Thread: Purchased a 2014 Audi A6.

Jay???? - July 30, 2014, 7:49 am

This is a car i've been wanting for some time now, I finally convinced myself to go ahead and get it.

I test drove a few cars in this price range. The Audi A6, BMW 535i, and the Mercedes E350, the Audi just felt right.

I went ahead and kept my 2013 Ford Fusion also, since I had already paid it off. I'm kind of thinking that I should have traded it in now.

Okay, without further to do.

My New, 2014 Audi A6 3.0 TFSI Prestige

Beautiful car! I'm also saving up right now to buy an audi. Congrats on the new ride!

It practically drives itself.

Automatic braking, start/stop engine, automatic cruise control adjustment. I can get all the way to work without hitting the break myself.

Audi is a very nice brand of car. I own an old 1999 A8 Quattro and it's sick!

Keep it maintained and be nice to it, the repairs are not cheap.

Cheaper than BMW or Mercedes, one of the reasons I chose Audi as well.

69,670 was the final ticket price, including taxes, dealer fees, title, etc.

The actual sticker price on the car I believe was $65 something.

I also bought it certified, instead of normal pre-owned.

Wouldn't consider a GTR the lowest tier super car..... (Corvettes??)

That car is full of technology which makes the car handle amazing.

True, but I live in Houston, and work in downtown. So traffic is terrible. It has a "manual" mode, and paddle shifting!

Congratulations on the purchase. The A6 is a fantastic car, but I don't understand why you'd choose the Audi over a 535i except if you prefer the looks of the A6. IMO the ride on Audi's isn't as great as on BMWs (which are really smooth and really stick to the road when going around corners).

Good call not going for the E350, suspension on that thing is horrific.

That "lowest tier supercar" would murder your car in a race and has tripple the specs your Euro car has.

Also, its Japanese so it wont cost an arm and a leg when it breaks like your Euro car.

Also whats more rare, a GTR or a Audi A6? Lol.

I live and work in the middle of downtown Houston, why would I need to own a race car? I work in the oil and gas industry, so It wouldn't look very professional to pull up in a two-door coupe either. Luxury is 10x better in my situation.
