Mr. Monkey - August 26, 2014, 11:45 am

Baghead - August 27, 2014, 11:58 am

Thanks, I used illustrator but no tablet. Just used a brush pen on paper then imported that to illustrator and pentooled over it.

cortz - August 27, 2014, 12:01 pm

With so much detail on the end strokes, I'm surprised you didn't just use image trace.

Image trace never comes out smoothly

I didn't use a tablet for this, just a mouse

SZPZ - August 28, 2014, 4:45 pm

Kinda wanna get illustrator again because of this, good work i suppose!

Doxicity - August 28, 2014, 4:48 pm

This actually looks really sick.

How many Rupees for a blue/purple one?

zyxl - August 29, 2014, 4:51 am

I like it, nice work you did. But I want to give some feedback.

The C in Clique does not fit the other letters.

And the A in Baghead also doesn't fit.

Try to let them fit more with the other letters. This will make it even better!

Twisted Sister - August 29, 2014, 4:58 am shit man these are pretty cool! do you think you can do one for me, if i gave you the details?

Neurility - August 29, 2014, 2:37 pm

you could the that with a mouse, over draw with the pen tool the letter and apply stroke, in illustrator there are brush strokes also so they give that effect of being panted

thanks, its pretty much the method that all designers use for lettering chances are if you see a script logo it was made with a brush pen
