Thread:  IT'S BACK!!  Scammer Database!

Xerotic - August 10, 2014, 10:46 am

YOU can now promote your product within the HackForums Scammer Database! Click HERE to read more!

[\[img\]http://hfscammerdb.com/sigs/2.png\[/img\]](#)

What is it?

The scammer database is a userscript and website created by Xerotic to help members protect themselves against scamming.

Members are able to submit existing deal dispute threads to the database and once accepted the change will reflect on a potential scammers profile.

Here is an example of a member in the database:

Notice the black bar under his username? That represents the color of his username before the script takes over.

You are able to see a list of the user's deal disputes when you click the red '+' next their username.

Currently the script will show you if the user is in the scammer database on the following pages:
showthread.php

reputation.php

repsgiven.php

member.php?action=profile

private.php

index.php

How do I get it?

To start using the script, visit the ABOUT page on the scammer database website.

Important links:HF Scammer DB

About

Make a submission

Request removal from DB

Direct userscript link (Note - this is the direct *.user.js file)

What next?

Once you have the userscript installed, head on over the Deal Disputes section and start submitting scripts to the database.

The userscript will sync with the database every 15 minutes, but if you want to update it sooner there is a "Update Scammers" link below the logo on HF.

 Note that threads will not be approved in the database until I approve it or one of my site moderators approves it. Typically this will be within a few hours at most.

Disclaimer

This database and userscript is not associated with HackForums in any way. It is developed and maintained by Xerotic.

Users in the database are not convicted scammers. It is simply a record of existing deal dispute threads that have not been resolved.

Always properly research a user before you do any deals. This script helps a lot, but you still have to do your part.

A good way to prevent being scammed.

If person doesn't check <https://hackforums.net/disputedb.php>

ZuGgY - August 10, 2014, 10:47 am

Thanks for the heads up.
I might start using it.

-Dartz - August 10, 2014, 10:48 am

Super useful release, with the influx of scam reports on the same members recently, this should be helpful. Hopefully some newer members see this.

Thanks for the release, Xerotic.

That is helpful, but not everyone uses that or posts their disputes in there. Also with my script, you can see if they are a reported scammer everywhere you go. I plan on having every deal dispute thread posted from here on out and many threads in the past added to the DB.

Realing - August 10, 2014, 10:50 am

This is definitely going to be helping a lot of users.

It's very useful, comes handy as userscript, I guess you put a lot of time to this.

Thank you.

Please note that closed deal disputes will not be added to the database.

Also, get to adding scripts in the database! Let's go! ?

Stowaway - August 10, 2014, 11:11 am

This adds only threads on the deal dispute topic? And none from the official db? Sounds nice already using this!

Doesn't have a ton of threads added yet, but I'd love to see this grow! I'd help out if I could ;).

I submitted at least 50 or so already and I'm going to continue going through. Can we see our own names in red? I'd like to know as it may notify you if you have an open dispute.

This is probably just a glitch but you should disable the add to database function on an already submitted deal dispute.

That just means that it was added to the database but not approved yet. Probably will change that in a future script update. I plan on making it yellow if it is submitted but not yet approved.

Aceman - August 10, 2014, 3:05 pm

Added the first ten pages to the dabatase. I'm sure people will add disputes which are beyond that if it is their own.

Sky - August 10, 2014, 7:57 pm

A small bug I noticed, if you go to any page # of a deal dispute other than the first page, it says "Add to database", rather than "In database".

I know it's only a small bug but fixing this could prevent a lot of duplicate entries being submitted due to people reading several pages then scrolling to the top & assuming the dispute isn't in the database.

This is a great thing, we need more user scripts like this to make information more easily accessed. Only problem is any deal disputes that are old or slipped through the cracks aren't put into the DB. Great work Xerotic, and I can't wait to see how big this gets.

Well we submitted the last 10 pages of the deal disputes forum.

And all new deal disputes as well should be added. If members want to go back and add some important ones further than 10 pages back, they can.

Should we just add them all or do you want us to view the topic to see if it's worthy of being put in the database?

ItsATumor - August 11, 2014, 9:36 am

Ah, I see. Any plans to extend this or new features? It seems like you got the basics down, maybe time for fancy features. Maybe the bar above posts with the post number and time the post was made could be red too.

Just add relevant ones. I don't want TOO many unnecessary ones that are outdated. Only if they are pertinent to modern day trading.

Oh yes, I have many plans for more features. The website will grow as well with more stats and a search feature.

The userscript itself will also have some additions coming its way. Just stay tuned. ?

ItsATumor - August 11, 2014, 9:40 am

It'd be cool to have a stats page of sorts, like you said. Like average scams per day, and something like % of resolved scam reports. Total scam reports etc. Make it all you need to know about it.

Average reports/day

I find no point in this. You are basically making a new deal dispute database for an HF userscript set that a small population of this forum uses. That won't stop previous scammers with multiple scam reports.

I promise you that a lot of marketers will use this. And I put in a LOT of previous scammers already. You seem to think this is only for new deal disputes... nono. There is no age limit of deal disputes to put in the DB. You can add a deal dispute that was made in 2011 if you want.

1. At least people can easily see who are possibly convicted scammers.
2. The more people that use it, the more effective it is.
3. It won't stop previous scammers but it'll help people who have this userscript installed to know to deal with caution with the member.

I just want to understand something here, sorry if I'm a noob here, if the hf member didnt use this userscript, irregardless whether his a legit/scammer, it won't work right??

There are currently about 200 entries and growing every day. Threads are manually approved before being added to the database.

I meant why not have a cronjob that detects threads in the section wherever possible (if they match the stickied template closely enough) and one for syncing with HF's existing DB?

Because that is not allowed as per HF rules. Omniscient does not allow scripts or automated programs to access HF, be discussed or distributed. I stay within policy.

Love the addon but don't like your system. I realise that you have to have some way of checking it's a scam report but do you also make a decision if it's valid or not? If so, who are you to call them a scammer where it could be the scam report. If you can clear this up for me it'd be great!

Edit : i'm a retard who can't read. Thanks for correcting me xxGolden

Do not add it if the deal has been resolved. Also, that link brings you to the website and you still need to copy in the potential scammer's UID. So it is safe to click whenever, just don't submit resolved disputes.

Nope. I don't make any money from this and I have no friends.

I add all threads in the Deal Disputes section that are NOT resolved and NOT closed (the thread) and not obviously fake or if it is simply not a scam report. It must also be in the Deal Disputes section.

A little outlandish to make such a claim, but if you see any issues, feel free to PM me so I can investigate. I do have another member that helps with some of the moderation of threads added to the database so I don't see EVERY thread added.

To skip all the talk, click the following link to install:

http://www.hfscammerdb.com/script_v0.5.1.user.js

Alright.. anyway here is the changelog: Added announcements! These will be used for script update availability and important messages. (Yes, they can be toggled!)

Performance tweaks. I moved from GM_* to localStorage in an effort to make the script more dynamic.

Now two resources are loaded every 15 minutes - the list of scammers and new messages. (All done in the background)

Added stats to the main website. <http://hfscammerdb.com/>

Not a big update, but the announcement system will help me get to you guys with important messages much quicker.

Thanks guys!

This is what I did as well in order to avoid the ads. This was one of my favourite userscripts but the advertisement was about to make me get rid of it until I realize adblocker would get rid of it.

Xerotic - September 4, 2014, 12:44 pm

A lot of members have asked me how to remove the ads in the HF Scammer Database userscript. Here is your answer:

My current ad agreement period is for 72 hours. This agreement was made before the option to remove the ad was there, so this ad will be stuck for 72 hours.

After this ad, the next promotions will be able to be collapsed.

So to recap:

- The current ad lasts 72 hours.
- Future promotions will be able to be hidden.
- Script will go on as usual.
- I will be creating a sales thread shortly with full promotion terms and specs.

This is a great chance to directly reach out to 300+ members.

This ad is SUPER annoying. If it was just a regular ad, it won't be that bad. The issue is that it loads AFTER the page loads. Thus, when I go to click on something right after the page loads, the ad loads and pushes the page down and I miss what I am clicking on.

If you could fix this, ads would be fine.

Xerotic - September 4, 2014, 1:01 pm

If people choose to leave, that is fine. Not gonna bend over backwards for a feature like this.

However as I have said, the future version will have collapsible ads.

Doxicity - September 4, 2014, 1:04 pm

I hate this idea, in fact not only will it may be annoying to see but the users who even purchase the promotions can have some bad reviews on sales, depending on the product. May remove the database until update is made as this is rather annoying.

Made an entire website and userscript. Throw up a 100% text ad that can easily be removed. Bam.
Hate.

If people want to remove the script, so be it. The ad will be gone soon anyway and the new script version will be collapsible ads.

My current ad agreement period is for 72 hours. This agreement was made before the option to remove the ad was there, so this ad will be stuck for 72 hours.

After this ad, the next promotions will be able to be collapsed.

So to recap:

- The current ad lasts 72 hours.
- Future promotions will be able to be hidden.
- Script will go on as usual.
- I will be creating a sales thread shortly with full promotion terms and specs.

This is a great chance to directly reach out to 300+ members.

Lost all respect for you when you installed adds, you were doing this for the community, and now you're doing adds? No where did I see a you'll be forced too have a add on top of your browser condition when downloading this. I recommend everyone go and uninstall this application, I personally would. I get you want/need too make money, but this is a dick way to go about it, not even allowing people to disable it? I would have happily donated, I didn't even use this ever.. but its forced adds.

Also as a mentor, how are you allowed to release a product here? You've made a thread for a product, then forced unwanted adds without permission, and are now mentioning your upcoming sales threads? Personally I find this disgraceful.

I honestly don't see the big fuss about having that VCW advertisement bar there. Xerotic made this userscript for everyone to use free-of-charge, which allows users to see if a user has scammed (the majority of users are too damn lazy to search up past scam reports and then they get scammed). If it was a forced pop-up that would be annoying, however it's just a small adjustment to the HF page. So suck it up you pansies.

Hosting is cheap.

But I am a full time university student, not my first year either. I also live on my own and my job isn't all that great. I pay a lot of bills and any amount of money helps.

I coded the entire website and script from scratch, didn't use any template or framework. I could have spent all that time working overtime at work so that it would have been easier to pay my bills.

So when I introduced ads, it was a bit quick and I should have had an option to remove it, but I didn't. The ad term for this one is 3 days. It has less than a day on it. Future versions will change. Thanks for your concerns, but this is helping support my life.

Well it would depend on how many people the advertisement would be reaching. Do you have a count of how many times the script has been downloaded?

Unrelated question, would you consider adding a counter similar to that which counts how many threads are in the database? I'd be very interested in seeing not only how many threads are in the database, but how many people are highlighted with a red name. I know it doesn't mean a whole lot but the larger the number is the more people your script is potentially protecting people from.

I thought you made the ads just to pay the server bills. When you say it this way, I have no problem with it.

One thing I hate, is when people say "It's ONLY for paying off my server bills", when it's clearly an overpriced server then.

===Update 0.5.2===

This is the update that will introduce better promotions within the userscript.

An unlimited number of ads can be in place in the userscript at any given point, however only ONE will be displayed per page load. They are on a cycle system. So if there are 3 promotions total, you would have to navigate to 3 different pages to see them all. Keeps it less cluttered.

Furthermore, all ads can now be collapsed. After being collapsed they will not be seen for 6 hours, at which point you can collapse them again.

Here is a direct link to this version upgrade: http://www.hfscammerdb.com/script_v0.5.2.user.js

This is the update that will introduce better promotions within the userscript.

An unlimited number of ads can be in place in the userscript at any given point, however only ONE will be displayed per page load. They are on a cycle system. So if there are 3 promotions total, you would have to navigate to 3 different pages to see them all. Keeps it less cluttered.

Furthermore, all ads can now be collapsed. After being collapsed they will not be seen for 6 hours, at which point you can collapse them again.

Here is a direct link to this version upgrade: http://www.hfscammerdb.com/script_v0.5.2.user.js

Enjoy.

This is cluttered and absolutely ridiculous. I get that you need some money, but don't we all?

You made this for free. No one got on their knees and pleaded for you to make it for free. I don't see why you decide to start making profit off of it now.

Uninstalling all of them right now. Back to HFES.

Are all these ads really worth the complaints, uninstalls, and negative words? Really?

I'm pretty sure he can handle a few whiny comments without issue. ?

You know what, I think they bring a little more character to the HF layout. A few ads are no big deal to me to still have an extra heads up on the scammers before even checking them out.

Your oversized picture is more of a hassle than the ads to me. ?

Going to be changing a few things.

Protip: Find an ad network. Make the userscript visit the page with ads on using $.get() (nobody will notice).

Make money without people noticing. Just make sure they know before installing the script.

Set the visit time to ~30 seconds then visit the page again every 30-60 minutes.

We added over 3000 threads the past day. This was done automatically and we do have a system to have threads removed: <http://www.hfscammerdb.com/process.php?resource=removal>

We decided that adding the 3000 threads to better protect members was worth the convenience of needing some removal requests.

The problem was obviously resolved otherwise a lot more of my customers would have posted such scam-reports after a while and fyi: I wasn't aware of this thread until it got added to the scam-db. I don't regularly check the deal-dispute section and the user obviously did not PM me about this, neither did someone else. In my opinion it is just ridiculous to call this a scam.

Edit:

I also think it is not that good to mark people as scammers if the situation is not really clear. I don't sue people and win without they clearly have committed a crime too.

You should get some people to help you with this.

Many people's name are listed even when the given scam report is proved to be a fake.
(Or stuff happened because of ToS violations.)

And some people scamming aren't listed.

I know people can add topics in the database but you're still alone as far as I know so obviously some things aren't going perfectly.

If you see fake reports, report them as fake.

I have a false report on me and it's really annoying to see my name in red all the time.

How do I

1) Exempt myself from it (client side)

or

2) File for the thread to be removed from db?

New URL to use.

I recommend updating it on the main thread then.

Wow, been searching for the update for a long ass time. Please update the damn main thread ffs.

MeIT3d - March 15, 2015, 1:56 am

I agree this is pretty cool. Will help me if I ever do business with someone.

swimmingplaces - March 17, 2015, 7:16 am

Will be definitely using this! Thanks again Xerotic ;)

Captain Steve Rogers - May 23, 2015, 3:32 am

Just gona install this, thank mate!

Auxil - May 28, 2015, 3:58 am

Site is returning a 522 error for me.
(hfmps.net)

Any update, OP?

Zink - July 11, 2015, 3:10 pm

Is this updated, Please bring this back mate.
