Thread: Why do you hate Apple? \(assuming you hate Apple\)

Water Aura - September 20, 2014, 11:24 am

I use Apple products and I dislike hearing people hate on it due to the culture behind it (hipsters and such) or being expensive cause none of those reasons are truly valid.

Revamp - September 20, 2014, 11:29 am

Apple is for people who wants something that works and looks nice.

Android phones are for people who want the best of the best and the capabilities to customize.

I don't hate Apple products, I just don't prefer it.

I own iPhone 4, iPad mini, iPod nano, iPod touch.

I currently use an HTC M8.

Avia - September 20, 2014, 11:31 am

There isn't really anything I dislike about iPhones besides how quickly they overheat.

Currently using a galaxy s5 with a iPhone 4s as backup.

sweatpants - September 20, 2014, 11:32 am

Because all their products are the same and have shitty designs

I completely agree with this user. I have an M8 as well. Apple products are for people who typically don't have the time to worry about the specifications and just want something that looks nice and works. Android clearly makes better phones although there is a certain crowd of people who do not want to spend time researching, therefore they will get what the crowd has and what is in the news spotlight. I have had multiple Apple products before such as the iPhone 5, the iPad, a MacBook and the whole thing and I couldn't really stand not being able to fully customize the phone.

Wellwhatsgood? - September 20, 2014, 11:33 am

I don't 'hate' apple. Although, their a company that takes advantage of their products and their spotlight with consumers. Their products are over priced, and over hyped. Their so overated, look at the iphone 6 launch, if someones seriously gunna spend that much money for that phone than i dont wanna live on this planet anymore xD

Angel Beats?? - September 20, 2014, 11:35 am

Basically the reason I hate apple is because they take advantage of people. All of their products are overpriced and because they put their name on it gullible people like yourself opt to buy their goods.

I agree with your opinion.

Though let me tell you, I've had a bad experience with Android phones.

I've had nothing installed on the phone other than Chrome, Kik, and some small game apps that I eventually removed.

It crashed 4 times, it's slow and unresponsive some times (I had to wipe the memory and "load" android on the phone twice.)

This may just be the phone's hardware issue but still...in some of the videos on Android phones the UI looks crappy and unresponsive most of the times.

Maybe because having a brand is better than buying crappy products like HP computers?

I mean many people don't want to search all over the internet for the same exact hardware for a lower price that may inevitably be cheap quality hardware.

Even if you find the same exact product for cheaper, good for you. Though I just didn't want to waste the time.

Premortal - September 20, 2014, 11:37 am

Why would I hate Apple? It's a company, I either buy their products or I don't. I try to prevent my relationships with businesses from becoming too personal.

I have had my nexus 4 for 2 years. Bought it for half the price of an iphone at the time and it has the same specs and features of an iphone 6. Does that not tell you anything?

Batteries are shitty

They make a new product every 2-3 months

Apple are overpriced shitty products, they have shit specs for their price, they look like horse shit, their products are slow cunts their operating systems and ios is a piece of shit, itunes is a gay cunt everybody and their fucking disabled nan has one, apple are power hungry jew bags, you have to pay £100 to just develop a fucking app, their phones are fucking unstable and break easily and did I mention they look like horse shit?

They never 'invented' anything, they steal designs and pass them off as their own, they jump on the fucking smart watch band wagon with a fucking rock and all of their fucking customers are retarded teenage girls and disabled chavs.

I wouldn't really say that Apple Products are shitty for their price without proof (I can't disprove it either). The OS is a variant of Linux so you're kind of saying Linux is shit too. Can't argue more about iTunes.

It may be true they never invented anything but why are they more successful than others then?

I could give less of a shit if their OS was a variant of linux. It still stands that mac os and ios are huge fucking pieces of wank.

I don't hate apple, Just don't feel that there products are Original, Although I own an iPhone 5C (Yes I know, Sh1t phone). I don't like iPhones. But I don't really care about customization, For me my phone has to: Allow me to text and call people, Watch youtube videos and surf the internet. Thats all I really want. And Games. But iPhone runs games pretty smoothly so. Works for me o/

I have to say, that is true for HTC, my friend had one and he used it for 2 days straight without charge.

But usually when my mom uses her iPhone (she uses it a lot during the day) it usually lingers at 15% from 6 am to 9 pm so it might be a process running on those phones.

iPhones are not that smooth either. My friend bought an almost new iPhone 4 not long ago and sometimes when he just scrolled through the apps it would freeze for like a second. The apps also ran pretty slow, so he ended up selling it again.

labroca - September 20, 2014, 1:07 pm

Well, you usually have two kinds of haters.. The iPhone[i] heaters, and the [i]Mac haters.

iPhone

There are many people who think their Samsung phones or their Android phones are better than iPhones, so they hate Apple Inc. for some reason. This is called healthy completion, and without it we would still be using iPhone 4S's. I'm personally an Apple fanboy.

MacBook & Other Products

Many Windows users feel their computers are superior to Apple products because the [b]cost less, have higher frame rate for MLG gaming quickscope, and rumors. (u cnt right klik on a mac!, u cant run .exe, microsoft office wnt work).

It's true, the GPU on the MacBook Pro and many other models suck (but we're not gamers, we're developers, artists, and more), but the overall experience of OS X is worth it-the design is marvelous.

The price, yes it's way overpriced, but I've decided to spend it on an Apple computer.. So what? You can't afford one to do your MLG quickscoping, that's my business not yours.

The quality of Apple products and the abundance of technical support (which is NOT outsourced to India by the way) is amazing, I've not had warranty for four years and they still replaced my entire keyboard for free (keys fell out). Plus it's just so beautiful, your average Acer or Toshiba notebook looks like shit. You can barley use the OS after it's been on for 15 minutes.

hacc - September 26, 2014, 8:02 pm

For me it is because they are a scumbag company who thinks they invented everything when they actually have invented very little. Every other technology company works together to move forward and create better and better phones where as apple is holding everyone back by arguing over how they should have the rights to "wedge shaped laptops" and crap like that. They sue other companies for designs they didn't even create, and meanwhile they stole the iPhone design from Linksys (http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Linksys_iPhone).

I also hate them because they assume all their phone users are extremely stupid and thats why they limit the phone so heavily.

Also Steve Jobs was an asshole.

I actually can't think of many companies I hate more than Apple.

Thats so awesome man! You can tweak any aspect of your phone and all you have to do is void your warranty and jailbreak it?

Androids have been able to do that since before 2012 without any jail breaking necessary. Honestly the people who complain about Android UI are the people who are too stupid to figure out how to customize the phone lol. I don't even know what people are referring to by the "Android UI" since there really isn't one, you can literally make your phone look like anything.

I dislike Apple products as they are $1,000 toys.

The computers and phones are focused more on apps and user friendliness than they are on computing and calling/texting.

Just my opinion.

That's why I use a basic phone and a basic laptop, they both do what I need them to do, which is minimal.

If you're looking for it to do more, and have more features, then by all means, Apple is fantastic. It's just not for me.

I don't think I'm stupid, I just think that Apple UI looks better and RESPONDS better than Android UI. Android feels like I'm touching plastic, Apple feels like I'm touching metal. (No I don't mean "feel" literally, it just seems much more responsive with the Apple OS.)

Yeah you're right about the warranty, I was just making the point that you shouldn't have to go through a jailbreak process prohibited by the phone manufacturer just to get customization when there are phones on the market that allow you do the same out of the box.

I can also understand your point. I have noticed some people's android phones are slower and less responsive than iPhones, although mine seems to be just as responsive.

Im pretty sure the galaxy s5 had a problem with over heating....

Not sure tho

I especially don't like the Samsung android phones. Maybe these are what I was thinking of when I said Android was less responsive?

The way I think about it: Android has all the bells and whistles but can have some errors and downtime, while iPhone is minimalistic and works almost all of the time.

I almost think the opposite. With an iPhone I am always running into problems. Even putting music on my old iPhone was a challenge since I don't use iTunes. Much prefer the drag and drop mp3 files into folder of Android.

Huh, weird. Yeah I really hate iTunes for music transfer, but I love it for music storage (I DJ).

I don't hate apple products I just think they are overpriced.

However I do own an iphone 4, also I do like how they are able to do aesthetics decently well.

Haggo - September 26, 2014, 9:23 pm

You could compare this argument similarly to which is better? Xbox or PlayStation.. It generally just comes down to preference or which one you got first. Then it goes down to how the quality of the product affects your opinion. If you've had bad experiences with one, you'll have a better one with the next product. Or if you've had good experiences with one, you generally stick with it and don't talk the next.

Every Android I've used has slowed the fuck down fast, but I do appreciate getting root access and customizing to my liking, but personally the best phone for me is a jail broken iPhone. And my Apple Watch does a lot for me.

SIM-3257834 - September 12, 2018, 2:17 pm

I find most apple fanboys to be more ignorant than any other community. For example did you know apple forces people to pay for their lighting license?

<https://developer.apple.com/programs/mfi/>

They can't use a open and free standard such as USB C because it won't make them money. This is a company who is worse for the consumer. Plus why doesn't apple want to support an open standard like RCS? Might because if done right it might actually kill iMessage?

Pikachu - September 12, 2018, 2:21 pm

Apple is nothing special you are just paying for the brand basically.. They may have "good cameras" but that doesn't mean there's androids out there with just as good or even better cameras. Then apple likes to pull that bs update to where your phone drastically slows down whenever they announce or launch the next generation up.

SIM-3257834 - September 12, 2018, 2:35 pm

O wow check it out, the new iPhones will still come included with a 5w charger. No quick charging/fast charging, you have to buy it from Apple or from someone else.

<https://www.macrumors.com/2018/09/12/apple-2018-iphone-5w-power-adapter/>

Plus why did they stop putting the 3.5 jack to lighting adapter? It literally cost them nothing but now at least they can force garbage lighting vs USB C. Nothing is worse when a company forces to bend to their standards so they can't leave.

LoveOverFear - September 12, 2018, 2:37 pm

Oh well.

I have neutral position but rather negative for Windows for some security things but ehh, that's windows it won't change.

Bchange33 - October 17, 2018, 2:16 pm

I mean there products are truthfully completely overpriced and not worth what they portray but that's pretty much with everything. I don't like Tim Cook coming out saying how he doesn't team up with the FBI basically lying to everyone who thinks he's telling the truth. In my opinion he's lying, I do like the design of there products tho. There's a lot of things we don't know behind the scenes but there just like every other billion dollar company.

Apple... All you are paying for is a popular brand.

There are many android phones out there that are wayy better than apple.

Apple likes to fuck it's customers over by purposely slowing down the old iOS/Phones whenever they release a new one, making their customers think "my phone is too slow looks like i need the new iPhone"

This was proved and showcased regarding battery performance. Once a phone hit x number on battery remaining, it'd throttle to keep functionality. While it slowed phones, it preserved the phones longevity by years. Needless to say, that issue was addressed.

I don't hate Apple. I own shares of Apple and support their product line. When I use my Apple products (iPhone, iPad, Macbook, AirPods, TV), I feel the seamless integration with one another. They have made something just work and that alone increases my productivity and effectiveness on a day to day basis. I don't hate Android. However, the push of software updates leaves me wondering: why would I use a phone that's software is continuously outdated? At least with Apple, I know the following:

Battery Life will remain consistent for the duration of the phone (from experience)

Transitioning between phone, iPad, MacBook is extremely seamless rendering work to be done anywhere at any time

Knowing updates are available and free and consistent

My privacy is supported and encouraged via products and services provided by Apple (even if this is a marketing tactic, I support it. It benefits me as a consumer)

My phone will work and 95% of the time without a single hiccup and perform the tasks I need done.

This argument is continuously made between Apple and its competitors. Most people who have had experiences with Apple and 'hate' them are either customers who used a product a while back and had issues / disliked the experience OR people who follow a crowd.

Even though apple is propitiatory I still believe it has some of the best possible device security against government

Android is much too vulnerable to malware and exploits

Linux would be a secure alternative to android minus the accessibility in all areas. Better than a blackberry.

Purgatory - August 15, 2024, 10:12 pm

I don't really care too much to micro analyze which device has better specs. I like what works, and if it doesn't work, I don't use it.

HOMODIN - August 15, 2024, 10:39 pm

Don't hate but extremely strongly dislike because:

- your device will most likely get bricked if you try to repair anything urself.
- you have to pay for apps that are free on Android.
- repairs are retardedly expensive.
- Apple makes their devices slower over time.
- Apples repair is super slow, the 3Gs that I had way back I "owned" for 3-4 months but I had it in use for less than 3 weeks of that time, it got stuck with the screen on and no button combo could get it rebooted and the battery lasted for ages in that state. The phone spent most of it's time in service, I sent it 3 times for repairs and after that I told them to keep it and canceled the contract.

- You can't customize Apple devices that much nor can you install anything that Apple doesn't approve of.

- The "quick menu" where you can disable bt, wifi etc doesn't actually disable anything, it just temporarily turns stuff off but it'll magically be turned back on again in the background (had this issue with an iPhone 8 that I was forced to use thanks to my work and all my clients have this issue too).

- they are retardedly expensive while the hardware and specs are not that good when compared with others.

- (this can be old info but it's still an issue that I had) iCloud reserved a bunch of space on the phone even when I didn't use iCloud, it just "reserved" 15Gb which I wasn't able to use so I was low on space all the damn time.

- getting anything moved from a portable Apple device to a normal PC requires Applications and shit on the computer.

...the list goes on, these are the first few things that come to my mind...

famoupo - August 16, 2024, 2:42 am
