Thread: The Grand Restructuring - Omnicoin v2 v2

Crypto™ - September 4, 2014, 7:37 pm

It's time to focus in on Omnicoin. The majority of the team has been inactive, so it's time to start anew. This restructuring actually started with the addition of MeshCollider to the team, and continues with a near complete restructuring of the team. The team will now consist of the following members.

MeshCollider
Abraham Lincoln (Welcome aboard!)
Doctor Blue
Crypto™
Omniscient (as always)

I'd like to thank all the team members, current and former, for their continued dedication to making this coin something amazing.

Also, the old, bloated sticky will be removed, and the service list will now be managed via a Github wiki.

What will this mean for users of Omnicoin? Nothing immediately, but hopefully, as it continues on, we will see this tighter focus on Omnicoin, and an increase in value and usability.

Stay tuned folks! We're just getting started.

This looks promising OP. Will be referring to this post quite often :)

Best of luck to the OMC team! :P

This sounds awesome. Glad you guys are changing things around, the github wiki should be a lot nicer too.

interested in joining the team I have marketing experience along with website design and all around I've been in the crypto sceen for a while...can also use social media to promote lmk if you guys need someone...Also have some coding experience but limited

Aceman - September 5, 2014, 10:12 am

Congrats to Abraham on joining the team. He's put in a fair bit of work and reacted very quickly when Hurr went rouge. I'm glad to see he's a part of the team as he's one of the few who truly wants to see it succeed.

Please let me know if there's any way I can be of assistance.

You did a great job guys, I am keen on what's going to happen next. Keep it up with the good work and warm welcome to Abraham Lincoln.

I appreciate the offer, but we're not exactly taking applications for the team. Abraham Lincoln and MeshCollider were both invited because of the autonomous work they did on Omnicoin unofficially. I've seen you around, but we only invite people after deliberation between the entire team.

I'm glad to hear that there's deliberation between the team in order to keep everything smooth and friendly. Two good pick ups with all the work they've done.

I've just bought two more ASICs specifically for mining/holding Omnicoin, and I look forward to seeing the coin improve.

People are helping out on their free time. There is no revenue or incentive to helping out (other than wanting to yourself). So if people lose interest, why keep the same team? It wouldn't make sense. You should be happy they refresh the team to ensure everyone is active and helping out.

All the devs want a good active coin. We are doing our best to make it into one. The thing that is holding us back is Omni's seemingly lack of interest right now. We are trying to keep the coin running until he starts to add more features on the site. The dev switches are required as old devs get bored of waiting for Omni.

If we ever reach that point, I don't think anyone is going to revive it a third time. We're not abandoning the coin and starting a new one, just trying to get back some attention.

Munch - September 9, 2014, 10:54 am

What will happen to all the current omc? I'm Hoping we keep it instead of downloading another wallet to restart.

Cmitch55 - September 9, 2014, 11:16 am

We'll thanks to @Ortek I'm going to be adding a decent amount of hashing power to Omnicoin...I really believe this community can make this coin work and become something big...we need ideas and thinkers...I'm willing to offer my extra time to the project I know you said you aren't taking on new devs but I'll do what I can...some of my ideas include

- *dice sites
- *android wallet
- *Proof of stake
- *encrypted messaging in the wallet
- *a marketplace that works inside of the wallet we are hackforums certain things that can't be sold on clearnet could be sold in the market built inside the wallet examples Warez, Programs, Hacking tools, etc

I have more ideas and I can make shirts as well and sell them for omnicoin my buddy has a screen printing company and I can make shirts with the omnicoin logo that says Hackforums unite and some quotes. Trust me I have alot planned for this weather im let on the team or not...I can learn c++ if it's needed I just want to be a part of this spidum - September 9, 2014, 12:35 pm

I am very happy to see this revitalization effort. I have been pointing around 1.5Mhs at omni for a few months now just out of support for the project. If I see some change and some promise I may point 60Mhs toward its success or maybe more. Ive got a lot of hashing power but im not going to waste it.

As has been said, we are not replacing the current coin. We are just refocusing our developments and the team is starting afresh in order to bring omnicoin back up to a better state. You current wallet is not being replaced, and you will not lose any of your coins.

If you understand correctly prizes of OMC goes down because someone wants to be down and make sell offers at low prices.

It's all about supply and demand. Supply is very high right now, so we're hoping to drive up the demand, and ergo the price. We've been discussing some awesome projects that will decidedly give Omnicoin a nice firm foothold.

Tell your friend to deposit BTC on Allcrypt. Make an sell order for 0.00000400 BTC per OMC and place 20k OMC. Buy them and omc-rates will show the last rate that is purchased on allcrypt and that will give OMC a big value. Like it was before 3 days. 2 guys bought 10k OMC each for price of 0.00000300 and the prices jumped.

That doesn't work, from the testing I've done you are required to buy from cheapest to most expensive so you would have to buy others OMC first. And anyways that would only be an artificial increase.

What if there are 5 sellers who sells OMC at 0.00000400 per OMC and 5 people buy 50k OMC in total. Then the price will definitely change up to 0.00000400 per OMC. I know from my own experience. When I first bought OMC there were other sell orders for a cheap price and I bought the medium one which was 0.000004. That was on 9/4. That period the price per was 0.00000400 per OMC, which was most expensive.

Well you may as well keep buying it all up then ?. It would be nice to see the price go up even more. But the thing is, if you stop, it will drop again. As Abe said, it is still an artificial price.

If I don't buy the price will stay the same and may drop just a little bit. But the most dangerous are these people who sell OMC for such a low rates like these ones.

Yes everybody knows that will increase the price, it's possible with even 2000 satoshis worth of OMC. The point Abe was making is that you cannot bypass the lower sell orders in order to purchase the higher ones.

How is it dangerous? It's their OMC and they can sell it for whatever they value it at. If they value it low enough to sell for those rates then they are allowed to do sell without feeling like they're doing something wrong.

My point was that too many people started complaining that the price of OMC is too low, I completely understand the fact that it's theirs OMC and they can sell at what price they want but it's still a 50-50 somehow is good somehow is bad.

What I mean (and what Aceman said) is if there is a sell for 200 satoshis, 300 satoshis, and yours at 400 satoshis, you have to buy up the 200 price, the 300 price, and then the 400 priced OMC. Yes, the price will be what the last trade was at, but you cant buy at a higher rate than the lowest seller without buying him out.

You can just buy 1 OMC for $1 and the price goes to 1:1. You have to buy out all the lower priced OMC first.

Also although last trade price is accurate for frequently traded currencies like OMC and LTC, it isn't at all accurate for low trade currencies. OMC-rates should really use an algorithm that weighs each trade based on it's value and amount to calculate the price.

Aceman - September 18, 2014, 4:55 am

I agree with Abe. You can buy 5-7 OMC and change the price of it. All it takes is the minimum order of 2000 satoshis.

Even so, giveaways probably limit that more than people just dumping the coin on their own. Sure, some people will just dump the coin as soon as they get it, but others will actually hold on to it. I'm not sure which would retain more value, but still, that'd be an interesting experiment with value.

Giveaways do not devalue BTC so they would not devalue OMC either. If anything giveaways would help to promote and spark interest with those who are not familiar with the coin. If they get more and more OMC they're more likely to actually look into the coin and possibly even get more involved in it.

BTC is a large currency. OMC is a small currency. Saying that you cant devalue BTC with giveaways doesn't mean you cant devalue OMC. OMC is much easier to manipulate.

Why would giveaways cause a drop in price? I see no reason for that to happen from people giving small amounts away. I understand OMC is much easier to manipulate but I was trying to express that giveaways do not devalue something. Gives more exposure to the point in my opinion.

I agree, I don't think they devalue OMC (they are just a lot of them now because OMC is devalued). But OMC and BTC can't be compared like that.

It was just meant to be an example. The same could have been said about giving any coin away.

The only way to save this coin is by forkin it another algo and implement POS to it...

We are currently developing some plugins for mybb and an advertising pack for outreach to other forums when the plugins are done.

Hooray, that sounds pretty promising. I'll keep holding onto most of my Omnicoin mining earnings, and will hopefully see the price recover with these new things that the Omnicoin team is working on.

Honestly, I'm not sure a whole lot can be done to fix the coin at this point. As I see it, people are hoarding large quantities desperately hoping the value goes up. The coin will never hit $1 per coin when people have so many coins each. It's just not practical to make thousands of people a few hundred dollars over night.

If it hit $1 coin I'd be rich. Unfortunately, I don't think it will reach that like you said. I hope Omnicoin can restructure though and rise once again.

It sounds a bit extreme, but how about abandoning OMC and create a OMC v2 with a different algo such as X13?

One: This is Omnicoin Version Two.

Two: If a Version Three is made, people will take it even less seriously than they take Version two.

There's plenty we can do to revitalize it. I'm never giving up on it, so you can count on OMCv2 being around for a long time to come.

The whole subforum is relatively abuzz with activity. Just keep your eyes on the [\[b\]subforum](#). We'll try and post updates here, but the subforum allows us to keep better organized as a whole. ?
