It's not that good to advertise an unfinished forum. Same mistake like every other forum.

Oh and thanks for stealing my domain name Alex.

Eh leave it man.

Alright sorry for the short downtime, forgot a little something. We're back up and running. I'll be starting up with a paid to post for the first 1000-2000 posts.

Seriously, Linkz. Stop bitching over a domain, I came up with it; you refused the idea, me and Alex took it on. So please just leave the thread now and keep it clean.

First of all, you didn't come up with anything. You were the one who begged several times to make a shitty theme for you.

Oh and don't tell me what I have to do. I won't listen anyways.

We're done here.

We're done here. I facepalmed so damn hard, what do you advertise? You advertise making themes, I was looking for someone who I can pay to make a theme and I decided you. So stop bitching and move on with your life.

General.SX doesn't look like HF in any way whatsoever, nu-uh. It's definitely not a MyBB forum with a bunch of tabs and sections whose titles match nearly identical to HF.

Honestly, your lack of innovation makes it seem like a terrible place to be. You could also at least let me read threads without having to log in, I saw nothing interesting in your site and yet I can't do anything without registering. Quickest way to kick someone off your site.

But you don't get it, why would I go to your forum where I can be on HF (and considering you're advertising on HF...) where I have practically all the same sections but more content/activity? Honestly, the only incentive you have is you paying your users to stay active, and that's not a very sustainable business model in the long run (not to mention, there's just something wrong about buying your members). That's my 2 cent, take it how you will. I feel that if you want this to truly be successful, you should be more unique than "Here's a webpage with every section you can think of on this generic webpage with a generic theme on a generic etc..."

Drøm - October 18, 2014, 3:44 pm

Also OP you can't take criticism very well.. If you're going to run a site then you are going to have to get used to harsh opinions regardless of what users say.

There's a way to respond while "standing your ground", and there's a way to come across as a dick. Guess which one you fall under?

Yep, compeltely agree if this guy can't handle opinions and "stand his gorund" then he doesn't really deserve to own a website. Not a professional outlook at all.

Suggestion: Give your forum some structure. Having 'News, Updates & Announcements' and 'The Lounge' in the same category just looks too blocky.

How is it that when a member makes a joke they are a troll? That is just screaming out immaturity and unprofessionalism.

Your sites dead so it doesn't really bother me.
