I would use this but sadly i don't use MAL or Flappybird.

I might consider it if 1080p anime torrents don't exist anymore.

okay thats cool man. The Hummingbird API thing I implemented is pretty sexy and so is the search feature you know ;)

I think it would look better if the height was increased.

Also I think the MAL/HB integration was pretty cool.

That would be interesting.

I meant just re-size it so we can see more of the text and so that the image could be larger.

Happeh - August 13, 2014, 12:53 pm

How is HB integrated? Will it auto-update when I've watched an episode?

Yes, also try right clicking on both the episode list and the anime list too.

Just a guess but I think you would need the latest .net redistributables for something like this.

Edit: Angel Beats, any way to add a setting so users can change where the stream outputs to? So instead of using the WMP a user could specify a path to a player that supports streams like VLC, MPlayer, and MPC-HC.

kini - August 13, 2014, 1:24 pm

that's real cool but the video player isn't so pleasing

Better and more responsive UI, more anime and ability to choose a different player. I don't mind right now though, early phases so ya know.

Ok. You shoulda seen the UI of the first release lol. The only not very responsive bit is when you are loading an episode list. I can probably make a caching system for the episode list.

Lienniar - August 13, 2014, 2:23 pm

Read on your post that you are looking for anime contributions. Any form of requirements/standards that needs to be met? I actually have quite a lot of anime downloaded and they're all very high quality. Willing to contribute if I can.

Yeah, that would be awesome if you can make MPC-HC rather than WMP. I love how it's HB integrated, probably one of my favorite features. How is the quality when it streams? Same as streaming 1080p online like Kissanime or CR?

It's in HQ. The only problem I have is buffer issues.

Does anyone else have this problem?

If Angel can fix this then I would probably start contributing.

Hey, so I'm back and read your PM but I can't PM you back so I'll just post here (if you're okay with that, if not will edit it out).

The uploading site, is that the only place you recommend? Most if not all anime I have are in MKV format and the site you've provided only accepts mp4 (as I assumed via the name of the site).

Do you recommend I convert the files? Wouldn't mind helping out at all since it looks promising. Also, from what I read it sounds like the file limit for upload is at 300 mb with 20 files max, does this apply to file upload instance or for the entirety of the account?

Per time you upload, also here is a convert guide from their website:

<https://sites.google.com/site/taumox/handbrake-tutorial>

Don't change the resolution and make sure you add and tick the burned in box on the subtitles.

Lienniar - August 13, 2014, 7:22 pm

I'm currently uploading Sukitte li Na Yo via the website you instructed me with. Will send PM to you when I can send PMs (and when it's done uploading).

It's too bad I can't put more higher quality stuff since the limit is 300 MB, and I have 1080p anime too.

We use a combination. Any host that uses the same source as mp4upload.

The very latest version is just a bugfix on animes with no episodes yet.

Very nice indeed,thanks for putting effort and time to give out legit things like this watcher app!

Nevieth - August 19, 2014, 3:09 pm

I really like this, my one issue is a lot of anime that I want to watch isn't on this, and only seems to be newer stuff. Would there be a way to add different series to this through browsing online? If so, I would use this more often for all around streaming.

Oh and I'm also a little bummed that there isn't a download option, but that's asking for to much I'm assuming. :P

I would absolutely love a download option, and adding new series is always appreciated. So far i'm enjoying the speed and quality of this, and the template. It's a bit simple, however it looks good and everything has a purpose.

All in all I would say it's a very well made, functional application which anyone can find a good use for.

I look forward to any future versions/ updates.

EDIT: Just to let you know, when I say download I mean download it and be able to watch it in any player, and not just yours. Only because I want to be able to do easy anime torrents and send to friends. Of course if I ever open up a website for it, all credit goes to you. ?

Awesome man, can't wait.

I'm a bit nooby but when new series/ episodes are added will it automatically update or will I have to download a new version of the program. I'm assuming if it reads a new episode it'll automatically add it. It should also read directly off CrunchyRoll so I can download any series off it, would be absolutely amazing. <3 (I may be asking for to much).

Alright, as long as I'm able to download different series to stream for myself or for others, it'll be perfect. I would go with other people's torrents, but I would prefer downloading it myself due to not trusting exactly what people do to a file/ video.

Lol.

Seriously though, syncing isn't hard. All you really have to do is use a POST/GET on a PHP script running on the server, then a small database with a timestamp, two IDs and episode IDs.

With the request, it returns a timestamp and the player stops if it checks that.

That program is still floating around somewhere. I don't have the source anymore (even if I did, it's probs buried under tonnes of crap on my HDD).

It should still work if that's what you're asking, if you want I didn't obfuscate anything, so you're welcomed to decompile and modify and release your upgrades if you want (as long as you credit me as the original author if you use my code).

I was half asleep when I posted that.

Anyway, you set up a PHP script that receives a POST request from the client with the following information
ID of the person

ID of person 2

Name of series and episode number

Time elapsed in the episode

The idea is that you have a database (probs MySQL) that stores the above info in a table.

Whenever one pauses, it sends a POST/GET request to the PHP script and that adds an entry in that table.

Then you have the client poll the server every 1s or something when the feature is enabled. When it finds a ID that matches person 1 or person 2, it reads the time of the ep and pauses at that time.

Similarly, to restart you simply do a second table which just has two IDs and Episode/Name of series. Then one starts it sends a GET/POST request to a second script which adds an entry to the table.

The client again polls another script, and when it detects that it should restart, it will.

Overall, this should take about 4 scripts and two tables.

Btw, I ran a decompiler on your program. It's not as bad as I thought it would be.

Would have been nice if you used classes for the hummingbird/mal implementation by storing the cookie instead of making a connection every time it's required.

Alright, well I do have something to report. It isn't much of a bug and more of an annoyance, the program is extremely laggy when trying to swap between different series and scroll through the pages. The videos themselves are smooth, but I feel for my pc (which has yet to surpass 20% CPU while using this program) it is slow and lags a bit to much.

Again the video itself isn't lagging, and merely doing trivial things such as browse the playlist, it's slow to react and quite delayed. I can easily live with the issue and would rather have downloading implemented before the lag issue is fixed, but that's just me. ?

Their API's don't use a cookie, 1 uses an auth code which the program makes the request at the start and the other just uses a request with the user and password in the requests to update their list, and I am gonna be honest with you I really couldnt be bothered to make a class at the time but now I wish I had. PM me your skype will you? :)

With the video sync I was gonna have a generate id thing and then both people put in the same ID and then when paused it would send a pause command with timestamp. So each player would poll the server every second and if there was a pause it would go pause. If time was moved, the same would happen but with a time command or something. I think when the server was polled it would only return the latest command tho.

Only I can add series to the list but I will add a shit ton soon dw. Also sometimes downloads are faster than others. Another thing is that mine does it based on the amount downloaded over the last second. There are often bursts and it just doesnt measure them.#

Alright, sounds good. The main series I'm interested in are old classics like Death Note, Code Geass, Guilty Crown, Naruto (I know... even that), and Naruto Shippuden (yup, that too... I know, I'm a terrible person), Attack on Titan, Steins;Gate, etc.

<3 Those are the series that popped up in my head all at once.... ???

Haha thanks man, oh and if my suggestions get to much or something let me know, I try my best to take critique well, without bitching. <3

Again, I'm really enjoying this, and the only issue (if the downloading speed is fixed) is the small amount of anime available, but if you're adding more... then problem solved. ?

Ever thought about adding FMA: Brotherhood? It's only 63 episodes but it's amazing. <3

IF you need some help with choosing the right animes..

I watched over 150 Animes + several movies ect

add me on skype if you want: south2aka

Programmargorp - August 22, 2014, 7:23 pm

OP Drop me a message on skype if you want help with the episode syncing thing.
Would consider doing P2P, but then you'll have to do uPNP and there might be firewall issues :/

Been testing this and its really great, however there are a few things that could change in my opinion.

- The play button could be moved to the bottom instead. i took me a solid 20 seconds to find it the first time as my intuition told me it would be at the bottom.
- possibly add tabs to both selection windows (subbed/dubbed for top window, and season choosing for the 2nd.

as for small bugs/my ignorance:

- the download path option does not work for me.
- the full screen button does not work when the show is paused. i have a habit of going full screen before pressing play. this does not work here.

i have a few shows on blu ray i could upload. not much but if you want me pm me.
other than this, the program is great and im definitely going to keep using it.

For some reason going full screen before pressing play produced errors.
