Thread: Valium for Anxiety

Leostraza - August 14, 2014, 8:06 pm

My friend claims he takes Valium, a really strong anxiety fixer.

He says this bottle holds 60 pills and he's got 2 refills before December 13 of 2013. Is this not fake? (Image or story)

It's 2014 bro. Drugs like that aren't exactly hard to get. Tell your doc you've got anxiety problems, and you usually got em.

It's sad how easy it is to get a drug like Diazepam (Valium) or any Benzodiazepine in general when you say you have anxiety. Add a shit doctor in the mix and your destined to become addicted to it in no time (Enjoy Withdrawal >:)).

Anywho,

5mg is about right. Theirs 2,5,10 mg pills. They are pretty small pills usually.

So that bottle could easy hold 60. Notice it says, "twice daily as needed". Usually they make sure you have enough for 30 days when you have repeat prescriptions.

Not sure why he would need such a long lasting Anti-Anxiety drug (it's half life is like over 2 days) and the fact he has 2 refill is very odd. That's 180 pills (aka 3 months). Those drugs should not be used for more then 3-4 weeks.

That's one messed up doc if you ask me (no one did! :P).

Meh.. Hopefully this does not end badly (which it probably will).

Nah, I was just wondering if they were actually real.

Like does he still take them or are they way passed their date (they should be since he got them refilled in 2013 or whatever).

He keep using the whole Valium thing as a "cool guy" excuse.. "I'm going to take my Valium" "I don't have my Valium so let's not do that stupid thing"

He wants to look cool.

Or maybe he really does have anxiety and just doesnt want to have a panic attack while doing something stupid haha!It is not fun to have a panic attack and i would say it would stop me from doing something stupid if it made me anxious!
