This is a very simple method on how to get into cell phones. If you know what cell provider your victim is that could help but if not don't worry it's simple. To start you need to call your victim like normal and let it ring until you hear the answering service say "Please leave a message after the beep...blah blah."

On AT&T cell phones you need to press the * key just after you hear the phone stop ringing, you have about 5 seconds to press the button.

If not an AT&T phone press the # key instead.

Once that is complete it will tell you to enter a password, usually 1234 or 1111 about 60% of the time.

Oh and for hacking home answering machines you can just press random numbers in any order, the manufactures who makes the phone ONLY LISTEN FOR THE CORRECT KEYS, basically if the password was 1234 and you hit 12233442335 it would call it correct because you hit the keys in order... Great security.

Another tip if someone hasn't setup their voicemail use a caller ID spoofer with their number the same you're calling, that will trigger the voice messaging setup. Have fun!
