Hotmail isn't allowing me to send trojan horse, why? ?

DeplorSocio - August 7, 2014, 1:37 pm

Maybe because it's a virus. Maybe it's just me, but I think i'm pretty sure about this.

idiot...

Next time send a DOWNLOAD link to your virus. O.o

Hi, Mr.dumb ass!

Might it be because... oh I dunno.. ITS A VIRUS!?

John Hackett - August 7, 2014, 1:56 pm

Hi Mr. cockroach (so called mr. support) or maybe you are full of it because i made it fud, wrapped it with an image, and spoofed it!!!

The Alex - August 7, 2014, 1:56 pm

because hotmail isn't a retard and can see your sending a .exe nomatter if you've spoofed it or not.

Benjamin Franklin - August 7, 2014, 1:57 pm

You can't attach .exe's in emails. Put it in an archive.

To the people who didn't help at all, don't post if you can't help.

Zip the file and try sending it again.

If it isn't well crypted, it'd be a waste of time sending it anyways.

Elixirz - August 7, 2014, 7:02 pm

Use common sense when posting stuff like this if you are serious. Upload the .zip file with the .exe in it to files like "zippyshare", and then send the link to the person in the email.
