Thread: Looking for rat sources. All possible. The more the better.

IAmNotHere - August 29, 2014, 8:37 am

Hello hf,

I want to shutdown my internet tonight and want to ask, if all of you can share as much rat sources as you can.

Here is my question: Can you give me links to rat sources you have?

This is what I already have:

- Albertino RAT
- jnRat
- njRat
- Fkn0wned RAT
- xRat
- Simple-Rat
- Zombie Rat

I don't even no, if there are more sources, but I would like to know more about data transfer routines and encryptions schemes used in data transferring.

Do you have rat source I didn't named I would ask you, if you maybe can share the project source with me. Doesn't need to be private, public is also very appreciated.

If you know what I am talking about: Can I also be advised in which of the sources I already have to look at. Not which is the best rat, but which ones would make me get the most common view about my question.

Happy hacking to all.

Earn - August 29, 2014, 8:40 am

Why? So you can skid from them, add a new GUI & sell it as your own? Only reason I can think of for why you want a shit load of Rat sources...

Your name is Earn. Not really a strange answer from a person with your name, but this is not what my thread is about.

As I wrote in my thread. I want to look at or study as much different sources. And I can do this offline. If I have sources I don't need internet to read them.

What does my name have to do with anything? Also, you know for a fact that you are just going to skid all of the code & then try to sell it as your own Rat. If you say you are learning from the source, you don't need all of them sources. You only need one. Now fuck off & stop expecting us to spoon feed you.

You don't know what you are talking about. If you ever build your own rat, you didn't learn or study first? Just out of the blue you had a fully working rat on your pc? Wake up man.

I don't rip code and copy and paste into my code.

I know, if you start you can learn from youtube.

Since I assume here is a little more upgraded code, since I am on a coding forum. I can learn and want to invest some time learning form, classec, modules, resources and the rest.

I read "free palestina", I read "believe in God" and more. I didn't hack 1 single member here, I don't know who I am talking to. It doesn't matter, but we are communicating.

Fish isn't bad, unless it's rotten.

This is a good site and I can google. I am a member here, I read things about sites insulting each other, I don't know what going on and who I am talking too, but I managed too create FUD codedom crypters. I came here a while ago and never coded. If I upload 10 MB I have hundreds of bots with my crypters, which gives me a quality indication of this site, and therefore I ask here.

Virusss isn't really my interest, but I can do simple vb.net and simple codedom by now. I like this and I want to learn more.

IAmNotHere - August 29, 2014, 9:47 am

No I am not. Still not 1 single source. If I could choose, I would rather know a bit who I am talking too. I read all kind off things about the internet, forums and the rest. If I know who I am talking too and I don't agree, I say, I am gone, but this is not a way of communicating. Talking to text's on a forum, where the text's aren't text's, but people replying and I have no idea who or what I say and what the impact is. Is this for fun, or is the word fun not really a fun word on this forum?

Add: If you insult me, I will insult back at least, no matter who you are. This shouldn't be a problem. A not correct insult can be replied with an incorrect insult back, at least. But the input was a question and not an insult to anyone here. And, if I am on a forum where my coding is way below the average member I also would like to know, then I can leave and don't make a fool of myself, and I won't make a fool of you even if you are 10 times better, because a reaction can create an explosion of the member replying.

I am also wondering if you're just translating to English or your autocorrect is failing you OR you're just really bad at spelling. Either way I get that you want to learn from reading source code but what most people here are worried about is you skidding the shit out of it. So really until you can in some form or another prove that you are going to use the sources here for something useful, not many people will support skids...

Can I ask why in the hell would you go offline, did you just launched a mistle from your pc, so now you are going offline so the NSA can't find you ? That's the ONLY reason that I can think of why YOU would go offline.

IAmNotHere - August 30, 2014, 1:44 am

I go offline, because of my slow/no internet. I asked my question, because I have nothing to do. I can read up a bit, no matter what the result is, online or offline. I have no intention on selling. I pay per hour for my internet and I don't have the equipment to normally go online. The NSA or NASA looking for me, you are not kidding me?

Im laughing so hard at this thread!

But OP: Since you already have all these sources you can make your own RAT because a RAT basicly connect and asks for functions so why would you need more?
Goodluck with your RAT OP!

Waffle - August 31, 2014, 5:35 am

God people, although it is entirely possible he could be trying to skid the code, it is entirely possible also that he wants to see how others coded RATs and let it help him learn how to do certain things that way. That is why with every subject other than programming, learning from others is praised. But people are so quick to accuse everybody of being a skid on here that it's impossible to learn anything.

As long as you are only leaking dead projects or opensource RATs and not products still being sold, what is honestly wrong with letting this user see some source code so that he can learn that way. I know that if I were going to learn to program a RAT, I would use youtube then move on to looking at the source codes of some RATs to check that how others do it is the same way as I would.

frawg - August 31, 2014, 5:52 am

I already was busy and I started with a non crypted source where I start crypting strings and bytes in the data transfers.

What's would you think is better: every single data crypted with a 2048 char RC4 or with a 256 char AES for example? Or is for every single known encryption/decryption routine a 1 byte modification enough to actually create a new unknown encryption/decryption, which passes all the known standards for temp?

I know this is impossible.

I can see that IAmNotHere is trying to learn, but all of the posters have too much bias. Especially Earn at the first posts, lol...
