Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: I want to start making money online. Where to start?

Dongly19 - August 20, 2014, 10:12 am

So, as you've read in the title. I want to start making some money online. I just need a push in the right direction.

I don't have super amazing photoshop and graphical design skills but it's somewhere to start.

In my opinion, my best bet would be trying to sell my skills of PC repair and troubleshooting. But, let's be honest. You can get those kinds of services ANYWHERE for free. HackForums whitehat section for example.

I am willing to put in the time to learn a skill. Can someone just be kind enough to teach me the ways around and what types of skills people are needing on the internet lately?

Limited Edition - August 20, 2014, 11:11 am

Maybe you should check out fiverr and see who's making lots of money, see what service they provide and learn the skills needed for that service.

If you learn website development then you could charge people a fortune for a website, I know companies have paid a buddy of mine £200 for a website that took him just over 30 mins to put together. Another idea is if you could design your own templayes, I know there are many free website template sites but none of those sites will actually listen to a customer and design the template they want, instead they just mass produce templates and charge a low fee or free.