

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: What is violating?

Niely - August 22, 2014, 12:57 pm

Hello

In the Help Docs states that users may not violate/offend other users.

But is saying that everyone should ignore a specific user also violating (in your usertitle)?

Example:

"Ignore USERNAME"

I saw this a lot last time and was just wondering. :)

Thanks for reading,

Niely

SoulZeh - August 22, 2014, 1:01 pm

I would class that as offending another user, no one should pin point someone if just one user has a problem with that user, it's there problem not everyone elses.

Niely - August 22, 2014, 1:04 pm

^Okay thanks. :)

The answer I was looking for.

SoulZeh - August 22, 2014, 1:10 pm

(Aug 22, 2014 01:04 PM)?Niely Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) ^Okay thanks. :)

The answer I was looking for.Happy I could help.

But yea, you should probably close the thread to stop the same answer being posted.

Roger Waters - August 22, 2014, 1:12 pm

It is a bad idea to ask or hint at ganging up on another member for no reason at all, so don't do it. If you have a problem with another user then just put them on your ignore list, then you won't see their posts anywhere on the site. Staff can and will take action on this, so you are better off not doing it at all.