It's funny how the virus scan given shows zero detections. But when I scan it myself it's detected as a trojan and the file itself starts another process (services.exe). There also multiple attempts to contact 121.10.252.139, which Malwarebytes blocks.

<https://www.virustotal.com/en/file/8d77e6c3b363547761ae80dd1e24513fc90ad4274b94a022b998b10b64a425a6/analysis/>

However, you seem like a trusted user so I'll take a more in-depth look at this soon to see if it's a virus or just a false positive.

EDIT: I can't find any definite proof, so I could be wrong.

I will update the thread with a new virus scan. I don't know why so many antiviruses picks this up as a virus. I didn't obfuscate the file so you guys can check the source yourself if you don't believe me or the virus scan.

Almost the entire code is bad written and not optimized so I will recode this in few days as said in the original post.

Antiviruses this days are just stupid.
