I completely reworked the site to use javascript to handle audio and added ~200 songs. The song no longer loops audio, but shuffles through randomly with a simple visual loop. You can (currently) choose from 3 genres to listen to, with some having different visuals.

I'm not sure if you're currently working on it but I can't access the page. I've refreshed several times with no effect.

It's working on my end, so try again now. I edited the page to just choose from the number of songs currently available so there won't be any silence.

Songs were fine for me. The video almost wasn't playing, but after refreshing the page it was fine.

That would just be due to buffering. I'm not using the fastest hosting available, unfortunately.

Yeah they're new- the .moe suffix was only introduced recently.

severos - September 28, 2014, 6:52 am well, finding those new suffixes makes me believe the age of anime is coming soon, when google would turn into google.moe with anime interface XD

I'd suggest making the music/video roll in a side bar, while turning the website into some moe base with news/fan art/etc...

Bumperino to reflect changes to the site.
