

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Blog versus a site ?

T-rom - August 2, 2014, 6:44 pm

Is it better to monetize with a blog or a website ?

I know using ads and such is a great way, but also using file lockers in the content is common with blogs.

So is a website more "reliable " or is a blog just as great ?

sonex - August 3, 2014, 1:45 am

Apparently website is much more customizable, am I right? So there goes your answer...

_daniel - August 3, 2014, 3:01 am

Depends how you plan on gaining traffic and your knowledge.

I'd say for sure to use a blogging software like Wordpress if you plan on utilizing SEO as most of Wordpress is already optimized. That being said if you know your way around SEO make a website.

T-rom - August 3, 2014, 9:33 am

(Aug 3, 2014 03:01 AM)Daniel A Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Depends how you plan on gaining traffic and your knowledge.

I'd say for sure to use a blogging software like Wordpress if you plan on utilizing SEO as most of Wordpress is already optimized. That being said if you know your way around SEO make a website. Thank you, I don't really have great SEO skills so I will probably stick with a blog and move to a site later on if I feel like that will help gain reputation.

(Aug 3, 2014 01:45 AM)sonex Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Apparently website is much more customizable, am I right? So there goes your answer...Thats true its more "customizable" but if you don't need a bunch of the "added" things for your market I don't know why a site would be better.