What is the communities view on 9/11?

I know it was a terrible moment in U.S. History and allot of people died. I am 16, I wasn't aware at the time that it was going on, I was only 3ish years old. So it doesn't really effect me in a big way. More of a "oh that sucks/is terrible" to put it in simple terms. Do anyone you HF members remember anything from it? (The older HF members)

Programming - September 11, 2014, 5:39 pm

I know that people make too much of a deal about it. No one even really mourns it anymore, people use it as a marketing excuse.

"RIP the people that died in 9/11, buy a new phone"

"Here's my song about 9/11 buy it and listen to it"

My marketing teacher even said this today, so I'm not just making it up.

Are you my father? XD (Programming) -> (Java Programming) Bahahahaha XD Sorry had to point that out.

That is true, in some aspects. It would impact me more if I had someone I was close to die in 9/11, but other than that nothing. I don't see that as a bad thing, i'm not the type of person to mourn over peoples death that I didn't even know. If I spent time mourning over peoples death, then I would do that every day.

Doctah - September 11, 2014, 5:42 pm

I really don't care anymore. It's not really something to care about.

Coton Pker - September 11, 2014, 5:47 pm

I was in 5th grade when it happened.

and I shit you not, when the teacher turned on the news.. I was like "ooh cool! a building is on fire!" and I got yelled at.

but at the time, I had no idea what was really happening... and since I feel like I'm old for HF, I feel like most the kids here don't even remember it happening... they just know what they've been told about it.

when all is said and done, it's just another blemish on the face of humanity... there's no reason to freak out about it every year.

eventually it'll die out as the generations change.... just like how nobody cares what day pearl harbor was bombed on.

True. Yea it becomes a "research" paper in school. Haha

I remember it well. It was the first time I've ever seen every channel showing the same thing on television. From cooking show channels to ESPN, they all were showing the towers. I remember being in school thinking the country was being invaded. My parents came and took me out of school that day. R.I.P. to those people in the planes and buildings.

iFckShadow - September 11, 2014, 5:52 pm

I remember being scared as hell cause my dad was on a plane flying for a business trip and when they were showing the passengers on the plane I was expecting to see my dad. I was so terrified but luckily my dad didn't show up on the TV.

In present days, it has been 13 years since this has happened. I feel that as a country we should move on. We can't stay in the past. We must move forward. No disrespect to anyone who lost family members or loved ones.

Dang man, sorry. In my Aerospace class we went over air-traffic stuff on 9/11, and they had to get almost all of the planes out of the sky within like 5hr I know it was more than 1000+ planes in the air and they all came down. Some crazy stuff. I believe on plane landed on a runway and couldn't take off from it because of weight and such things. (Just some knowledge on the air side of it hahaha) Don't quote me on the numbers though haha I don't remember half of it XD But it was an amazing act for the air traffic controllers.

I was 17 years old in my senior year of highschool. Several of my friends and people i knew signed up for the military right after that. We have been fighting in the Middle East ever since...

It is something I will never forget. We watched the second plane hit live on the tv in our classroom. People were crying...

It's sad to see the younger generations not give a fuck It's also hard to believe it's been 13 years ago... Time goes fast when you hit your 20s.

I'm sure people who lost loved ones in the attack don't even give a shit anymore, right?

I take it you do not live in the northeastern US and everything that happens far away is just a fairy tale to you, correct?

Also capitalism isn't just supposed to stop for a day because it's a day of mourning. You'd act like a little bitch if companies didn't say "rip 911", so don't complain when they do.

The 9/11 attacks have in no way directly affected my life, nor am I a hardcore 'murican' but I will still slap the ignorance out of any idiots around here.

Evanescence - September 11, 2014, 7:18 pm

I'm honestly sorry for the people that died or lost people that day but what it has turned into is complete bullshit. Everyone is using peoples lives to sell their shitty products and that's fucking stupid. People keep saying "Never forget" but they left out the last part "Never forget to buy this shit".

The Weeknd ?o - September 11, 2014, 7:18 pm

I really don't care, to be honest. Sure, they were innocent people dying for no reason, my condolences to their family and friends, but so many people die every single day, and no-one gives a fuck. And besides, they're in a better place now.

oRequiem - September 11, 2014, 8:38 pm

Well, it was a Conspiracy, if you really believe that terrorists did it, then you must have brain cancer. There were loads of proof and signs that it was a demolition and all a plan to wipe out a huge portion of the population and a reason to attack Osama Bin Laden. If you disagree with me, I can show you and attempt to prove it to you. I've always been studying on what really happened and I found all the answers. Maybe not all, but most of what really happened on 9/11/01. I was really young, so I obviously didn't see it happen or hear about it happening until I got older. At first I did believe it was terrorists, but it wasn't. I know it wasn't. I will prove it if you want me to :)

Heh. 'There was no plane'

There's parts all over the damn place.

Heh. 'This building is clearly behind the WTC'

It's actually next to and in front.

Plane was also traveling almost 600mph, I'm pretty sure it could do that to a building.

The planes that hit the WTC were both Boeing 767's, commercial airlines. Similar to ones you would ride. It isn't military.

thousands of people in NYC watched a plane hit the building...

there was totally a plane.

however, a plane hitting the upper-middle of a skyscraper can't cause the bottom to demo perfectly like it did.

(I don't give a fuck about "elevator shafts and jet fuel"... that's not physically possible) there was no plane at the pentagon though.... that was a missile, and even the people who worked there confirmed that.

The weight of the floors and burning fire from the building itself (not the fuel, the fuel doesn't burn hot enough, but plain old fire, can) caused it to fall half straight. It started going sideways after awhile.

demo charges at the base caused it to fall the way it did.

the lower floors also had to be oxygenated, because there was slag on the steel beams.

(which only happens when steel burns (not melts), in an oxygenated atmosphere)

No one mourns it; but we certainly can't forget it. If you forget it's going to happen again. So best to have these anniversaries and remember it than have more rag heads do more terrorism in our country.. or even internal terrorism.
