Thread: Bratwurst and Veggies

Omniscient - August 23, 2014, 5:45 pm

For dinner tonight I'm cooking up some Bratwurst and veggies (mushrooms, bell peppers, tomatoes, onions) in the Lodge Cast-Iron Skillet that a member sent to me as a gift. I've cooked on it a couple times already.

This looked so damn good I couldn't help but to post it.

Chocolate isn't German.

It was discovered in Central America.

Yes but in your first post you said "I don't like any German food, except chocolate, implying that chocolate is German when it is not.

Yeah I'm sure there is chocolate in Germany but does not mean that's who invented it.

That seems really good. I love Cast Iron Dutch Ovens. You can use them for almost anything and very easy to cook with weather you are cooking inside with a oven or outside with coals.

Actually, Bratwurst, if you want a genuine German meal you use Sauerkraut. Mustard too, combination. I know German cooking very well and Sauerkraut blended with the taste of any kind of German sausage is the best but his adding all those veggies is great too. I no longer eat any meat though. I'm Vegan.

How exactly did it explode? Was there fire? And what even where you trying to cook that could explode.

It was a desert, perhaps a pie, can't remember. It's been a month or so. No fire.
