Thread: How to bind files using iExpress | FUD | No additional files needed!

gringo - July 14, 2014, 1:55 pm

Hello, today I'm going to show you how to bind 2 files together using nothing more than a program that has been bundled together with Windows since XP. Best part about it is it's fully undetected!

What you need:

iExpress (Windows XP/Vista/7/8) (C:\Windows\System32\iExpress.exe)

Two files you want to bind together

Brain

Open up iExpress. (Start > Run > iExpress.exe)

Click Next.

Next Again.

Press the spacebar once.

No Prompt.

Next Again.

Add the 2 files you want to bind.

File 1 is your malicious file.

Run it hidden.

No message.

Name your output file and make sure to select "Hide file extracting progress animation from user".

Click next 2 more times and you're done!

Well it's not FUD but it's pretty good. I'm vouching for this especially with it being free.

You can just create a SFX archive with 7zip/winrar..

SIM-1993099 - July 17, 2014, 3:52 pm

It binds together great. But mine was 24/50 so not really FUD..

idramex - July 17, 2014, 4:12 pm

I have a crypter , I will crypt both of files and bind them together . Will that work ? or i just bind my encrypted with the program i want ? Thanks for the TUT

If you would have read the very first line of my thread you'd realize that you don't have to download anything, iExpress has been included in every version of Windows dating back to XP, moron.

Very nice. Thanks for sharing this!

xScopeLess - August 21, 2014, 1:57 am not tottally fud but good find! im sure if i combine this method with a crypter it will work like a charm

CorsoConnected - August 21, 2014, 10:59 am

Awesome info man!

Not bad at all for free things. Got a 6/35 using a free crypter just to test it lol.

NANOEX - August 21, 2014, 11:49 am

Awesome - Thank you for this! Helped me fully understand a tool I'd only briefly encountered.

I dunno. - August 22, 2014, 4:07 pm
