

Forum: Hack Forums

Thread: Can't afford to rent referrals in Probux

Akreyic - August 13, 2014, 8:55 am

Hey guys, so basically I started Probux by investing 20 dollars right away for 100 referrals. I did this for a month and about 2 weeks ago, had enough for 25 more referrals (plus some left over money to recycle and such). I'm now winding down to where I have to renew that first 100 referrals. It just so happens that I'll only have enough money to renew like 70/100....

I'm active every single day, 90% of days I click every single ad (not just the 4 required), and i recycle every day.

Yet I can only afford to renew not even three quarters of my referrals.

I was wondering if this is normal, or if I screwed up somewhere.

I have autopay ON Auto renew under 3 days ON

Any help would be appreciated

Joey Pirtz - August 13, 2014, 9:14 am

Don't jump down my throat when I say this.

ALL bux sites stop paying eventually. I wouldn't put much of your time or cash into this. I used over 20 different bux sites when they were first around and all of them picked up and fucked off with everyone's money when they realized the financial model behind them simple isn't viable.

There were two that were really high profile, neobux and onbux.

Neobux, which is probably the most reputable, cut its payouts to about a tenth of its original model citing the fact that it was the only way the site would be profitable and people lost shit loads of money.

Onbux just plain picked up and fucked off with every ones money. If you requested a payout they banned you from posting in the forum so you couldn't point out to everyone else that you weren't getting paid. If you opened a ticket about it they claimed to have put your payment right to the back of the queue.

Eventually the FBI got involved they had fucked over so many investors. That's when you know your in the shit.

I'm not trying to be a dick, I'm trying to help you as you suggested. Pull your investment out while you can and place it in something else.

Limited Edition - August 13, 2014, 11:52 am

(Aug 13, 2014 09:14 AM)53M4PH0R3 Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Don't jump down my throat when I say this.

ALL bux sites stop paying eventually. I wouldn't put much of your time or cash into this. I used over 20 different bux sites when they were first around and all of them picked up and fucked off with everyone's money when they realized the financial model behind them simple isn't viable.

There were two that were really high profile, neobux and onbux.

Neobux, which is probably the most reputable, cut its payouts to about a tenth of its original model citing the fact that it was the only way the site would be profitable and people lost shit loads of money.

Onbux just plain picked up and fucked off with every ones money. If you requested a payout they banned you from posting in the forum so you couldn't point out to everyone else that you weren't getting paid. If you opened a ticket about it they claimed to have put your payment right to the back of the queue.

Eventually the FBI got involved they had fucked over so many investors. That's when you know your in the shit.

I'm not trying to be a dick, I'm trying to help you as you suggested. Pull your investment out while you can and place it in something else.

I'm glad I read this. I've always ignored peoples advice to start up simply because the profit is shit on these sites. I had a spare couple of hundred and thought about starting, I guess you just saved me $200-$300, thanks! +1 !!

Joey Pirtz - August 13, 2014, 12:04 pm

(Aug 13, 2014 11:52 AM)Limited Edition Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I'm glad I read this. I've always ignored peoples advice to start up simply because the profit is shit on these sites. I had a spare couple of hundred and thought about starting, I guess you just saved me $200-$300, thanks! +1 !!

Honestly, take it from someone who got burned on maybe $200 or so after frantically pulling out all of the investments I could.

Most bux sites think its easy money sharing a proportion of the profits of ads with users and fail to factor in the sheer amount of cash it takes to detect click fraud.

There are safer ventures you'd be better putting your money into.

mafai44 - August 13, 2014, 12:54 pm

I was with probux, I invested a little over $1,300 and was cashing out $40 daily consistently and they suspended my account after a few cash outs and I wasn't even doing anything wrong.

Joey Pirtz - August 13, 2014, 1:01 pm

(Aug 13, 2014 12:54 PM)mafai44 Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I was with probux, I invested a little over $1,300 and was cashing out $40 daily consistently and they suspended my account after a few cash outs and I wasn't even doing anything wrong.

Sorry to hear that dude. Unfortunately most bux sites realise that its much more profitable screwing over their users rather than staying on the straight and narrow.

Most of them are also in countries renowned for lack of extradition. eg. Onbux was a registered company in Brazil. There is therefore little chance of prosecution.

Limited Edition - August 13, 2014, 4:19 pm

How much do you think it would cost to set up a site of my own 'scambux' for example? Seems like its a very profitable idea.. lol

Joey Pirtz - August 14, 2014, 1:56 am

(Aug 13, 2014 04:19 PM)Limited Edition Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) How much do you think it would cost to set up a site of my own 'scambux' for example? Seems like its a very profitable idea.. lol

I was actually thinking a similar thing but with a twist. Buxsites have been done to death all over the web.

Here the twist.

Creating iOS and Android apps to deliver the ads. Its a massive and totally untapped market.

1. Your average phone user isn't as savvy as your average web based buxsite user.

2. They are more likely to click ads as they can do it anywhere. They could do their ads whilst taking a sh*t if it took their fancy.

I'm seeing dollar signs gents $$$

This is exactly the type of thing I'm talking about here:

<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=4389529>

Same old method, different approach.

yoghiHD - August 14, 2014, 2:38 am personally i didn't invest nothing into probux.

Now, after 1 year i have 200rr , normal user, and my balance is 80$ now.

But i have already withdraw something like 20$.

Of course you MUST save some money into probux to autopay yur referral. DON'T withdraw ALL your money or you are fucked up.

I think now you lose something like 30rr but keep the other 70 !

Probux is a small income but request a very small work and little time.

Good luck.