

Forum: Hack Forums

Thread: Crypters -> OUT OF THE CRYPTOGRAPHY SECTION

Forezza - August 7, 2014, 1:17 am

I've seen this suggested before but I'm going to re-suggest it anyway.

Some of you that don't regularly visit the cryptography section probably think that this suggestion is silly and a waste of time simply because 'crypters = cryptography.... duhh'. However I disagree with this as crypters are more about coding than the actual cryptography evolved. Secondly, they're used as a hacking tool and there is an appropriate section for this. There are a few different types of crypter threads and none of them have anything to do with cryptography

- > Crypter downloads (Hacking tool downloads)
- > Free crypting services (Free services and giveaways)
- > "What's the best crypter for my rat"
- > How to re-fud my crypter (this is more coding than cryptography)
- > People begging for free crypts
- > "Is this crypter FUD"
- > "What's the best free FUD crypter"
- > "What crypter works with ..."

Come to think of it, I have not seen one thread asking how crypters actually relate to cryptography and how files are encrypted to hide their real intentions from anti virus programs.

My suggestion would be to create another section where all of this crap can be posted as the cryptography section at the moment is so low quality it's sad. Cryptography is great to learn and I'd be happy to make tutorials and threads but they simply just get to the third page in a day due to all of the shitty crypter threads in that section.

I would love to hear everyone else's opinion on the matter.

Mr.Peanut - August 7, 2014, 2:14 pm

<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=4071650>

My thread that was closed, you've gotta check it out. Yes I know you know it was already suggested but I think you'll agree with my points of views :D

Forezza - August 7, 2014, 2:24 pm

(Aug 7, 2014 02:14 PM)Mr.Peanut Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#)

<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=4071650>

My thread that was closed, you've gotta check it out. Yes I know you know it was already suggested but I think you'll agree with my points of views :D

If I reported all of the crypter posts in that forum then I would probably get banned for reporting 100 posts a day. There really needs to be another section for all this crypter rubbish.

crazyycast13 - August 7, 2014, 4:16 pm

The fuck happened to my post?

Anyways, I agree with Forezza. I want to know whether or not I can report the free crypter request threads because they really should be in the Gay Fucking Requests Cuz U Want Free Shit section.

Also, the "best crypt" threads should be disallowed in general since people just post the crypter that they have used, and it doesn't really help the buyer. If they are looking for a 200 a month+ crypter, I just tell them it won't be found on HF. Also, the threads that state "will x crypter work with y" are pointless; those questions can either be pmed or posted on a sales thread. Once again, the same goes for "why isn't this crypter FUD". Also, the other question that is asked a lot and is also pointless is "which crypter is FUD the longest". That question can be answered by looking on the sales threads instead of being spoonfed biased information.

Cyrus - August 7, 2014, 7:17 pm

Taking a look at that forum just now, I have to agree with you.

You may get this reply though:

<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=4071650&pid=39042895#pid39042895>

xploD - August 7, 2014, 9:09 pm

Agree with this, just like ebooks not in the ebook bazaar.

Hopsin - August 8, 2014, 3:46 am

This is actually true and something should be done about it.

Mr.Peanut - August 8, 2014, 1:58 pm

Looks like everyone is on the same page then. :D It's not even like were asking for crypters to be gone from HF, just like a section where it doesn't deserve to be in.

SwimmingPool - August 8, 2014, 2:05 pm

I 100% agree with this! I am stick of seeing sales threads in that forum.

SIM-1676753 - August 8, 2014, 7:10 pm

I agree with this thread. I do believe that all crypter sale threads should be in the marketplace and NOT be in the Cryptography, Encryption, & Decryption.

Abdilo - August 9, 2014, 12:51 am

25% of the posts are:

Any good crypters that can crypt: Zeus, Spyeye, etc

I am surprised i havn't seen:

Any good crypters that can crypt tinba

Forezza - September 1, 2014, 6:11 pm

I'm just going to bring this up because it's getting really out of hand. I report a shitload of the posts that do not belong there and none of them ever get moved.

At least make a separate section for the crypter bullshit.

I would be more than happy to make some nice tutorials if it didn't end up on the third page in an hour with all of these shitty crypter threads.

Meow - September 2, 2014, 9:40 pm

Agree with you,Omni should make new section about Crypters (selling/help/..)

VRUMM - September 2, 2014, 9:44 pm

Maybe make a separate subforum in cryptography for all crypters discussions?

Ayxi - September 3, 2014, 3:19 am

Although I'm not into cryptography, I 100% support this.

Niely - September 3, 2014, 4:29 am

I support this!

<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=4415811>

:)

420 Blaze It - September 3, 2014, 4:43 am

+1, support this. Should be in the marketplace.

Niely - September 3, 2014, 4:45 am

^Or just the hacking tools & programs. ;)

JoinSeventh - September 8, 2014, 12:50 pm

I fully support this suggestion. Something needs to be done about this.

MD5 - September 8, 2014, 1:53 pm

Agree with this a 100%

when I was new to hf and saw the crypters in the cryptography section, i was confused.

There should be threads about encrypting/decrypting strings and hashes and such there.

lucky. - September 8, 2014, 1:55 pm

I actually agree with this for the reason that I went to the section initially to see some threads regarding methods to secure data (Through cryptography of course), and most threads were either free crypters, asking for free crypters, or selling them. I think a subsection for crypters may be a good idea.

D?ath - September 9, 2014, 12:04 am

This is like the beginners hacking section

Forezza - September 17, 2014, 4:41 pm

Just ing this. There is a real lack of new members coming into the cryptography section for any purpose other than for crypters. There are plenty of members willing to teach it but the section is just covered in shit and the good threads are pushed down to the bottom of the page within 2 hours or less due to the mass amount of people spamming the free crypter topics. Most other sections don't allow hacking tools to be in them, why cryptography?

Cyber Saint - September 21, 2014, 8:15 am

While I do completely agree with you, there is really not anything you can do about it. It is up simply to the forum administrators to add a sub-forum for crypters, which might not happen for the following reasons -Crypters do fall under cryptography regardless.

The sub-forum would not be nearly as active without them, and it may lose so much activity that it isn't active enough to warrant a sub-forum, I don't frequent that sub forum so I'm not sure how often non-crypter threads are made.

It's probably not a priority at the moment as the cryptography sub forum is just a small fraction of the HF community.

It is the same thing with many other sub-forums believe it or not, all in their own way. It was a good idea for you to create the thread as it may bring this matter to the attention of the staff/admins of the forum. Good luck with your goal of getting the crypters out of the cryptography sub-forum.

Have a nice day,

Omniscient - September 21, 2014, 11:54 am

While I can agree with the intent of your suggestion it's also not practical. It would be impossible to split threads. And if we did what would be left in the Cryptography section? Then we'd also have to deal with constant incorrectly posted threads to move.

Just not worth it.

But maybe I will consider a subforum for a more direct topic.

Natas - September 21, 2014, 11:57 am

(Aug 7, 2014 09:09 PM)xploD Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Agree with this, just like ebooks not in the ebook bazaar. Exactly, Forums need to be fixed.

I agree with this OP 110% support !
But I know this won't be changed.

But we can hope...

Royal ! - September 21, 2014, 12:03 pm

(Sep 17, 2014 04:41 PM)Forezza Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Most other sections don't allow hacking tools to be in them, why cryptography?

Because crypters are Not "Hacking tools". That's why probably. And I don't really Agree with this suggestion. Will somewhat destroy the vitality of that section. What else would be left there?.

Forezza - September 21, 2014, 2:13 pm

(Sep 21, 2014 08:15 AM)Cyber Saint Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) While I do completely agree with you, there is really not anything you can do about it. It is up simply to the forum administrators to add a sub-forum for crypters, which might not happen for the following reasons -Crypters do fall under cryptography regardless.

The sub-forum would not be nearly as active without them, and it may lose so much activity that it isn't active enough to warrant a sub-forum, I don't frequent that sub forum so I'm not sure how often non-crypter threads are made.

It's probably not a priority at the moment as the cryptography sub forum is just a small fraction of the HF community.

It is the same thing with many other sub-forums believe it or not, all in their own way. It was a good idea for you to create the thread as it may bring this matter to the attention of the staff/admins of the forum. Good luck with your goal of getting the crypters out of the cryptography sub-forum.

Have a nice day,

I agree that crypters do fall under cryptography and I wouldn't care if the crypter threads were actually asking questions related to cryptography, but they don't. I've only ever seen 2 threads in my entire time on HackForums asking how crypters work or the cryptography behind them.

Most of the people in the cryptography section enjoy making threads e.g. TheDubWubCub although they just disappear within the hour past all of the cryptography threads. It pretty much deters anyone from visiting the cryptography section or making threads in it when nobody ever sees them. I think the activity relating to actual cryptography would increase on this forum if there was actually a place to post it.

(Sep 21, 2014 12:03 PM)Royal ! Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Because crypters are Not "Hacking tools". That's why probably. And I don't really Agree with this suggestion. Will somewhat destroy the vitality of that section. What else would be left there?.

That's like saying most RAT/Keyloggers are not hacking tools. They may not always be used as them once in a blue moon, but 99.99999% of the time they are.

(Sep 21, 2014 11:54 AM)Omniscient Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) While I can agree with the intent of your suggestion it's also not practical. It would impossible to split threads. And if we did what would be left in the Cryptography section? Then we'd also have to deal with constant incorrectly posted threads to move.

Just not worth it.

But maybe I will consider a subforum for a more direct topic.
I would like to start off by saying thanks for replying to this thread,

The thread splitting wouldn't be that much of an issue due to the fact that it's pretty much constantly new threads or only a select 100 being replied to in that section regarding crypters. Hardly any of the old crypter threads are ever ed up.

I'll ask a few of the other cryptographers in that forum but I cant really think of any other way that it could be split that will still leave both sections active :/.

crazyycast13 - September 21, 2014, 6:41 pm

(Sep 21, 2014 12:03 PM)Royal ! Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Because crypters are Not "Hacking tools". That's why probably. And I don't really Agree with this suggestion. Will somewhat destroy the vitality of that section. What else would be left there?.

So you're telling me it's normal for a program to be able to bypass antiviruses and spread across USB's? What you just said is total bullshit and you know it. I have yet to see a crypter that only encrypts the file.

Quote:[*]Crypters do fall under cryptography regardless.

Yet no one ever asks about the encryption behind these crypters, because the people who make them don't want other people making them, and the people who want to make them usually are in it for the money instead of something that will actually make sure you get past all the hard parts.

Still fully behind this, happy to see omni made a post.

If you want to discuss how the hell crypters work, specifically the encryption side, then go for it. Make the thread, try to get people knowledgeable in the field to post on it, and start a great discussion. However, if you want a crypter to crypt your stub so that you can infect kids, and you are wondering why your stub isn't FUD right now, then leave the cryptography section.

To people saying that the section might die then, you might be right. There might only be one or two new threads a day talking about network encryption or packet stenography or encryption anonymization. But you know what? I'd rather have a single diamond than 2 thousand worthless plastic ones. Because nobody wants to look at trash, they want to look at the things that matter. You learn a lot more from the single diamond than from a plastic gem anyways.

Quote:I'll ask a few of the other cryptographers in that forum but I cant really think of any other way that it could be split that will still leave both sections active :/.

Sup Forezza?

I think crypto enthusiast is better than cryptographer.

But as Forezza said, the same stuff keeps getting repeated. The amount of threads that has said "best crypter?" is insane.

I think the best option would be making a subsection in hacking tools called crypters, throwing every single crypter thread in there, and leave the cryptography section to its own ends. Advanced hacking needs cryptography, but nothing about using crypters is advanced. It's a point and shoot tool, and breeds skids like flies.

EDIT: Omni, if you make new rules about the crypto section, I would happily report every wrong thread. Because as of right now, I can only watch them clutter the section.

EDIT2: Everything about hash cracking would remain in the cryptography section, we only want 99% of the threads about crypters to go.

Canonsx130 - September 21, 2014, 7:58 pm

I completely support your suggestion OP. It is relevant suggestions like these that should be implemented to retain the quality of the forum. If this suggestion is indeed implemented, I guess there are going to be lots of members who are going to continue posting crypters in the cryptography section so they'll need to be moderated strictly. I'd be happy to report such threads if that helps ie, if this gets implemented. It'd be awesome if Omni could pull this out! Good luck!