Thread: This site says they will multiply your BTC 10 times. Scam?

nymate - October 3, 2014, 5:42 pm

I've found this site as a PTC ad, I'm not sure if it is a scam or not. Anyone has experiences with them? Thanks for the answers in advance. ?

Of course it's a scam. Why would somebody multiply your bitcoin ten times? What do they gain out of the process? Why do you even have to ask a question like this? What happened to the phrase "if it's too good to be true, it probably is"? Do you have any common sense?

Eternal. - October 3, 2014, 5:44 pm

Anyone who promises financial gain that sounds too good to be true is going to scam you in most cases.

MyLittlePony - October 3, 2014, 5:45 pm

Of course it's a scam, look at some of the transaction logs.

nymate - October 3, 2014, 6:02 pm

I was also suspicious, but since I'm just recently discovering cryptocurrency's world I wasn't sure if it is possible or not. For the question what do they gain from the process, it says something like they multiply it 20x but they keep the half.

Thanks for the quick help anyway :)

Do not use this site, it is confirmed a scam.

severos - October 4, 2014, 5:44 am anything that gives you more than 3% for simple deposit a year is highly a scam (in my opinion at least, unless proven), what do you think of x10 a day then?

I already had a thread here warning about it (didn't try it but simply stated that it's scam with proof) but Omni closed it saying:

Code I just can't help but thinking OP is a childish fool for even 1/2 second believing this to be anything but a scam. Let alone coming here to tell us that it's one. DUH.if Omni reads this, hope you know why I made that thread by now, it was for the good of the forum members.

you can check my old thread stating why it's a scam here:

Do not use this website. It's 100% scam. Nobody will give you more then you give him, especially not 10 times more then you give. Be careful, there is a lot of scam websites on the internet. Think twice before you do something.

Cheers ?

Im really surprised that anyone even doubts about this, ofc its a bigass scam. Even if they said that they would multiply by 2 it would be questionable lol h4rdkor - October 4, 2014, 10:30 am

Shanks - October 5, 2014, 7:26 am

Kids think there are existing ways like this.. However it's not. If it sounds to good to be true, it's.

Azraelstear - October 6, 2014, 7:27 am

Holy mother of "lack of common sense" please help this lost soul.

Auxil - October 7, 2014, 11:12 am

No, this is not real at all. There are some sites where you can loan money to them, and they will return in 2x fold, but not this one. It's fake.

If you need some BTC, check my signature.

Apocryphon - October 7, 2014, 11:29 am

Can you just answer the question yourself?

Who would give you money without getting anything in return? :)

Oh i guess you know the answer, nobody :P

Regular Guy - October 7, 2014, 8:04 pm

My assumption - user is owner and trying to get attention, asks if it is a scam here.

Supervisor - October 7, 2014, 8:17 pm

A mod should lock this thread and remove the link before someone get scammed.

nymate - October 8, 2014, 5:41 am

I agree, the thread can be closed as my answer has been replied and I am not really interested in people telling me how dumb I am because I'm here to ask my questions and learn. Thanks for the answers.

Thomas Meme - October 8, 2014, 6:30 am bonjours_bonjours10 - October 9, 2014, 12:49 am

Cyber Saint - October 9, 2014, 4:36 am

It's obviously a scam, seriously? Why would you even ask?

Anyway, in the future - like so many other people said, if it's too good to be true it most likely is. Don't be stupid.

Is this a question? Think about it, how would they guarantee to multiply any amount of money by 10 in one day? ?

graymoon - October 10, 2014, 2:01 pm

In my country we say it's too good to be true

Jake Johnson - October 10, 2014, 2:05 pm

Uhm..... This obviously sounds way too good to be true.
