Thread: Does ISIS have an "Official Website"?

Who Soup - October 1, 2014, 1:59 pm

Hey, I was wondering if the Islamic State group has an official website. If so have hackers attempted to breach it or take it down in any way?

If they do, it's probably ment to inform the world about actions, religion or war status. Whatever it's about, their purpose would be to reach people.

Means if there is any, it can be found here: <http://goo.gl/uHkhaN>

Regarding to your edit, "Islamic State group" is something else as the ISIS. The ISIS purely is a terroism group, in relation with al-qaeda

Why the fuck do you care about ISIS?

I feel like that the situation they have there reminds me of the medieval ages where it's just senseless fighting.

Your welcome

Wow dude great troll attempt 9/11 plane great.

On topic: No, ISIS (Islamic State in Syria) does not have a website because they are not focused on getting the peoples attention through words, they are focused on actions.

By that, I mean beheading people and claiming its to send a message and not just to behead someone.

I personally don't agree with what they are doing. I don't agree with the killing of children. Yes I agree it is senseless fighting, Maybe someone here could do something to end it. ?

Hacking wouldn't do shit towards them.

I'm just saying <_>, sorry if I'm being mean but it's just my thought on this.
