I didn't look into it any further. So as I have watched the trailer there are some doubts if there is any chance for me to like this Anime because Haremu is not my favorite genre at all and the trailer just looks like it's Haremu or am I wrong? ?

I mean there's some gore but I wouldn't say that its full of it.

It's not something to not watch an anime over though.

They did? It takes the Masters lifeforce and gives it to Susanoo, you can only use it twice, if used a third time the Master is killed.

Yeah but that's pretty vague, I get that he himself is a weapon but something more detailed than that would've been more interesting.

Gore...? There's a few scenes where a head goes off or you see a still image of body being chopped in half for 2 seconds but it's not really much of it tbh. There's definitely blood but I wouldn't say there's much gore.

I highly doubt they'd bring a second season, they're not even following the manga. They skipped so many chapters. If they wanted to make a second one, they could've slowed down the pace and end it at a perfect time for the next season.

They weren't gonna make a sequel for TG but the hype was too real.

I read somewhere that the sales for this in Japan was too low, which is why they aren't following the manga anymore.

Im not even an Akame Ga Kill manga reader but im still kinda mad that the anime didn't follow it. This confirms there will never be a season 2 :(

TG didn't follow the manga for second season because it would need far more seasons for it to finish due to the new TG:RE Manga so the author decided to end the anime with an original ending in season 2 that doesn't follow the manga, which means season 2 is the end for TG.

In AGK case, they aren't following the manga because the anime didn't boost sales that much so they didn't really profit or if they did it wasn't enough, the author would need a season 2 to get to where the manga is (which is kind of where the anime is right now) so he decided to skip 30 chapters and make an original ending which means no season 2 since I'm sure the manga isn't that far from ending either

Chips Ahoy McCoy - November 21, 2014, 8:40 pm

Well, i'm just hoping that if it's original it isn't bad. Which may/may not be the case. I just don't want these next episodes to feel rushed.

Saw the Mine death coming ever since they had fun together. Their pattern is seriously too obvious by this point.

My money is on everyone dying except for Tatsumi. Akame in the last ep or something probably, for a killer finish that everyone is gonna hate. There are 3 episodes left. 1 Leona, 1 Najenda 1 Akame. Fits perfectly.

Well, that could happen. I don't really think it has a very high possibility of happening though. She's the only one in the group with really good regeneration abilities. If she does die, my guess is that it's because she sacrafices herself.

Wasn't her regeneration ability not working when she was fighting against Kurmoe and her puppets? If so. then that could happen again. Also, if she goes against Esdeath, Esdeath could just freeze her and smash her.

For one thing, they've already killed out most the characters so it would be no surprise if they did it to her.

There is almost no chance of this happening, yes they went on a killing spree but if they finish the story like this then half of the total story would make no sense and the ending would be quite boring... Ok this would be cool,

In that battle akame vs esdeath, akame uses kurome's sword to bring tatsumi back to life. he uses his upgraded incursio when he appears and esdeath panicks. esdeath uses th freeze time thing to kill them off but that doesn't affect tatsumi's armor (this is already a fact that it doesn't); tatsumi kills esdeath. tatsumi dies again cause he's already dead and used up his back-to-life time, and then akame dies because the sword drained her life force.

Tatsumi should die, it would free up everything and make the revolution a success. It was just his time to die, hes had the death flag on him since he started the adventure. Though tbh, I hoped he would beat it but in a show like this where characters are killed off at every climax it's to be expected sadly.

It was but it wasn't, it was unique and done well because I'm not left wanting more, I'm content with how it ended and I've never had an anime that made me feel that way. I'm always dying for a second season for any anime that was half way decent but this feels complete.

I guess from your POV it makes sense that it's good because there def. won't be a second season, but that's also what makes the closure so important to many anime. AKG was such a hyped up franchise and definitely could have gone better, but got butchered half way for "budget" reasons.

Hmm always sad to see a show I've been following end. Getting that empty feeling again... Was glad to see at least Akame survive (lol), and that post-credits scene ending was very badass. Hopefully that's a build up for the sequel, most of the reasons I've been watching this show is cause of Akame. Would love to follow her on another adventure.

As for this episode the whole fight was kind of badass but ehh that bitch took Tatsumi, wut. At least they tied all the loose ends as far as I can tell which is good. Anyone know how the sales went in Japan and the chances for a sequel? I mean the source material is still ongoing...

Because Akame is still alive, and if you watched the post-credits scene they show akame travelling somewhere and fighting saying something along the lines of her going to continue her lifestyle as an assassin?

I have my hopes up for a sequel featuring actually Akame in the main role instead of Tatsumi. That would be so nice.

Furthermore Najenda still lives. Wave lives, he's a good guy. That blonde guy also from the Jaegers still lives and he's a good guy after all - he just wanted to be loyal even after admitting he knew what he was doing was wrong. What if those 4 people join up and form a team when the next <some event in the world like an emperor of another place starts becoming corrupt, or any other event that would fit nicely with assassins> happens? And they pick up a few new characters to go with aswell? I see a lot of nice potential here. Heck, even if Akame just travelled to some place, had some kids and started training them I'd watch a show about that as long as they execute it nicely. Just that post-credits scene has so much potential, she could do anything in the future. Hopefully they can come up with some cool concept to pull off with, would be amazing. I love Akame's character, the black haired, red-eye hot looking assassin with a named one-slash kill katana.

(Dec 14, 2014 10:46 PM)eznightcore Wrote: (CITE) Manga is so much better than the actual Anime. Honestly, they still did do an amazing job on the Anime itself!

I agree with you.

I still think that the anime itself was a huge success and probably a little more understanding than the manga.

I also wish they could do a season 2 but that won't probably happen, meh.

I regret watching this show. Was such a waste of time. Manga is so much better and this anime only ending sucked dick. Shoulda dropped it when I was considering it.

I had to watch it through for Leones sake but now she's dead so there is no point. ;-;

the action was fine but the ending was gay, such a asspull. I also don't understand how can anyone consider the manga "good" its filled with power levels and mine is the queen of asspulls. It's just as bad as the anime

Esdese - December 15, 2014, 6:21 am

Did mine ever die in the manga yet?

Still though. I mean the ending was satisfying enough. They might make a different ending on the manga though that's for sure. Well either way I still don't think that they would. I mean the way the battle happened/ended was even more satisfying than any other episode to me. Also I loved how Esdeath still went to Tatsumi's dead body for one last hug and "I love you".

I don't see why we should use spoiler tags in a discussion thread about an airing anime (well it's finished now). If you're here without having caught up, it's your won fault. The only reason to be here is if you've caught up and thus to discuss the latest episode(s). If we should spoiler tag at all, we should do it properly with episode numbers or manga chapters in the spoiler tag, but I only see a few that does that.

Spoiler \(Click to View\)How can you love that Esdeath went over to hug Tatsumi in front of Akame and taking his body away with her :(

Y'all talking about how shit akame was yet you came back every week to watch it. I watched it for Akame's sake mostly, glad she wasn't cut off aswell ?

Also turns out that dick that told me like 10 eps ago that Akame was going to die (manga reader I presumed) was lying. Still a dick move though, I considered dropping it at that point but I realized he might be lying Spoiler \(Click to View\) No, Mine has not died in the Manga.

In my opinion, the anime really dissapointed. But then again they had to try and finish it in 24 episodes. The manga is by far better so if you haven't read it i recommend that you all do.

Yeah no problem. I think what you might have read was a prediction?

This is a "spoiler", though it's pretty much the same situation as what happened in the anime at one point and there's nothing special given away here.

Spoiler \(Click to View\) Right now Night raid are in a tough situation after saving tatsumi from execution. They are up against Budo and Najenda and because of Mine's poor close-combat ability, some are predicting she will die in the coming chapter.

I think the manga will make mine die just like in the anime. I just hope they don't cut off Tatsumi as well..

Fuck Tatsumi.

Like I promised earlier in this thread:

If Esdese dies this anime goes down into my shit tier anime list. Went from 8/10 to 5/10
